HOW THE HOTEL MEN ARE BOOMING OLD ORCHARD.

A little over a year ago the local hotel men got together and organized themselves into a Hotel Men's Association, with the idea that organization and coöperation would be beneficent of greater results. To-day practically every hotel man is a member and they are quick to realize its advantages. The season of 1913 was too well advanced to carry out much of a campaign. And so they prepared for the season of 1914, which is just opening. This spring they are spending nearly $1400 in newspaper advertising throughout the eastern part of the United States and Canada and taking in the following papers: The Times, World, Evening Mail, and Brooklyn Eagle in New York, LaPress and Star in Montreal, The Ottawa Citizen, The Toronto Globe, The Boston Transcript, The Hartford Times, The Worcester Telegram, The Buffalo Express, The Philadelphia Ledger, The Philadelphia Record, The Baltimore Sun, The Washington Herald, The Pittsburgh Press, The Cleveland Plain-Dealer, The Chicago Record-Herald, The St. Louis Globe Democrat, and the New Orleans Times Democrat. For other purposes, such as booklets and miscellaneous advertising, they are spending enough to bring the sum total almost up to $2000.00.

For the first year this seems an excellent campaign and the results are now beginning to show up. They hope to enlist the merchants and business men more so that next year they may do something better. Mr. Chas. Campbell of the Hote' Vesper is president of the association, while Mr. F. H. Libby of the Everett Hotel is secretary.

THE NEW BALL TEAM.

Old Orchard will open the base ball season here on Tuesday, July 7, with an all-star team from the Mill league of Biddeford and Saco as the opposing club. The team this year will be under the management of L. C. Lunt of Dover and will be registered with the A. A. U. as a strictly amateur club. The make-up of the team is not wholly determined on as yet. Of the men who played last year Chapin of Wesleyan will catch and Haley, the old Wesleyan star and now athletic director at Milton Academy, will cover short. Clifford, the old Bowdoin captain, will be at first and Smith of Williams at second. In the outfield White of Harvard will be the only old player. Whitney of Harvard and Blinn of the Allen School, together with Lunt, will look after the pitching and with Chapin behind the plate should make a strong combination.

The field at Seaside Park is being put into condition, the diamond will be skinned and filled in, and the prospects for good fast base ball at Old Orchard this summer look bright. The team is 100 per cent. stronger than the organization of last summer, has a good hustling manager, and is composed throughout of college men playing for the fun of the game and should put up fast, clean base ball. Turn out and help the boys out. They'll appreciate your patronage.

AT SEASIDE PARK.

Seaside Park is again under the same able management.

It will no doubt prove an amusement place worth while and be a source of entertainment to our summer visitors. The Prancing Ponies, the Scenic Railway and the merry-go-round will help to amuse and entertain at all times. The visitor can also try his luck at the Shooting Gallery, or at the Teddy Bear Game, also the Knife board and "Spot the Spot" may prove a temptation. However, the visitor may choose his particular favorite from one or a number and be sure to get a good run for his money at all times. (Advt.)

FRA ELBERTUS SAYS.

He who imagines that modern advertising is the exploitation of the public is a bicuspidati diplidocus and would do well to come out of his comatose state and currycomb his convolutions.

Advertising is the education of the public as to who you are, where you are, and what you have to offer, in way of skill, talent or commodity.

Let the truth be known about your business.

The only man who should not advertise is the one who has nothing to offer in way of service, or one who cannot make good.

All such should seek the friendly shelter of oblivion, where dwell those who, shrouded in Stygian shades, foregather gloom, and are out of the game.

Not to advertise is to be nominated for membership in the Down-and-out club.

The idea of the "ethical dentist" who refrains from advertising was originally founded on the proposition derived from the medicos that advertising was fakery. This view once had a certain basis in fact, when the only people who advertised were transients. The merchant who lived in a town assumed that every one knew where he was and what he had to offer. The doctor the same.

This no longer applies. We are living so fast, and inventing so fast, and changing so fast, and there are so many of us, that he who does not advertise is left to the spiders, the cockroaches and the microbes.

The fact that you have all the business you can well manage is no excuse now for not advertising.

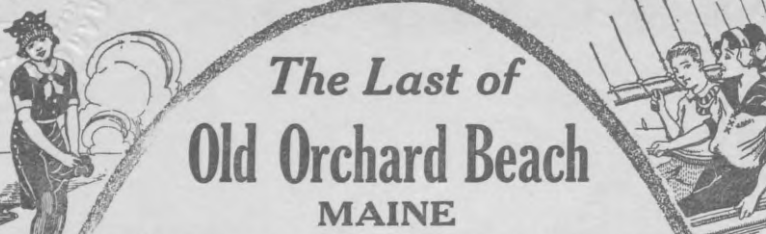

The reputation that endures, or the institution that lasts, is the one that is properly advertised.

Advertising is fast becoming a fine art. Its theme is Human Wants, and where, when and how they may be gratified.

It interests, inspires, educates—sometime amuses—informs and thereby uplifts and benefits, lubricating existence and helping the old world on its way to the Celestial City of Fine Minds.—ELBERT HUBBARD.

The Last of Old Orchard Beach
MAINE

With the Development of "Surfside"

The last remaining tract (with one exception) on the most famous beach in all the world, will be gone. Do you realize what this actually means? It means that you now have your last opportunity to ever purchase a plot on this famous beach at a reasonable price. Hereafter those owning plots will own a monopoly. You know the law of supply and demand regulates prices. For shore front properties you have an increasing demand and a decreasing supply. You cannot make any more of it, so the only possible result is higher prices.

The purchase of a shore lot is the safest and sanest investment on earth. You simply cannot lose. "Old Ocean guarantees your investment."

A few dollars invested now on our monthly payment, non-forfeiture plan will help make you independent in old age. Then, too, it is an investment that can be used. You do not have to die to win. It returns you "DAILY DIVIDENDS" in health and wealth.

You can camp on your plot as soon as first payment is made.

A bungalow will return you 15 per cent on your money. Pretty good interest. It beats savings banks or railroad stocks.

Our prices range from $250 upwards for lots 50x100 feet. Terms are 10 per cent down and 2 per cent monthly. Better write today for booklet.

(Est. 1913.)

(Est. 1900.)

Published weekly by the Surf Echo and Mirror Publishing Companies, Old Orchard, Maine. The office is located over the Old Orchard Post-office, telephone 14-12.

It is the aim of the paper to chronicle the social gossip, interesting events and general news of Old Orchard, Grand Beach, Pine Point, Ocean Park, Ferry Beach and Biddeford Pool.

Correspondence is desired, but the signature of the sender is requested merely as a matter of form to insure its reliability. The names of correspondents, however, will be treated in confidence unless otherwise desired.

PERCY R. RICH, Editor.
F. A. ELLIOTT,
Business Manager.

Welcome, Summer visitors.

The Old Orchard MIRROR-SURF ECHOES greets you.

Consolidation does not mean conglomeration.

The forest fire menace has already burned its first toll this season.

At this time let us say a word of greeting to the local business man and all those who are interested in the welfare of Old Orchard, and let us wish him and they a most prosperous summer season.

The SURF ECHO and Old Orchard MIRROR will at all times endeavor to promote the best interests of the community. It is a medium of publicity, if you know of some way in which the community can be benefitted, we trust that you will offer us the suggestion in the form of a letter that we may publish it. It makes no difference to us what your effort deals with, so long as it is an honest opinion it will be greatly appreciated.

If any outside person should suggest that Old Orchard was not the best place on earth to spend a vacation, we would say that he was mistaken in quite vitrolic language. But we are not so bigoted as to say we are not in need of improvement for to do so would place our veracity at zero. The future of Old Orchard seems assured as one of the great watering places of the country by its ever increasing popularity. Among its greater needs is one for a very large and expensive hotel on the Sea Shore lot about which we will speak at a later date.

The merging of two newspapers is not an unusual operation. We cite with interest the triple alliance of the Chicago Record-Herald-Tribune, the Boston Traveller-Herald, the Lawrence Sun-American, and now request you to note the combination of the SURF ECHOES and the Old Orchard MIRROR. Pardon us, dear friend, not for a moment would we have you think that we were comparing our humble selves with some of the greatest enterprises in the country. We will use the comparison for advantage only within the limits of our sphere of operation, the vicinity of Old Orchard.

The project was for a common good, not merely for the mutual betterment of those closely connected with the publications. The results, we believe, will be appreciable to the reader. We are now able to render a news service of greater value and offer to our subscribers as varied a line of advertisements as have ever been arranged by a publication in this town.

MANY NEW FEATURES ON PIER THIS YEAR.

Outdoor "Movies" have certainly made a hit with the people in Old Orchard. This novel feature of entertainment inaugurated this year by the management of the Pier is being talked of all over town. One can sit out on the end of the pier and watch all of the latest photo plays and listen to the latest popular airs played by the Philharmonic orchestra, which has entertained the summer folks for so many years.

Those who do not like the stuffy halls, cannot complain about this system. One has the cool breezes of the Atlantic to fan them, and your eyes that have often become tired looking at pictures in a darkened hall, will never feel tired because you are sitting only under the light of the moon. This will be appreciated by many before the season is long started. If you haven't seen these pictures take a walk out to the end of the pier and take the show in.

Then for the children, there is a Punch and Judy show. And the old folks will enjoy it, too. This is outdoors, also.

Dancing? There are certainly a good lot of terpsichorean artists in Old Orchard. All of the latest dances and the old ones, too, are being enjoyed daily. "All aboard for Dixie" as played by Joe Martin's celebrated organization makes a dandy one-step, and "Nights of Gladness" and "Dreaming" are two good hesitations. The floor was never better.

Next week in addition to all before mentioned, there will be three big vaudeville acts. Just think this all over. Can you beat it? All for 10 cts. in the afternoon and 15 cents at night. The pictures are changed every day, so you can go out there and see the latest films and enjoy the cool breezes day after day and see something different. If you enjoy fishing, fish from the end of the Pier.—(Advertisement)

Summer Bathing.

Bathe with reason in summer as well as winter. Do not drop your warm baths and indulge only in cold plunges. You will be the more comfortable for an occasional hot bath. And remember that a very cold bath, either in ocean, still water or a tub, can bring on cramps and serious intestinal troubles if taken too soon after a hearty meal.

Another folly is depending upon sea bathing, when at the shore, for cleansing purposes. Sea or lake bathing is merely a sport, and the body should always be cleansed in still or fresh water after a dip of this sort.

The average man sponges off his body with the bucket of water left in each tiny bathhouse after his plunge. The average woman rubs off the salt water and dresses without bathing because she says fastidiously that she does not like the looks of that "nasty bucket." Continued bathing in salt water, unrelieved by a fresh sponge, is not good for the skin.

In summer a warm, not hot, bath at night is most cooling, and the bath in the morning should be only a quick sponge with cool, not cold, water. The woman who dresses in the middle of the afternoon or just before dinner and bathes then should not bathe just before retiring also. The quick morning sponge and the moderate afternoon or evening bath are quite sufficient for each twenty-four hours.

The Vacationist's Eyes.

If there is one time when the eyes are more severely taxed than at any other it is during summer months. Free from the whirl of business or social affairs, the fair vacationist grasps the long sought opportunity to indulge her love of reading or delicate embroidery.

Quite generally she reads while reclining in a comfortable hammock under the trees or stretched at full length on the porch or bedroom couch. "I know it's not right," says one independent girl, "but it's my vacation, and I'm going to be comfortable."

A noted oculist, who considers the happiness of a patient as well as her physical good, insists that there is no harm whatever in reading in a recumbent position if the head is well bolstered up and the light shines on the book over the left shoulder. Nothing is more fatiguing to the eyes than attempting to use them when a strong light is pouring straight into them. The habit of reading in the hazy light after sundown is equally injurious.

Simple Hair Tonic.

The following hair tonic is recommended as stimulating and nourishing. It will bring new life and blood to the hair bulbs. Before commencing treatment well wash the scalp with warm soft water and a good shampoo. Take twenty grams of quinine sulphate, two drams of spirits of rosemary, two drams of tincture of cantharides, one and one-half drams of dilute acetic acid, three and one-half ounces of water. Combine these and rub freely into the scalp and hair every day. The diseased and worthless hair will probably continue to drop out for a week or two; then the new growth should begin to make speedy progress.

THE HALF BELT.

A Novel Accessory to the Smart Summer Suit.

A little accessory that can be bought to add a smart touch to a homemade or old frock is always welcome.

Perhaps that is one reason for the popularity of the neckwear of this season and last. Frilling and ruchings of tulle and net and lace transform many simple frocks, and the addition of one of the new organdie collars to a staid serge dress takes it out of the realm of dowdiness.

So it is with a chic belt that can be had in the shops.

It is really only a half belt, for the back of the skirt or coat, to reach from hip to hip.

It is made in many combinations. One that is very attractive is made of gray suede, cut out to show three or four pieces of Japanese silk crape printed in blue and red. This little belt is fitted with three or four pockets on the underside so that it can be easily fastened to as many little balls sewed on the skirt.

Other belts are made of suede and kid of different colors, some of them with cutout designs over white kid, some of them decorated with small colored glass spikes or nail heads of brass.

They are especially nice, these little belts, on the back of a colored linen or duvetyn or other summer skirt, and they can also be used to very good effect on a summer jacket.

Refreshing the Vacationist.

For the woman vacationist who has no bathroom a huge bowl or, better still, an old fashioned foot bathtub is essential. With the aid of either of these she can sponge in cool water in the morning and in warm at night.

If her skin is sluggish and she has a generally rundown feeling in hot weather let her try the vinegar bath. For this allow a pint of pure cider or wine vinegar to two gallons, which is about what is needed for the average sponge bath.

Put this into the basin and stand in the tub. Use a large sponge and fill it sopping with the mixture of water and vinegar. Close your eyes and press this to your face.

Repeat this several times and then proceed the same way, pressing the sponge to the base of your brain and on your shoulders until your body has been literally showered with vinegar and water. The body is then patted, not rubbed, dry, and the patient should lie down and rest for awhile.

Freckle Remover.

A bleaching cream that will help to remove freckles requires two ounces of pure strained honey added to half an ounce of glycerin, a dram and a half of citric acid, half an ounce of rectified spirits and three drops of ambergris. Melt the honey, but do not let it get hot; beat it into the glycerin while the citric acid is dissolving in the spirits, add the ambergris to the latter; then beat the two mixtures together, using a silver fork. Use nothing in the way of metal in the preparing, a china bowl being the best for the beating, and keep in small porcelain jars.

Skin Bleaches.

In using lemon juice to clear the skin of blemishes a cold cream must always be applied after the juice has dried on, otherwise the acid causes an unpleasant roughness, which ruins the skin. Cucumber rind rubbed on is a good bleach, but this, too, makes the skin rough, and cold cream should be applied after using the rind.

made extensive repairs on her cottage, the Myrtle, on Old Orchard avenue. She expects to entertain guests from Montreal, July 1st.

Mrs. Steven D. Morse, who has been stopping at her cottage on Atlantic avenue for two months, has returned to her home in Danville, Vermont.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Baily of Tilton, N. H., have arrived at their cottage on Atlantic avenue, for the summer. They have as guests Miss Evelyn Baily of Tilton, N. H.; Miss Lena Douglass of Winthrop, Mass.; and Mr. Chas. Aiken of Newport, N. H.; all graduates of Tilton Seminary this year.

The Pinehurst cottage on Atlantic avenue is occupied this summer by Miss Alice Fogg and mother of Saco.

The Evelyn cottage on Old Orchard avenue, has been taken for the summer by Mr. L. C. Briggs, Jr., and family of Boston.

Mr. Geo. Clark of Somerville, Mass., has bought a house on 10th street. Mr. Clark and family will occupy the cottage until the first of October.

Miss Effie Carle of Saco is occupying her cottage, the Woodlong, on Central Park avenue for the summer.

The following are stopping at the Reynold's cottage on Atlantic avenue: Mr. and Mrs. John J. Hellen and daughter, Miss Annie, of Auburn, Me.; Mrs. Geo. T. Pike, also of Auburn and Dr. Belle M. French of Butte, Montana.

NEW HOUSES AND IMPROVEMENTS.

During the past Fall, Winter and Spring many new houses have been built and improvements made to the hotels and houses already constructed.

Joseph Goodkowsky has made an addition of about forty rooms to the Lafayette Hotel and has otherwise improved his property on the sea wall.

The Avenue House, which was formerly located on the corner of Barton street and Grand avenue, was moved a distance of about two hundred yards to the lot at Barton street and the sea wall, which is next to the Lafayette Hotel. The change is a marked improvement for that locality. Upon the spot where the Avenue House was located Joseph Rodgers of Biddeford has erected a large house of fourteen rooms and all modern improvements.

Harry W. Ricker, Chief of the Fire Department, erected a cozy bungalow on Westland avenue, for which he immediately found a ready purchaser.

One of the best buildings to be erected was recently completed by Mr. Seth F. Googins. It is a handsome seven-room brick bungalow, located at the corner of Cedar and Washington avenues.

Mrs. Rose H. Fuller of Auburn has moved into her new bungalow at the corner of Second street and Union avenue. It has five rooms and all modern improvements. She has named it the "Batesina".

On the corner of Second street and Fern avenue a new bungalow has been built for Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Bailey of Falmouth, who will make their summer home there.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Whitney have purchased the new house of Fort Hill avenue, which was built by Mr. M. E. Hill. They will make their home there.

Mrs. M. J. Creelman of Ipswich, Mass., has had built a beautiful seven-room and bath bungalow on the Ridge off Fort Hill avenue, as an investment.

Mrs. L. Z. Calten of Springfield, Mass., recently had built a fine house of eight rooms and bath in the "Baty" section near the Ocean Park line as an investment. It is occupied by the Misses Caldon and Miss Ruth Sullivan of Lawrence for the season.

"Breakers by the Sea" has been completely remodelled and it can now accommodate sixty people. Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Sears report that they have seventeen guests, which is an excellent showing for the early season.

Mr. Golden of South Boston has built a six-room winter house on Highland avenue. It is modern throughout, having hard wood floors, electric lights, etc., with a fine view of ocean.

Another building recently completed is a new house just off Fort Hill avenue of nine rooms and bath. Mr. C. A. Dolbier, the local builder, built same and will occupy it as a home.

The Goodall Hotel has had its attractiveness increased by a widening of its piazza. In doing this Mr. McKenney, the proprietor, had to sacrifice his beautiful shore front flowerbeds and shrubbery. This Colonial-typed mansion, however, is hardly in need of ulterior adornment.

The Forest Pier Hotel presents a new and pleasant appearance on Old Orchard street. The change in the office front by the placing of "Corinthian" styled pillars under the arched entrance has added a touch of beauty and attractiveness and the large covered piazza overlooking the pier and either side of the beach will afford the guests unusual advantages. Inside, the hotel has undergone thorough renovations and a number of the rooms have been remodelled. Mr. Auerbach, the manager, reports that he has received a larger number of requests for reservations than ever before.

Mrs. Charles Osgood of Haverhill, Mass., owner of the Ocean Rest Cottage on Union avenue, has had her summer home renovated and an addition of four rooms and a large piazza constructed. Mrs. Osgood caters to many of Old Orchard's visitors during the season.

Gustave Hperle of Old Orchard has moved two bungalows to Seaside avenue on the east side of the railroad tracks. He is improving one by the addition of several rooms.

A new four-room bungalow and garage has been erected at the corner of Grand and Union avenues by R. F. Cushman. Mr. Cushman has built for investment and has occupied one of the few remaining sites on Grand avenue up to the Camp Ground Station.

G. F. Garand of Biddeford has built a four-room addition to his cottage on Sea View avenue.

Mrs. Louisa Pease of Ocean avenue has added four rooms and bath to her bungalow.

A small cottage at the corner of East Grand avenue and Rusin street was built for Miss Elizabeth Little of Biddeford. Miss Little will occupy the cottage shortly.

Mrs. Jones, proprietor of the Jones House, has moved one of her houses which was situated in the rear of the Bellevue House to a frontage on Staples street. The house has been remodelled into a three-apartment block of six, five and four rooms. The house will be equipped with modern conveniences.

Mr. Woodbury of the Hotel Everingham has constructed a small cottage on the water front adjacent to the hotel. The new building has been called the "Longview" and justifies its name in every way. From any point on its broad veranda one commands a sweeping view of the entire bay.

Most notable perhaps among the new buildings is the new block of seven stores built on the lot next to the Post-office by Mr. J. W. Duffy. No further comment is necessary here as all are familiar with this decided improvement. We can say, however, that the investment has been worth while for all the stores were rented before completion.

Mr. Frank Staples, owner of the Sea Shore lot, has taken over the building formerly used as a skating rink and has built from it a very large and spacious moving picture auditorium. He has installed nine hundred new and comfortable seats, which set on a slanting floor, thus giving a clear view from all seats. Outside he has also improved it by two coats of paint which greatly adds to the neatness of the locality.

Mr. John Scamman, who for many years has conducted the confectionery store at the corner of Milliken and Old Orchard street has moved two stores this side of his former location where he will be pleased to see former patrons.

Mr. Raymond Emmons, for several years connected with the Seaside Drug Co., has launched forth in business for himself conducting a light grocery and delicatessen store on the opposite side of Old Orchard street which he has recently opened. His many friends will wish him success.

Miss Betty B. Tailor

The diminutive young lady whose portrait is shown herewith was taking a walk when the camera man snapped her. She had hold of her father's hand and was skipping along in great glee. Her father is T. Suffern Tailor, well known in society and business affairs. The girl's name is Betty, and she was visiting the Piping Rock horse races with her parents. It is unlikely that Betty took much interest in the horses. She was much more engrossed in playing with her little brother, who is not much older than she. Piping Rock is situated on Long Island and is a famous resort of society folk. There are held horse shows and races, mainly for the amusement of the upper ten. In winter Betty B. lives in New York, but her summer home is at Newport.

Advice For Boy Scouts.

When starting on a hike leave your coat at home, advises I. W. Schmidt, scoutmaster of the boy scouts at Crafton, Pa. You don't need it while on the move. If it rains it gets wet so quickly that it is of little use and is very heavy. When you get to camp, if you are on an overnight hike, you will take it off to cut firewood. A sweater coat is far better. It packs easily, you can use it to tie things in and you can sleep in it if the weather turns cold. As to socks or stockings, all authorities unite in claiming that for hikes of any distance wool is the thing. Wool absorbs the perspiration or any chance dampness from the outside and makes the best cushion to preserve the foot from chafing.

Your shirt should be of flannel, not cotton, silk or khaki. If you are going to camp overnight and your flannel shirt is dripping with perspiration change into a sweater, and it may occur to you that it would be a good plan to wash the shirt and have it ready for the next day. If you do so be careful not to wring it out. Hang it up dripping wet, and it will not shrink.

Ugly Mug.

This is a good game for exercising and creates merriment among your little friends. The players stand in a circle and suit their actions to the following rimes:

I put my ugly mug in (Each head is thrust forward);
I put my ugly mug out;
I give myself a shake, shake, shake,
And turn myself about.

I put my right elbow in.
I put my right elbow out;
I give myself a shake, shake, shake,
And turn myself about.

I put my left elbow in.
I put my left elbow out;
I give myself a shake, shake, shake,
And turn myself about.

I put my right foot in.
I put my right foot out;
I give myself a shake, shake, shake,
And turn myself about.

Then follows the left foot, right ear and left ear, etc. As much of the fun depends upon the shaking, the "shake, shake, shake," should be given as comically as possible.

Conundrums.

When are true words also sweet?
When they are candid (candied).

Which is the heavier, the full or the new moon? The new moon, because the full moon is a great deal lighter.

Why is an alligator the most deceitful of animals? Because he takes you with an open countenance.

Which of the constellations reminds you of an empty fireplace? The Great Bear (grate bare).

Why is the letter S like a sewing machine? Because it makes needles needless.

Use me well, and I'm everybody; scratch my back and I'm nobody? A looking glass.

Riddles.

Formed long ago, yet made today,
Employed while others sleep;
What few would like to give away
Nor any wish to keep.
Answer.—A bed.

Long legs, crooked thighs,
Little head and no eyes.
Answer.—Pair of tongs.

Summer Clothing For Baby.

In summer the baby's clothing needs especially to be light in weight and loose fitting, says Good Health. It goes without saying that it should be clean and sweet. The young child is exceedingly sensitive to change of temperature, and his clothing should be subject to the surrounding atmosphere. In the chill of the morning he needs warm garments, but swathed in flannel in the heat of the day he becomes overheated and perspires to excess. It takes time and thought to watch his comfort in this matter, but it does much toward insuring freedom from disease.

A Useful Box.

A box for children's toys can be made much more useful if two strips of wood an inch and a half wide are nailed across the bottom of the box, one at each end, and a small castor is put in each of the four corners. When picking up the toys the box can be moved across the room, besides serving as a little wagon for the children.

Complicated.

Bass—I suppose you think I'm a fool? Cass—That's what troubles me. If your supposition is correct, then you are a mind reader, and therefore you cannot be a fool, and yet—well, you understand. —Boston Transcript.

THE VACATION WARDROBE.

Limit the Number of Garments, but Select Them Carefully.

In selecting the wardrobe for the summer vacation common sense should be the guide. The first essential is to be prepared for any sort of weather. Therefore a couple of tailor suits are indispensable, one of the smarter type, the other of the "sports" order—simple, serviceable and substantial. A motor coat and a waterproof, the latter a "mackinaw," in good color and of irreproachable make; a wrap that, while thoroughly protective, is fit for the smartest occasion when uncertain weather must be guarded against, may be included.

A sufficiency of trim tailor cut shirts for these gowns and perhaps one or two blouses should be selected. Immaculate and appropriate footwear—dainty shoes or boots, with cloth tops for the best gown, real country boots or shoes for the other, a couple of hats, one of the simplest type for travel and hard wear, the other as modish as you please, but not of perishable order, and a sports cap may complete the outdoor kit.

Unless one is going to a house where extensive festivities may be expected two evening gowns should be quite sufficient. Don't forget those delightful and dainty rest gowns of the kimono type, made of thin broche silk and cotton or crape, that are so useful and charming and take up next to no room in one's baggage.

Only one evening wrap need be taken, and that a thin one—such as a graceful voluminous burnoose of ninon or mousseline de soie, which can be folded into the tiniest compass and yet affords sufficient warmth to protect one against drafts or chills indoors—for if one has to motor to dinners or dances at a distance the motor coat would be worn during the drive.

Moire Sashes.

There are some charming new sashes made of wide taffeta moire ribbon. The ends are folded into a point and finished with a silken ornament and tassel. These sashes are wrapped twice about the waist, and the ends are then tied and left to hang loosely over the skirt.

LIGHTWEIGHT WRAPS.

Semi-long afternoon wraps of plain and flowered silks are a Parisian fancy.

Linen dust coats for women are very plain, useful looking garments.

Imported golfine is much used for women's sports coats.

Coat chains have gone out, but bead necklaces of all colors are much in vogue.

Dressing sacks are shirred at the waist line as they used to be.

Playing Golf.

In the Century Marshall Whitlatch, a noted golfer, explains why particularly brainy men often make a poor showing at that sport. They think so hard about hitting the ball in just the proper manner, he says, that their muscles are tensed, and the free swing of the stroke is spoiled. His theory, suggested to him by the Montessori system, is that the player should relax his mind as well as his muscles, feel out the correct position and aim in action; in short, that good golf is all a matter of subconscious habit.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Lip Sores.

Lip sores are due to slight colds oftentimes, and they may be due to stomach trouble. The "festering" is due to the presence of pus germs in the skin. At the first appearance of the swelling if ice or very hot compresses are applied the sore may be absorbed. Also the application of camphor or pure menthol may check the process. After the sore has disappeared apply hot towels to the face for a few minutes to steam it, and then shampoo it thoroughly to remove all germs from the skin. If this is done once or twice a week for a time these sores may entirely cease to appear.

INSIDE BASEBALL.

Winning In the Morning the Game of the Afternoon.

In the American Magazine Eddie Collins, second baseman for the Philadelphia Athletics, writes a baseball article, entitled "Connie Mack and His Mackmen," in which he describes intimately the wonderful Philadelphia baseball manager. Collins is the man whom Johnny McGraw of the New York Giants calls the greatest baseball player in the world. Following is an extract from the article:

"Every morning at 10 we gather in the clubhouse. If the team is on the road we meet in Connie's room in the hotel. We are never in session less than ten minutes or rarely more than half an hour. But in that time the game to be played that afternoon is sometimes won.

"Every point of the defensive and offensive strength of the opposing team is discussed. Mack will mention the pitcher that our opponents will probably use and instantly a scheme of attack is devised. This attack varies as we meet different pitchers. Always in those morning meetings Mack goes over the entire situation—plans the battle."

UNCLE SAM'S POSTMASTERS.

A Grand Army That No Foreign Country Is Able to Rival.

Postmaster General Burleson announces that in fourteen months he has appointed 23,317 postmasters, 5,171 of whom were of presidential grade. The total number of postoffices in the country and its territorial possessions is 57,540.

The grand army of postmasters is therefore more than twice as large as our entire regular army when the war with Spain broke out. It is nearly as large as our present regular establishment within the United States.

There seems to be no army of postmasters in the world like ours. Russia has our vast spaces, but not our universal education. Germany has education, but not our distances. The revenue of our department in 1913 was $206,619,525. British postal revenues this year are estimated at only $105,000,000. France receives less than $80,000,000 from her posts, telegraphs and telephones; the German empire less than $200,000,000 for the same three services. We send 18,000,000,000 pieces of mail matter in a year. No other two nations begin to do that.—New York World.

Woman's World

The Kaiser Is to Have a

COUNTRESS INA MARIE VON BASSEWITZ.

Countess Ina Marie Von Bassewitz, whose engagement to the kaiser's fifth son, Prince Oscar of Prussia, has been announced, is another example of the revolt of royalty against the system of caste which prevails where their marriages are concerned.

Countess Ina is a maid of honor in the suit of the kaiserin. She is the youngest, best looking and cleverest of the ladies about the court. Prince Oscar was thrown much in her society and had the kaiserin been an ordinary mother she would have anticipated the result. Prince Oscar was soon deeply in love with the witty and attractive maid of honor.

That she is a young woman of much spirit is indicated by the report that as soon as his devotion became obvious the countess departed to her home in Mecklenburg Schwerin, where her father is the minister of state.

The Crown Princess Cecilie, who is a princess of Mecklenburg, and the Duchess of Brunswick, the kaiser's daughter, both took the part of the lovers, with the result that the kaiser is said to have given his consent to the marriage of the countess and the prince. The marriage will be a morganatic one, but in Germany it will confer some distinction.

The bride will not take the name of her husband, but be given a title of her own together with a substantial dowry. She cannot under German law inherit the estates of her husband, nor can her children, should any be born, claim the title or property of their father. They will take the name and rank of the mother. As a rule, the morganatic children of royalty are favored by the state with profitable offices or other rich emoluments. Often they marry into royal families.

Queen Mary of England is the granddaughter of a German morganatic marriage. Her grandfather was a son of Duke Alexander of Wurttemberg, who was made prince and duke of Teck when he renounced his royal rank to marry morganatically Countess Claudine von Rhedy of Poland.

The house of Hohenzollern has made several morganatic marriages which have in most cases turned out happily.

She Posed as the Buddha.

Regularly every year during the carnival the writer on Chinese subjects, Mme. Judith Gauthier, gives a little party in her wonderful house in the Rue Washington in Paris. The house is a museum of Chinese art, and Mme. Gauthier's guests always find something new to interest them.

At this year's party when the guests arrived their hostess was not there to receive them. The servants told them madame would come presently and called their attention to her latest treasure, a magnificent life size Buddha with a painted face and covered with a wonderful cloth of gold. The Buddha sat on the piano, and the guests were admiring it when it sneezed and coughed. It was Mme. Judith Gauthier herself.—Paris Cor. New York Sun.

Revolving Ships.

The revolving ship is one of those inventions which, although they are obviously impracticable, seem to have a fascination for the inventor that is rather difficult to explain. Several years ago there was built and tried in this country a boat of the revolving type which reached a stage at which it was launched, and an attempt was made unsuccessfully to propel it. According to a dispatch from London, a Paris inventor is now busy on another of these craft, and, judging from the meager descriptions available, the designer is following along the lines that were proved to be altogether impracticable fully a dozen years ago.—Scientific American.

SUCH A DAINY HAT!

For the white costume a white hat, and nothing is more fashionable than this combination of white tagal and white grosgrain silk, with a big camellia set in its green foliage, nestled against the crown.

"Then you can't get me a government plum?"

"No," said Senator Wombat. "But what's one paltry government plum? I have secured for you some plum seeds from the department of agriculture. Go home and start an orchard of your own, my friend."—Judge.

Modern Compliment.

"Of course mothers should be examples for their daughters," said Mrs. Evergay.

"And they are," replied Colonel Courtly. "The girls of today will be entitled to congratulations if they succeed in being as good looking as their mothers."—Washington Star.

Points for Mothers

Carriage Pillowslips.

The baby which is taken out for a daily airing in its carriage needs several slips for the carriage pillow. A covering that is dainty enough for any baby can be made from two handkerchiefs and a few yards of valenciennes lace. If one is skilled in embroidery the word "Baby" may be embroidered on one section of the pillow.

One handkerchief should be cut in two to form the end of the pillow, and the remaining handkerchief should be used for the center section. Measure the sides of the handkerchief in order to find out just how many yards of lace will be needed. The edge can be finished with lace.

Baby pillows should always have the center of the pillow plain, so when selecting them choose a design with a border or corners to be embroidered. Pad the petals and leaves with cotton of a medium weight. When embroidering the design use the satin stitch, French knots and outlining stitch.

Punched work is effective and can be used to its best advantage on dainty articles for baby. Purchase a pillow filled with down and cover it with a layer of linen or china silk. The slip cover is made by attaching the ruffle to the top and then stitching the bottom in position.

The hemstitched ruffle is easily laundered and is particularly effective, and a simple edging of valenciennes lace is also a good finish. The most attractive method of joining the ruffle to the pillow is to finish it with a narrow beading.

Gardening For Children.

If you have but a small city yard give your child a foot or two for his "very own" garden. Let him dig it up, prepare it, plant the seeds or purchase plants out of his own spending money. If he is interested in the garden it will be his special delight to keep it weeded and in good condition, allowing him to pick his own flowers and do with them what he will. The garden will be not only a pleasure, but a benefit.

One little boy who was allowed his little patch when asked what he wanted to plant in this wee garden, replied, "Pansies, because they have such sweet little faces." He was allowed to buy half a dozen plants and his greatest delight was to pick these flowers and take them to his mother each morning. Of course the stems were short, but she floated them in a glass finger bowl.

His garden was always in beautiful condition. One of his first duties in the morning was to rake up the ground, and the little watering can was put to use at least twice a day.

Playing Outdoors.

From 10 to 12 each morning the little ones should romp and play out of doors. If you have a good sized yard this may be used as a playground for the children.

In one corner have a small seesaw. In another part of the yard have a low broad fence made from studding. A boy never tires of climbing on this and seeing how well he can walk it. This is a most excellent physical exercise. Plan attractive plays that will give the children strong muscles well under control and vigorous exercises that will make the whole body healthy and give self reliance for later life.

A shelter in the yard is most helpful. It may be rude, but will serve the purpose of protection on very cold or warm days. It should have a large window to allow the sun to light and warm it, so that except on the severest days it is really a comfortable place in which the youngsters can play.

Insects in the Ear.

Should an insect get into the ear of a child or an adult immediately pour in a little olive oil, slightly warmed. This at once suffocates the insect, and it can then be extracted by some one who knows how. The buzzing of the tiniest possible gnat is horrible torture that need not be endured if there is any kind of grease to be had. Melted lard will answer or even butter, although the latter having salt in it is not so good.

Hot water will sometimes wash out an insect, but the greatest care should be taken to have it barely hot enough to feel pleasant. The idea is to drown the buzzing intruder as quickly as possible, but the delicate inner membrane should not be burned in the process.

Simple Jewelry.

Only the simplest of jewelry should be worn by the tiny girl. She may have an enamel locket swinging from a slender gold or silver chain or a platinum pendant on a platinum chain. She may wear a set of bar sash pins in striped enamel or platinum, surrounded with seed pearls, but she should not wear rings on her fingers, nor bracelets. No sort of ornament should be seen on her hair bow. Boys do not wear jewelry while in the short trousered stage.

A Rainy Day Closet.

It is a good idea for the mother of a family of children to have a rainy day closet. Into this closet she can put all manner of odds and ends of interest to children. On rainy days they may be taken out for the amusement of the little ones.

A Few Casual Inquiries.

"Now, don't talk too much when you go to call on your neighbor. You may answer questions, of course."

"That is all I ever do," said the child. "And they ask a great many questions. Last time they asked how much salary papa got and if he ever quarreled with you."—Kansas City Journal.

THE PORTLAND DISTRICT CAMP MEETING ASS'N.

Portland District Camp Meeting, or conference and summer assembly, which is to be held on the Old Orchard grounds, July 19-26 inclusive, promises to be a meeting of unusual interest. Speakers of national reputation are already engaged. The purpose of this meeting is to awaken interest and give instruction in methods of Christian work. With this in view, Sunday school and Epworth League will have special attention, while Missionary effort will also be given a large place on the program. The hour from 9 to 10 a. m., is set apart for the Sunday school and will be largely devoted to Teacher Training. It is hoped there may be a large class doing practical work in this very important branch of service, qualifying themselves to do this work in their local churches.

The Epworth League has its hour from 6 to 7-30 p. m. There will probably be institute as well as devotional features. This will be in charge of Rev. F. C. Potter, who did such excellent work last year.

Missionary subjects will be presented by men thoroughly familiar with the matter on which they speak. Rev. F. H. Wright, D. D., missionary in Italy, now superintendent of Italian missions in this country, will speak on that work. Rev. H. B. Haskell, from Jerusalem, speaks of work in Mohammedan countries; Rev. A. H. Nazarian of Boston, a native Syrian, speaks on Friday, for the Woman's Missionary Societies. Most interesting and timely will be the address, Sunday morning, July 26, of Dr. John W. Butler, for nearly 40 years a missionary in Mexico, who knows that country as well as any living American. His theme will be "Mexico and Her Needs."

SPECIAL DAYS—Boys' Day, Wednesday; Epworth League Day, Thursday. There will be appropriate exercises each day. With these there will be the usual camp meeting sermons, lectures and devotional services. Every day will be full. Rev. J. O. Randall, D. D., of the National Evangelistic Commission will have charge of that part of the work. Dr. Randall last year proved himself an able preacher and leader. These are some of the features and workers of this meeting. The Old Orchard grounds are well known. No more convenient and desirable place can be found for such gatherings. Rooms or cottages can be obtained by applying to Rev. A. Hamilton or Rev. H. Chase, of Old Orchard, Maine.

PARTY FROCKS.

Old Fashioned Designs Are Carried Out In Lingerie Materials.

GIRL'S VOILE FROCK.

Lingerie gowns in adaptations of the styles made famous by the pictures of Kate Greenaway are popular for little girls' party wear. They may be plain, embroidered or trimmed with lace, but a handsome sash is an invariable accompaniment.

Pictured here is a charming frock of hand embroidered voile. The high waist line and puffed sleeves are quaint and attractive.

A charming garment for the small girl is a little white nainsook made by hand and hand embroidered. It is cut in princess style, perfectly straight from neck to hem except that a low placed band of ribbon is run through wide loops of the material and tied in a bow in front.

Hand embroidered with scallops and dots is the neck, the ends of the short cut in one sleeves and the bottom of the little garment.

Making a Good Memory.

Lord Beaconsfield's recipe for a good memory was simple—never take a note. Dr. Jowett used to say, "A man should make a compact with his memory not to remember everything." Great memories, like that of Sir William Hamilton, are apt to disable judgment. Sheer memory flourishes best where notemaking is impossible. Dudley Kidd tells how he saw a council of Kaffir chiefs discussing a legal case. A precedent of sixty or seventy years ago came up, and the old men, who had been children at that time, reconstructed it to the minutest detail, even to the exact color of the various cattle concerned, with perfect unanimity.

Reasonably Sure.

She—Lois writes for the magazines. He—She'll get 'em if she sends the price.—Judge.

LONG TUNICS.

They Are In the Ascendant For Gowns of All Types.

The long tunic is seen on every type of costume, from the street suit to the negligee. Fluffy lingerie frocks of sheer organdie and embroidery have the staid and stately tunic, and if there must be ruffles the ruffles are put on the tunic.

Some of the long tunics worn in the street are buttoned down in front; others show buttons all the way down the back. Some of these tunics are quite simple in cut, with a slight flare at the sides and a very straight line at the back, from sash bow or edge of jacket to ankle. Others have a widely flaring cut or are set into the waistband with small plaits or even gathers.

The gown pictured here is of apricot linen with a long tunic, part of which is arranged in box plaits. The kimono blouse is cut with a low front, into which is fitted a vest and flare collar of white organdie. The gown is adorned with white bone buttons and has a girdle of patent leather.

Striped Sweaters.

For summer wear the striped sweater of silk is undoubtedly the cry of the hour. In green, lavender, blue, wheat and tango this beautiful and costly bit of sports wear with its sash is particularly effective with the white skirt or the white suit.

Sand and Lime Bricks.

Bricks made of sand and lime and hardened in the air are used largely in communities where there is no clay from which clay brick can be made, but where an abundance of sand can be found.

Right In Style.

Wife—John, I haven't a skirt fit to wear. Husband—Well, that's the style, isn't it?

Helping the Postoffice.

In a history of the great advance in postal methods accomplished by Sir Rowland Hill is given this anecdote: To the postoffice of at that time tiny Ambleside came one day a well to do man to buy a stamp to put on the letter he was about to post. "Is this new reform going to last?" he asked the postmaster. "Certainly," was the reply. "It is quite established." "Oh, well, then," said the man, resolved to give the thing generous support, "give me three stamps!"

A SUMMER FROCK DANSANT.

Even when the summer days grow warm the craze for dancing is not to subside, say the prophets of style. A dance frock like this will fulfill all the requirements. A simple under part of blue tango crape makes a cool foundation, while the blouse and tunic of tulle and lace give the note of sheer-ness that is needed for the tango gown. Yellow roses outline the tunic.

TANGO PETTICOATS.

Hand embroidered nainsook flouncing makes handsome petticoats, with lace inserts. A silk model of a petticoat has a full length gusset of silk jersey at every seam, which gives with the wearer's movements, and yet the garment clings closely to the figure. Tango petticoats are of the fine crepe de chine, with a side plaited ruffle of chiffon beaded with tiny flat roses.

Perfectly Natural.

"That was the spirit of your uncle that made the table stand, turn over and do such queer stunts."

"I am not surprised. He never did have good table manners."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Balzac a Hypnotist.

That the great French novelist Balzac was not only a believer in personal "magnetism," but himself an expert hypnotist, is affirmed by Count Apponyi in his "Journal."

Count Apponyi says that Balzac once related an instance of event reading at a distance which came under his notice. "I have believed in magnetism from that day," Balzac continued, "and have myself become a powerful magnetizer. Such is my force that few people can resist me. Almost every one who enters my house becomes hypnotized, and I can make them reveal their most secret thoughts." Balzac boasted that he could even hypnotize at a distance.

Animals of Canada.

Northern Canada is still teeming with animal life. From some notes in the United Empire we learn that the musk ox still lingers among the arctic fastnesses of the far north. The polar bear and the walrus are still comparatively common on the Alaskan and arctic shores. Geese, ducks, curlews and a host of birds are yet to be found in the comparative isolation of their hidden sanctuaries. But year by year these nobler forms of animal life are becoming more and more open to the attacks of irresponsible individuals who have no care for the future, and who still less believe that this wealth of animal life is worth preservation.

Giving Quickly.

"See me next week about it."

"But he who gives quickly gives twice."

"That's just the point. I don't care to be held up later for a second subscription."—Pittsburgh Post.

NEW PHASE OF RUSSIAN TUNIC

A new phase of the Russian tunic is the plaited effect, and here it is still more original. It is lengthened in the back and frilled at the belt line.

BLACK AND WHITE.

The Favored Combination For Smart Gowns In Paris.

BLACK AND WHITE STRIPED GOWN.

Even when cotton materials are selected there is a distinct tendency to favor striped or lined materials. The summer outing suit illustrated here is of black and white striped cotton fabric with Roman striped ribbon on the collar.

The black of the early season has been replaced by black and white, and it is hard these days to tell who is in mourning and who is not unless a crape or ribbon edged mourning veil droops from the hat.

Thin white waists are made all the whiter by strings of black beads falling over the front, and sometimes the black beads are echoed by a tiny smart bow of black moire or grosgrain ribbon set at the crossing of the surplised waist front.

With tailleurs of black pussy willow taffeta, mohair and worsted mixture or poplin, all favored for the season's wear, these white waists with their black beads and bows are extremely chic even though decidedly suggestive of half mourning.

SAVING MONEY.

The failure of the man who does not save his money is not only due to the fact that he has no money with which to take advantage of the opportunities that come in the way of every man, but also and particularly to the fact that such a man is not able or fit to avail himself of these opportunities. The man who cannot and does not save money cannot and will not do anything else worth while.—Andrew Carnegie.

SURF ECHOES OF OLD ORCHARD PEOPLE.

Overheard in the Mirror Office.

Poet—"I called to see if you had an opening for me."

Editor—"Yes, there is one right behind you, shut it as you go out."

A farmer boy and his best girl, who live on the Saco road, were seated one evening in a buggy near Mrs. Snow's pop-corn stand. Presently the lady said: "My, that pop-corn smells good."

"That's right," said the gallant. "I'll drive up a little closer so that you can smell it better."

A little fellow rushed breathless into the Seaside Drug store the other night.

"Please, sir, some liniment and some cement."

"What?" asked the puzzled clerk, "what's the matter?"

"Mam hit pop on the head with a plate."

LAST OF OLD ORCHARD SHORE PROPERTY.

The Jas. Jay Smith Co. of New York City have just placed the last two remaining beach front properties in Old Orchard on the market for sale. The properties lie just above and below the pier, and are called "Surfside" and "Kinney Shores." They have been laid out under proper restrictions both as to the sort of people that can purchase, and the class of houses that can be erected, and the sanitary arrangements have been carefully looked after. The Company are endeavoring to make these two model shore colonies, and have started out in the proper manner. There is a Railroad Station on both properties. "The Kinney Shores" property is covered with many magnificent pine trees, and there are some very handsome cottages on both of the properties, all of which have been rented for this season, as the demand for cottages in such locations is very great.

The opening prices for lots have been placed very low, and they are sold on easy monthly payments, so that the size of a man's pocket-book is not what counts when purchasing, but the character of all purchasers is carefully looked into.

It is a remarkable fact that of the nine miles of beach frontage in Old Orchard it should practically all be built on with the exception of these two properties, and when they are sold there is bound to be a rapid increase in values along the entire sea wall.

The Jas. Jay Smith Co., who are developing the properties, are the largest developers of shore property in New England, and have never developed a property that has not been a great success. They have been in business thirty-five years.

TAX COLLECTIONS.

How to Make Oil of Swallows.

Among the valued specifics of a by-gone age was oil of swallows. In the "Countess of Kent's Choice Manual" (1676) there are the following curious directions for making it: "Take one handful of mother thyme, of lavender cotton and strawberry leaves of each alike, four swallows, feathers and all together well bruised, three ounces of sallet oil, beat the herbs and the swallows, feathers and all altogether, until they be so small that you can see no feathers, then put in the oil and stir them well together, and seeth them in a posnet and strain them through a canvas cloth and so keep it for your use."

BEAUTIFUL AFTERNOON FROCK

This charming gown was built of sheer handkerchief linen elaborately embroidered by hand. The sash of embroidered linen is the salient feature of this up to the minute frock.

CAMISOLES AND CHEMI-VESTS

Camisoles, which are brassieres made with the little shoulder caps, encircle the body with a tiny frill of net above, not reaching above the arms, with ribbons over the shoulders. This lace is fastened to a narrow piece of doubled net, with beading through which ribbon is run. Very thin lengthwise strips of embroidery may form a camisole, with lace three inches wide across the top. They fasten on the left side. Little chemi-vests to be worn next to the flesh are made of nainsook, crape, china silk, lawn, etc., and are twenty-four to twenty-nine inches long and without an inch of extra material.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Hyperidrosis.

There is a kind of functional disorder of the sweat glands that results in excessive perspiration. The scientific name for the condition is hyperidrosis. Those who suffer from hyperidrosis are usually not in the best of general health, and the nervous system is especially likely to be at fault. The treatment of the condition, whether its manifestations are local or general, should aim to build up the general health. Any good tonic that gives a fillip to the general system and improves the circulation may relieve the trouble. Cold baths are often useful for their effect on the circulation. In cases where the hands or the feet are affected, immerse them for a few minutes in quite hot water, and then, after drying them with a soft cloth, dust them freely with boric acid powder. If the trouble is very annoying and does not yield to time or to simple remedies like these, consult a physician. The sweat glands themselves may be in a disordered state, and it may be advisable to use the X rays. Those rays have cured cases of hyperidrosis that have resisted every other form of treatment.

How would you make "bigger business" for Old Orchard?

Thinking of Something Else

Man In Love.

By MAUD HALLOWELL.

"Whatever you do, Sue," said Dr. John Murray's wife, half laughing, half angry, "don't you ever marry an absentminded man. A man that is always 'thinking of something else,' like that big husband of mine, may be wonderfully good at his profession, because that's what he's always thinking about, but he is surely a domestic trial at times."

Mrs. Murray laughed, her ill nature having evaporated completely under the heat of her little outburst. Her visitor, Susan Harland, laughed with her, for Dr. Murray's wonderful feats in his fits of abstraction were famous.

"Why, Sue," continued Mrs. Murray, laughing gayly at the recollection, "do you remember when I had that touch of rheumatic fever? One night when I was burning with thirst I woke John and said to him, 'John, if you don't get me a drink of water quick I don't know that I'll live till morning.'"

"He got up, sort of dazed, walked over to the mantelpiece and came back to me holding out an empty vase. I wanted a drink of water that much that I hung on to my patience until he was wide awake and knew what I was talking about. Then he went to the refrigerator and came back with a glass brimming full of good cold water. But, if you will believe it, Sue, he just stood there looking at me, and before I could say a word that man drank every drop of that water himself with me glaring holes through him. I declare, it makes me angry to this day!"

They were going to a dance and were waiting for Dr. Murray to escort them.

"No, Sue; don't you ever marry an absentminded man," said Mrs. Murray impressively when they drove away at last, with Dr. John safely opposite them.

"As long as he isn't too absentminded to attend the wedding, Sue," chuckled Dr. John, "you take him, provided his name is Dick Kendall."

Sue was glad that the darkness hid her blushes.

"Dick is going to do something great in chemistry, I do believe," said Dr. John. "There's his compound of phospho"—

"A wife wants something besides your old phosphates and other ill smelling things," said Mrs. Murray. "Dick Kendall is as bad as you are. He's just as likely as not to come to the dance tonight with his old laboratory coat on."

Dick Kendall did not fulfill Mrs. Murray's dark prophecy literally, but he did so in effect. It is true that he was soberly and blamelessly clad in his evening clothes, but the tout ensemble was somewhat marred by the sad fact that he had a patent leather pump on one foot and a bright russet shoe on the other.

Sue blushed and then she flushed, and then she grew angry as the titters and smiles ran around the room when unconscious Dick hurried forward to meet her.

Luckless Dick was doomed to further disgrace. He had barely repaired the disaster of the shoes by sending a messenger posthaste to his home for the other pump when something worse happened.

During a waltz, when Miss Sue was his partner, somebody brushed against Dick. There was a sharp crackling of broken glass, and the next instant the couple was wreathed in beautiful violet smoke that gradually filled the room.

Nobody had leisure or desire to observe the beauty of its color though. It was so instantly suffocating that there was a mad, wild rush for doors and French windows.

The accident filled Sue's cup, and it brimmed over—only a little, but too much. In her anger she stamped her foot and cried: "Dick Kendall, your absentmindedness apparently extends only to me and not to your profession. It is plain that you care more for chemistry than for me, and it would be a thousand pities to disturb your devotion."

She stripped the ring from her finger, and he took it in bewildered silence. Before he could reply she had turned her back and the next moment was walking up the corridor with Dick's pet aversion, Charles Maule, whom everybody called "the model Maul," in apt description of his mental equipment.

Miss Sue's words had been uttered in the hearing of many persons. Next day the news of the broken engagement was all over town.

Dick tried to placate the girl, but with characteristic lack of policy he did not wait for her anger to cool off. The result was that the breach seemed final to him. In his simplicity he believed every angry word she said and did not realize that the girl was eager to forgive as soon as she had punished him a little.

Dick was absentminded about little things, but not about great ones. With a heart full to breaking, he made his preparations to leave the place.

A week afterward Sue stopped at Dr. Murray's house to accompany Mrs. Murray and the doctor on a drive into the country. Dr. John was not there when she arrived.

"I hope he hasn't gone to bed by mistake," said Sue, smiling. She was cheerful, for she had made up her mind to write to Dick, forgiving him and asking him frankly to forgive her.

"No," said Mrs. John. "Didn't I tell you where he was going this morning? He went to drive Dick Kendall down to the harbor to see him off on the Viking."

Susan Harland's half opened lips and startled eyes showed her surprise.

"Didn't you know?" said Mrs. Murray, embarrassed. "Dick is going on a cruise around the world with his friend Randall, who bought that big yacht Viking."

Susan sprang up, casting aside all pretense, like the honest, warm hearted girl she was. "Kate," she cried, "I can't let him go! I cannot! I cannot! I was wicked. As if I would lose Dick for all the absentmindedness in the world! Oh, Kate, we must stop him! I don't care what people think!"

"Sue, dear," said Mrs. Murray, "it is too late. Look!" She led Sue to a window that commanded a view across a bluff and far to sea. Some miles out a great steam yacht was steaming toward the horizon.

"I must cable to him at once—at once!" said Sue passionately. For a few minutes Mrs. Murray made no reply, but held her arms around the girl and stroked her hair.

"You must be patient, dear, now, and plucky for awhile. The Viking is bound to the south Pacific, and we shall not be able to reach her for some time—perhaps for six months."

She led the sobbing girl into the library, bestowed her comfortably in an easy chair and wisely left her alone to have her cry and her trouble by herself till the first keenness should have worn off.

She had scarcely re-entered the drawing room before she heard her husband driving up to the door. A moment afterward there entered two men, looking very, very sheepish and guilty. They were Dr. John and—Dick Kendall.

"Now, don't scold and don't laugh, Kate," implored Dr. John. "I'll tell you what happened. I picked Dick up all right at his lodgings, and we did all you told us to do, saw that everything was locked up and counted his baggage and made sure that he had his money in his pockets. See, here's your memorandum, all checked off. But, Kate," added Dr. John, with a twinkle, half humorous, half ashamed, "you forgot to add on the memorandum that Dick was to be delivered on board the Viking."

"And so, you know," interposed Dick, eager to divert blame from his friend's head, "I got to telling John about a new test for white blood corpuscles, and we got interested and stopped for just a few minutes at the board of health laboratory."

"And then, as usual, you forgot all about a little thing like a trip around the world," Mrs. Murray burst out. But, strangely enough, there was a delighted smile on her face.

Taking Dick Kendall by the shoulder, she pushed him toward the library. "Now, you great, useless child," said she, with her eyes shining, "you go in there and sit down for a moment. I have something to say to the doctor."

She closed the door behind him and ran to Dr. John, clapping her hands softly. Dr. John didn't look at all absentminded when she whispered to him, but gazed at the door with as much eagerness and joy in his face as there was in hers.

They waited a quarter of an hour with highly commendable patience. Then Mrs. Murray walked to the door and knocked, but not before she had heard Dick Kendall's deep voice:

"Think of something else? Sue, I couldn't think of anything except that I had lost you."

And before the door opened Sue said: "Stop, you bear! You've nearly knocked my hat off."

Styles Do Change.

The tab they used to put on shirt fronts vanished years ago. Now shoe straps are gradually disappearing. Perhaps some day the little buttonhole they put on shirt sleeves just above the cuff will go on the way of other futilities.—Milwaukee Journal.

Very small hand bags, not more than five inches high or deep, are made of striped, figured and plain silks. They are gathered into a silken tassel as long as the bag itself and they are finished with strap handles of the silk. They are lined in contrasting silks.

Plaited Tunics.

The plaited tunic is particularly smart, but usually the plaits are rather shallow ones and are taped underneath to within a few inches of the bottom.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Control of Cancer.

Cancer respects neither race, creed nor social position.

It is the common enemy of all mankind, attacking rich and poor alike.

Its insidious onset occurs at the most useful period of life, and death is most common at the age when the care and guidance of children and the continuance of business responsibilities make the mother and father the most useful members of society.

The only cure for cancer is to remove every vestige of the disease.

The only sure way to do this is by a surgical operation.

If taken at the beginning the majority of cases of cancer are curable.

All cases will end in death if let alone.

Records of our best hospitals prove that the chances of cure are very high with early operation and that these chances decrease with every day of delay.

Early diagnosis is therefore all important.

OUR UNTILLED LANDS.

Millions on Millions of Acres Still Available For Farming.

If all the arable land of the United States which is not under plow could be put into one huge farm it would cover all of the United States east of the Missouri and Mississippi rivers. According to statistics which have been compiled by the department of agriculture, this vast acreage of land that should be used, but is not, totals 832,000,000 acres, which is equivalent to the combined areas of the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Montana.

According to the same statistics the tillable land of the United States actually in crops represents only 311,000,000 acres, about 27 per cent of the 1,145,000,000 acres available. This is equivalent to a farm as large as the states of Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas and Louisiana combined.

The lands which while not available for crops can be devoted to pasturage and orchards comprise 361,000,000 acres. This equals the area of Texas, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah.

This gives a striking account of the vast territory which still can be used to feed the hungry millions, not only of the United States, but also of the world. In other words, for every 100 acres that are now tilled about 375 may be put into crops when the country is fully developed.—Oswald F. Schuette in Leslie's.

The telephone cable which is to connect Aldeburgh, England, with Walcheren, Netherlands, is to be seventy-nine nautical miles in length, making it the longest submarine telephone cable in the world. It will furnish telephone communication between London and Berlin. The cable is to be of the four core Pupin loaded type.

He came timidly into the editor's office.

"Pardon me, sir, but would you like an authoritative article on the immigration question?"

"That isn't quite in our line."

"How about feminism?"

"Afraid we cannot use it."

"Perhaps you would like to have Wall street shown up in an inimitably witty and yet dignified and searching manner?"

"Sorry, but it does not interest us."

"Well, say a stirring article on Mexico, giving the inside facts."

"Nothing on Mexico today."

"Perhaps you would like a bunch of wonderful short stories?"

"We are rather long on short stories."

"Well, how about some poetical masterpieces? Anything from four cantos up. You know, they are quite fashionable now. Can let you have a metrical best seller in a couple of weeks."

"I am afraid not. Is there anything you cannot furnish?"

"Nothing, sir. Philosophy, history, poetry, humor, how about a series of snappy articles on health? Perhaps you would like to have your readers diet by a new system just invented. It makes no difference; there is nothing in the whole range of literature that I cannot supply you with. Here's my card. In case you want anything let me know."

He got up to go. The editor smiled.

"May I ask whether you run an agency or a syndicate?"

"Neither, sir. I am only the proud father of a nineteen-year-old girl who has a talent for literature and has just been graduated from an American college."—Life.

It is said that, according to the custom of the Astor family, Mrs. Vincent Astor renounced her dower rights in the vast Astor estate before her marriage. This has been done for generations in lieu of a settlement. The settlement is seldom generous in proportion to the vast wealth of the family. Vincent Astor's grandmother, Mrs. William Astor, renounced her dower right; so did Mrs. Ava Willing Astor and Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor.—Exchange.

PSYCHOLOGY OF POCKETS.

To prove how undeveloped is the growing urchin's mind

Turn out a small boy's pockets, and these treasures you will find:

A top, six rusty shingle nails, a hank of dirty string,

A snake (defunct), a railroad spike, a battered napkin ring,

A broken file, a rubber ball, some bits of broken rock

And sundry scattered remnants of a shattered barn door lock.

To prove that lovely woman is deficient in the brain

Turn out her leather hand bag, which is likely to contain

A canceled transfer, thirty cents, some frazzled squares of silk,

A fragment of a recipe for sterilizing milk,

A pointless pencil, seven stamps, some powder and a puff,

A shopping list, some scissors and a manicuring buff.

To prove that man's a creature of tremendous intellect

Go through his clothes some morning and you'll readily collect

A dry and useless fountain pen, a knife that will not cut,

Some scribbled dates, a paper book entitled "How to Putt,"

Four keys to locks long gone to rust, five crumpled dollar bills,

THE KORAN IN TURKISH.

How the Sacred Tradition of Centuries Has Been Broken.

Nine out of ten foreigners usually think of the Koran as being written in the Turkish language, while, as a matter of fact, it is written in Arabic and in Arabic characters. The Turkish language, strange as it may seem, has no characters of its own, and Turkish books are usually printed with Arabic or Greek characters; hence the excitement in religious circles in Turkey on the appearance of the Koran for the first time in the Turkish vernacular.

The translation has been done by Ibrahim Bey Hilmy, a learned oriental, who by giving Turks an opportunity of expressing their religious sentiments in their own mother tongue will doubtless be suitably rewarded by both church and state.

The sheik ul Islam at Constantinople heretofore prohibited the publication of the Koran in the vernacular on the plea that since no translator could strictly conform to the original he would be sure to make mistakes and those mistakes would be sacrilege. In this the sheik has usually been supported by the prime minister and the Young Turks, who, in spite of the liberal ideas on religion that some of them are known to entertain, cannot go against popular feeling on so important a matter. But it seems that Ibrahim Bey Hilmy, who is master of both Arabic and Turkish, to say nothing of Persian, Hebrew and Greek, has produced a translation which the leaders of Islam by a majority applaud. Thus is it that the sacred tradition of centuries is broken.—Constantinople Cor. New York Times.

Gunpowder For the Soil.

Brown gunpowder, manufactured for the purpose of destruction, is being turned into food. An experimenter has found that it makes an excellent fertilizer for garden vegetables, as it contains about 80 per cent of potassium nitrate. Large quantities of the powder made for navy use have been displaced by the newer smokeless powder, and the government authorities sought a way of utilizing the discarded explosive. In its new employment of adding to the country's food supply it is thoroughly wet and worked into the soil.—New York Tribune.

Our George in London.

Some Englishmen do not take kindly to the suggestion that a monument to George Washington should be placed in Westminster abbey. "Are we," asks the London Outlook, "to have a monument of Washington in the abbey, but none to the men and women and children who were his victims? Then let us be logical for once and erect another monument to the late President Kruger. Equally with Washington, he had the two necessary qualifications—he was the mortal enemy of England, and he persecuted a British population. What more is requisite?"

War's Mark on the Candy Trade.

Certain toothsome confections known as "Mexican kisses" were favorite bargain day candies in New York for a long time. Recently the signs in the shops carrying these sweets were changed to read "Pecan Maple Kisses."

"Why?" asked a lady shopper.

The salesgirl raised her eyebrows as she answered, "Because of the trouble in Mexico, of course."

"That really made a difference?"

"You'd be surprised to know how much."

INVEST FOR ADVANCE- MENT OF THIS STATE.

Home Money Should Go for Progress Here and There is Opportunity.

The New York church which sold its property in a down-town section because so many foreigners were moving in there and then donated the proceeds to foreign missions isn't in the same class with the Maine man who shouts that Maine is going backward and then invests his money in Western railroad stock.

Maine is awakening to the fact that Maine means prosperity and advancement in Maine, but that Maine money invested in other states means prosperity and advancement for the other states. Maine people are thrifty, as a class, and they have sent many millions into the west. That money has earned other millions and the earnings have been re-invested. Aside from the comparatively small sums spent for living expenses, personal adornment and pleasures, the money has performed little good for Maine business.

Maine needs this money and the encouragement of home investment by her citizens. A few far sighted citizens have been working to this end for some years. One man had faith in Maine securities and has managed to amass a fortune in the development of properties represented by them. He is a firm believer in them today and never loses an opportunity to speak a good word for them.

The Develop Maine Movement is intended to encourage home investment, not only of money, but brains and youth. It will help the establishment of new factories, the tilling of run-out farms, the opening up of new territory, the awakening of villages that have apparently "gone to seed" and the development of natural resources, such as water power, building stone, timber tracts and vacation ground.

This movement is rapidly assuming shape and gathering members. It will soon be in a position to put an expert into the business field to "dig up" new industries and additional investors. By no means the least of this man's duties will be the education of investors in the financial centers to the possibilities of Maine securities.—Biddeford Journal.

NO FOUNDATION TO REPORT

In a Biddeford paper of recent date there appeared an article concerning Mr. Wm. J. Mewer of Old Orchard to the effect that the local Board of Selectmen has requested Mr. Mewer to resign from his position as Chief of Police. The article caused much local comment and speculation for a short length of time or until it was learned that there was little truth in the statements made.

Mr. Mewer has been considering the advisability of continuing in office since he has so many other interests which demand his attention and had informed the Board of Selectmen that he did not desire to continue in office. However, the Selectmen prevailed upon him to remain in for the time being in the hope that he might change his mind.

Then in some manner the article referred to appeared. The Board of Selectmen regretted that such a bold misstatement of facts should have occurred and immediately forwarded to the Biddeford Record the following letter, which is self explanatory:

OLD ORCHARD, ME., July 4, 1914.
To the Editor of the Biddeford Record:

A lengthy article appearing in your issue of July 3, relative to the resignation of William J. Mewer, Chief of Police of Old Orchard, has been called to our attention. In justice to Mr. Mewer we wish to emphatically deny that he has ever been requested to resign or that there ever was any occasion for such a request. We would gladly have him remain in office as we feel that his resignation at this time would be a detriment to the town. He has expressed his intention of resigning for business reasons well

THE PULMOTOR.

The York County Power Company has recently installed at its local headquarters a "pulmotor," which is a mechanical apparatus to cause artificial respiration. Most people are already acquainted with the machine through the wide publicity which it has had in the press.

It is not run by electricity as many suppose, but is operated by hand, and takes oxygen from attached tanks.

It is hoped that every resident will bear the pulmotor in mind and should occasion arise press it into service.

The Power Company is to be thanked for their interest in the community. However, they say they will feel amply repaid should it be instrumental in saving a human life. The company also extends a cordial invitation to all to visit their offices on Old Orchard street and inspect the machine.

AT WHITE'S CAFE.

White's Cafe continues to attract a large number of diners as usual. The cabaret concert proves very entertaining to a large number of music lovers. Mrs. H. P. Renouf is in charge and has to assist in entertaining Miss Olive O'Dea, Miss Anna Cartier, sopranos, Mrs. Edward Leonard, contralto, Albert Cartier, tenor, and Miss Myrabelle Renouf, child soprano.—Adv.

known to us, and if he does so it will be entirely voluntary on his part and greatly regretted by us. Anyone conversant with the facts well knows that the Board of Selectmen is not one of political faith and that there are two Progressives thereon, so that enforced resignation for political reasons is absurd and entirely without foundation.

We have endeavored to prevail Mr. Mewer to remain in office and trust that we may be successful in our efforts.

In justice to all concerned we would ask that you give this letter the same prominence that you gave the article referred to.

Respectfully yours,

NEARLY DROWNED

John H. Wildes, Jr., of 29 Linden street, Portland, narrowly escaped drowning while in bathing here last Sunday, two other Portland young men, Councilman Geo. C. Kern and Douglas F. Conrod, figuring prominently in the rescue of the drowning man. Kern, a former Bowdoin foot ball star, swam to the assistance of Wildes, reaching him just as he was going down for the third time and by a valiant struggle kept the unconscious man's head above the waves until a rescue party, under the leadership of Conrod, arrived with a boat.

Wildes, who is a man of 30 years, weighing more than 220 pounds had swum out about 150 feet from the shore but when he turned to swim back to the beach he was caught in a receding tide and strong undercurrent. For several minutes he struggled in the waves, losing rather than gaining ground, when he became exhausted in his fight against the current which was carrying him out slowly. Finding himself helpless against the ocean forces he cried for help, Kern and Conrod had been swimming and paddling their canoe through the surf and were just landing when the cries of the helpless man reached them. The appeal for help was immediately answered by Kern, who plunged in to go to Wildes' rescue and swam with considerable speed to his side. Before Kern was able to reach the helpless swimmer Wildes had gone down twice and was just sinking for the third time, with one hand clenched tightly over his nose and the other feebly battering the waves when Kern grabbed him by the hair and pulled his head above the water. Spectators viewing the scene from the shore said it was a remarkable rescue.

KERN'S STRENGTH TAXED.

Kern's strength was completely taxed in keeping Wildes' head above the waves and he was unable to proceed shoreward. Meanwhile Conrod, who had followed Kern into the water, turned about when he saw that Kern could reach Wildes' but that a boat would be necessary and swimming ashore secured the assistance of Gordon Cushman and George Milliken in launching a boat from the sands. Their work was hindered by the lack of oars, but swimming and pushing the boat before them they finally reached Kern and the man he had rescued, who was now unconscious and pulled the two, who were both in a precarious condition, into the boat and pushed them ashore.

Wildes was resuscitated without the aid of a physician after his body had been rolled over a boat and stimulants administered.

Kern, who on Saturday in company with Conrod had paddled from Portland to Old Orchard in a canoe, was thoroughly exhausted after his struggles to save the life of Wildes.

Mrs. Wildes was resting on the sand when the shrieks for help were heard. When she recognized her husband as the victim she became almost frantic but was calmed when assured of his safety.

PASSING COMMENT.

The Public Convenience Station.

When you stop and consider, Mr. Old Orchard voter and citizen, you will realize that it is now nearly two years since the first movement was made toward the construction of a Public Convenience Station. And still we seem little nearer the construction of such a place than we were before. Why is this? Several times according to our best recollection there was an appropriation made and then deferred. And it was only about a month ago that a whole evening was wasted at a town meeting and not a blessed thing accomplished. It seems a very great pity that such is the case. Everyone knows how badly such a place is needed and why can't your minds be made up as to how it shall be brought about?

Sidewalk Vending.

We note that certain merchants and vendors are using the sidewalks to display their goods upon. It is to be hoped that the Board of Selectmen will mark the limit and see that such display and vending is stopped.

Old Orchard Street Blockade.

Upon numberless occasions everyone is caused inconvenience by the blocking of Old Orchard street by trains. It seems that the patience of Old Orchard people is remarkable, for certainly in no other community would such a blockade be allowed to two streets at the same time by even such a great corporation as the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Peddlers.

The common or garden variety of street peddler or fakir is always a great nuisance. So far this season they have not been very bothersome. However, we trust that the town fathers will see to it that they place a very high license on such and that they will also caution the Police Department to keep careful watch and to bring before the Court all those who are caught without a license.

New Lights.

The new lights which have been placed on the beach are a very great improvement and much favorable comment is being heard. The timid need no longer fear a stroll on the beach after dark. The added attraction of so many lights along the more prominent thoroughfares is proving an asset also.

The Ball Team.

The rainy weather of Tuesday prohibited the game scheduled between the Biddeford & Saco team much to the chagrin of the players. However, today they will meet the Fort McKinley aggregation and it will no doubt prove an interesting game.

THE MAINE CENTRAL R. R.

More closely associated with the advancement of the State of Maine than any other business is perhaps the Maine Central Railroad.

This system comprises practically all steam railroads east and north of Portland. It has grown up and advanced with the progress of the State. Its officers and directors are all Maine men. For a time it was included in the once famous N. Y. N. H. & H. system but has been completely divorced and all well wishing Maine people will hope that it will stay so.

Among the many progressive things which they are doing for the advancement of the State is that of listing and compiling our agricultural resources. And along that line they have issued a very attractive booklet telling where farms may be had and what crops may be grown with the best success. The booklet is called "The Agricultural Possibilities of Maine" and for your information we will reprint the following from its title page:

The State of Maine.

Has the most accessible and cheapest Agricultural land in the East.

It entertains approximately 500,000 Summer Visitors each season.

It rivals Switzerland in climatic conditions for Sport and Recreation during the winter.

It produces the finest flavored fruit, grain, vegetables and dairy products in the country.

Its products are in constant demand by 7,000,000 consumers, who can be reached within 12 hours.

Property values are steadily increasing.

Capital is readily interested in home investments.

Emigration to the West is thought of no longer.

Young men are no longer obliged to look for inducements far from New England. They are at home, within reach of all, awaiting development.

Water Powers, Farms, Factory Locations and other Business Opportunities, are available for all.

If interested, write us. Address Industrial Bureau, Maine Central Railroad, Portland, Maine.

SURF ECHOES OF OLD ORCHARD PEOPLE.

A visitor to Old Orchard the other day, sat on the beach watching a fair and very fat bather disporting herself in the surf. He knew nothing of tides, and he did not notice that each succeeding wave came a little closer to his feet. At last an extra large wave washed over his shoe-tops. "Hey, there," he yelled at the fair fat bather, "Quit your jumping up and down, do you want to drown me?"

"No, Willie, dear," said an Old Orchard mother, "no more cakes to-night. Don't you know you cannot sleep on a full stomach?"

"Well," replied Willie, "I can sleep on my back."

A New York gentleman recently entered one of the barber shops on Old Orchard St. and told the barber to cut his hair (a la mode). The barber set to work and completely cut all his hair off.

The gentleman looked in the mirror, and, seeing the state of his head, was enraged. He demanded why his hair had been cut in that manner.

"I cut it as you ordered it," answered the barber. "I understood you to say you wanted it all mowed."

THE SEASHORE LOT.

It is not necessary to tell those acquainted with Old Orchard about the Seashore lot, so-called, because it was once the site of the famous Seashore Hotel. This is the lot bounded by Old Orchard and Staples streets, the sea wall and Grand avenue, and directly in front of the B. & M. station, and owned by Mr. Frank Staples.

It is by far the most valuable and most noticeable piece of property here. It is in fact the keystone lot to a greater Old Orchard. Since the great fire of 1908 which destroyed so many of our better hotels it has been decorated with small buildings of a miscellaneous character which have not been worthy of the ground upon which they stood. It is an ideal spot for a large and modern hotel and so soon as a building of this character is erected here just so soon will our town begin a new era of prosperity.

The owners of the property have been offered at various times sums of money ranging from thirty-five thousand to forty-five thousand dollars of which we are certain and we have heard that fifty thousand has been offered.

Most of us presume that a man's property is his castle to do with as he sees fit, and yet most of us hope that a man will improve his property and thus improve the neighborhood. So far its owners have not felt inclined to dispose of it, using the argument that the property as it stands yields good interest as it is, so why improve the property, which is a very good argument. And to be fair, if you or I owned the same property and were not ambitious we would probably feel the same. But the nub of the argument is this, those of us who want to see bigger things for Old Orchard want to see this lot improved and we suggest that the improvement might be brought about in the following way:

The property is assessed slightly in excess of fifteen thousand dollars. Its value is not questioned and a ready purchaser can be found at forty thousand dollars. So long as it remains in its present condition why not tax it on its real value. But if any party or parties want to put up a large and modern hotel and invest a sum ranging from one hundred to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, those parties should be encouraged by an exemption of taxes for a period of years.

Next week we will offer a suggestion about the lot on the sea wall in front of the Old Orchard Hotel.

Much complaint is heard each season from people whose children romp during the day on the beach about speeding automobiles.

In one instance especially has it been brought to us quite pointedly wherein a real estate man was trying to sell a party a lot along the sea wall and was told that they would not think of purchasing because the beach was not considered by them a safe place for their children to play because of the automobiles.

It seems that the board of selectmen should give this a moment of their attention and endeavor to prohibit automobiles from the beach altogether.

Too many people are possessed with the idea that a summer resort building only needs be a roof to keep out the bad weather. If you are to invest in a building why not insist that the building shall have been built well and with permanency. Old Orchard has too many buildings of the temporary sort, and badly needs houses of a better class.

The head of the Pinkerton detective agency says "crime movies" are the most powerful influence in the country today towards making criminals out of sub-normal boys and girls. This is no new opinion. It has been held by thousands ever since this type of film assumed its present popularity. The question is how to end an evil which has become so thoroughly established.—Troy Record.

Demanded Her Rights.

Lawyer—You say you told the cook to get out of the house the minute you found it was on fire and she refused to go?

Mrs. Burns—Yes; she said she must have a month's notice before she'd leave.—National Food Magazine.

"James, them Comeups have no more money than what we got, and they say we ain't got no prestige."

"Well, you go out tomorrow, Maria, and jest order all of it you want."—Baltimore American.

IN THE WOODLAND.

My quiet hours of the Sabbath are passing and the sun is bending low in the west; but the faithful little dog needs exercise, so I take my way across field and pasture toward the woodland. Passing the old cemetery now well and permanently enclosed, wherein stands a monument erected in memory of those who first settled on the farm. I cross to the old Googins estate, sold many years ago, and find myself in a beautiful little grove of oak and pine where once was a hay-field for Nature soon claims her own when man ceases his work of cultivation. I pass old trees familiar to my eyes from the days of boyhood and new growth and enter a path that is much traveled in summer time as it forms a connecting link between Ocean Park and the Campground. A clearing was made here years ago for a street by a man of enterprise,—but the curtain falls on the scene of life's activities and ever on some unfinished work, some hoped for good still unattained. Now I cross the railroad track and am in the woodland with its grand old pines and cool shade of hemlocks, its soft carpet of dry spills and on the edges of the little brooks the graceful ferns are plentifully seen. Nemo has a love of the wild and is happy, running now here, now there, never long out of sight, usually overtaking me with a sudden rush and making mute but easily understood demonstrations of affection and joy. I pause in my walk near the borders of the "old marsh" and slowly return. The sun is sending level rays through the forest, the summer wind breathes gently through the tree tops and the sound of the sea is faintly heard; but what a sound of bird music falls on the ear! The song of thrushes and other birds that seek seclusion, here make melody in the wildwood and this is within the borders of Ocean Park, forbidden ground to sportsmen,—can it be possible that the little songsters realize their safety and pour out the joy of their hearts in their sweetest strains of song? I must say more of these old pines, they are lofty trees and old and have been spared the stroke of the woodman's axe while most of their brothers have been laid low. They would have great value in the eyes of a lumberman in these days of high prices, many dollars in a single tree,—how great the change from the times when the old farmers cut down such trees and drew the butt logs to the Saco mills and sold them for one dollar apiece, the remainder of the tree being used in fencing or perhaps left to rot in the woods. It is one of the charms of this town that, if one wishes to be away from the bustle of travel and traffic for a brief hour these woodland solitudes can be reached in few minutes' walk and if some world worn and weary one is induced to seek them and find there an hour of peace in these happy summer days, this sketch of mine, humble though it be, will not have been written in vain.

UNCLE WALT SAYS:— "INVEST WISELY."

Take your bundle from the chest and with wisdom it invest; you will find that scheme the best ever found; no one pities or condoles with the chaps who lose their rolls buying mines which are but holes in the ground. Better far is five per cent.—it will bring you more content than some hot air from a gent selling stocks; and the man who's truly wise bricks from strangers never buys; and he (when not swatting flies) guards his rocks. Too much hurry to get rich often lands men in the ditch, where they raise, in doleful pitch, their lament, muttering, "That deal was raw! 'Twas the worst we ever saw! It were better far to draw five per cent.!" When your roll's dropped out of sight and you are a saddened wight, people say, "It served you right—you're a chump!" Scornful words and ribald jeers keep on sounding in your ears till your eyes are shedding tears like a pump. If at home you use your cash (while the dupes buy green goods trash) you're not apt to go to smash, out and down; and your neighbors will arise, saying, as they swat the flies: "He's a treasure and a prize to this town!"—Walt Mason.

Economy.

Economy is the science of buying a two dollar hat for $3.75 when a good one may be had for $4. It is a harmless and fascinating pursuit for those who can afford it, but a poor man has no business to fritter away his time and substance on such extravagances. Women are particularly addicted to it and often become so skillful that they are able to get through January without encroaching on their April allowance. Men who have such wives are naturally very proud of them and are willing to redouble their efforts, if necessary, in order to provide them with the means to develop the habit.—Life.

Hopeless.

"Perkins will never make a good golf player," remarked the first golf bug.

"No," replied the second golf bug; "he neglects his game to attend to business."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Bamboo Sap In India.

In India the sap of the female bamboo is used for medicinal purposes. "Tabasheer," or "banslochan," is sold in all Indian bazaars, as it has been known from the earliest times as a medicinal agent. It is also known in Borneo and was an article of commerce with early Arab traders of the east. Its properties are said to be strengthening, tonic and cooling. It has been analyzed and has been shown to consist almost entirely of silica, with traces of lime and potash. From its remarkable occurrence in the hollows of bamboos the eastern mind has long associated it with miraculous powers.—London Standard.

Daintily Embroidered Towels

For Pretty Summer Guest Rooms

EMBROIDERED TOWELS.

THE woman who has many week end parties or who entertains much at her summer home has now need of a large assortment of fancy towels. The illustration shows three popular designs. One of these has scalloped edges finished in buttonhole stitch. Above it is a floral spray with a neat wreath in which the monogram may be worked. Some women do not like the towels with embroidered borders, claiming that they fray when laundered. For such the hemstitched towels shown may be liked. One of these has a simple fleur-de-lis pattern. The other is a floral design combined with eyelet work. The embroidering of towels is such a simple matter that they can be easily and quickly done at home. Stamped patterns can be purchased for attractive patterns, or simple designs may be sketched on the linen with a pencil.

Miss Flirt is causing talk today,
Fell off the pier.
The gossip old ladies say
That it looks queer.

There were some lovely men in sight.
She gave a yell
And they soon got her out all right
As things befell.

The ladies wonder what she meant;
They talk a lot.
Was the affair an accident,
Or was it not?

THIS WEEK ON THE PIER.

Three big vaudeville acts have delighted the crowds on the Old Orchard Pier this week, and today three new ones have come and will entertain folks for the balance of the week. The motion pictures which are shown both in the casino and on the end of the Pier are changed every day. This makes it possible for one who enjoys the "movies" to go out on the pier at any time and still see different films.

The big advantage of the outdoor pictures is readily being appreciated by those who enjoy the cool sea air, where you can go and sit out over a large ocean and view the world in motion pictures.

The Punch and Judy show which is given between an intermission of the orchestra has made a hit with the young ones, and it is surprising how the old folks enjoy it, too. It's a feature that you don't get everywhere.

The casino is the finest in the State, and the floor is in excellent condition. Both the old and new dances are enjoyed by all, while the celebrated Philharmonic Orchestra, which has played on the pier for a number of years, plays all of the latest popular tunes for all kinds of dances, including the waltz, two-step, one-step, hesitation and maxixe.

Don't forget that there is a concert afternoon and evening on Sundays. There is usually a well known classical photo play shown in a number of reels.

Are you an angler? Fish from the end of the pier.

Training Maids.

A little patience and system in dealing with maids, especially if they be young ones, without very much experience, will often work miracles. Even if they are older and can justly claim to be experienced, there is always much for them to learn in entering a new household.

Every mistress has her own particular way of having certain things done, and the new girl must conform to this way even if she has been accustomed to doing the same work in a different manner.

One mistress encourages her "green" girls by engaging them at a small wage and increasing it as they master various menus. When the maid can prepare all of them she is given the sum that her ability would earn for her anywhere.

It is not hard to teach a girl to cook by this system. Most girls will take a deeper interest in their cooking than they will in many other branches of housework, and if instructed by this or some other equally good and definite system they will try harder and hence learn more rapidly than when instructed in a haphazard way.

Correct Stationery.

The newest note paper is very long and very narrow and fits into envelopes of precisely the size of the unfolded sheet. This style is smartest in dark cream and pale gray tones.

Then there are the sheets of heavy linen in buff, blue and gray that must be once folded lengthwise to fit into their envelopes, and there are the sheets of very thin but stout white paper which fold once to fit into square envelopes lined with a color. These formerly were used only for foreign correspondence, but now they are coming into domestic use.

Correspondence cards never have been daintier, and everybody is now using them at the slightest excuse. Some of them are absolutely square, and some of them are long and narrow, with beveled edges.

Artistic Compliments.

It is not the compliment that is, so to speak, laid on with a trowel that really reaches our hearts. No; it is the delicate and subtle sort that we do not recognize as a compliment.

This species is best and most successful when it is expressed by deeds rather than by words.

Let some one show a decided liking for our society when there are others present who are more attractive or clever or famous and how can we help but be pleased?

If their amusements and interests take a second place and ours usurp the first, then that, too, is a delightful form of flattery.

Table Usage.

Good manners at the table stamp the well bred person. The knife is used only in cutting the food, never to raise any particle of it to the mouth. A few general rules follow:

Lettuce is cut with the fork, a small portion rolled about the tines and thus eaten.

Oranges are peeled, cut or divided into quarters and eaten, or cut in half and eaten with the orange spoon, a spoon narrower and smaller than the ordinary tablespoon.

The Unfriendly Reminder.

Of all trying things the "I told you so" person is one of the worst. When you confide any trouble to them you are usually met with an "I told you so, but you wouldn't listen to me," which is distinctly annoying. They really might have the generosity not to rub it in. There is very little chance that you would have forgotten their warning, and they might refrain from the petty satisfaction of reminding you of their superior wisdom.

The Family Bore.

Friends and even members of a family ought to take care not to overstep the border line between interest and inquisitiveness. If one has been out and comes back looking pleased, it is annoying to be immediately asked, "Well, whom have you been with?" and then requested to go into details of the pleasant time spent.

Cordiality to Newcomers.

A resident of a town or village can call with propriety on any newcomer and the newcomer should return this call if she desires to continue the acquaintance. The time of calling is settled by the customs of the place, but after two o'clock and before six is generally correct.

When to Call.

Ceremonious calls are not made between women in the morning, evening or on Sunday afternoons. A man, owing to the exactions of business, may call in the evening and on Sunday afternoon.

Tea Invitations.

Invitations to afternoon teas are very often in the form of visiting cards. On the lower left hand corner of the card write "At home from 3 until 6. Thursday, April 20."

Hospitality to Strangers.

Before an invitation of hospitality is given to a stranger a call should first be made.

The Tower of Lions.

Just outside the Syrian port of Tripoli, lying alongside the railway track, is a famous old fort, known as the Tower of the Lions, from the tradition that it was built by Richard the Lion Hearted of England. As a matter of fact, it is one of six such forts built by the crusaders to protect the coast, only one other of which exists, and this one is in a poor condition. Now the Tower of Lions is to be demolished to make room for the railway, much to the discomfort of archaeologists, who would like to see this old tower preserved as a relic of antiquity.—Scientific American.

He Whistled to the Queen.

There is a resident of Sunbury who will feel uncomfortable in his mind for a long time to come. He was walking behind two women in the park, when he noticed the younger of them drop her handkerchief. He picked it up and, to attract the owner's attention, whistled loudly as he ran to restore it.

The owner thanked him politely. Afterward, to his confusion, he learned he had been whistling to the queen and Princess Mary.—London cable to New York Times.

Filmy Lingerie Favored For the Smart Woman's Summer Wardrobe

PINK CRAPE CAMISOLE.

ALL the lingerie the modern woman needs for summer wear may be packed in one compartment of her dress trunk, even if garments by the dozen make up what she considers an adequate supply. So soft and filmy are the new undermuslins that a whole set nowadays, including chemise, drawers, camisole, petticoat and silk stockings, will not weigh more or take up more space than one garment of her grandmamma's time, when substantial cambric, tucked and frilled with starched embroidery, was the mode.

Even the corset accompanying the set will not add materially in weight, for modern corsets are negligible affairs, made of woven silk fabric and supplied with only four bones, two at the back to support the lacings and the steels in front, and these bones and steels are scarcely longer than a lead pencil.

Chiffon is the fancy for summer underwear. The idea of a chiffon nightgown is rather startling, but such garments are worn.

Closely woven chiffon cloth is used, and this is accordion plaited or gathered closely so that the semitransparent garment falls in soft, clinging folds. Sometimes a sash at the hips confines the gathered or plaited chiffon in the long, slim lines that even intimate garments must follow now.

The laces used by Paris makers of exclusive lingerie are of the filmiest sort. Plain nets are high in favor, and there are net top laces which are so soft and fine that they may be formed even into ruffles and flounces without adding materially to the bulk of a garment.

The dainty underbody illustrated is called a camisole. This one was fashioned of pink tango crape, with pink ribbons and white lace. Simply cut in kimono style and held in at the waist, it makes a useful garment to wear under the sheerness of the fashionable blouse.

Not Their Exclusive Specialty.

Parrots are not the only ones who talk a good deal without a satisfactory excuse.—Atchison Globe.

HOW TO COOK A HUSBAND.

A good many husbands are spoiled by mismanagement. Some women go about it as if their husbands were bladders and blow them up. Others keep them constantly in hot water. Others let them freeze by their carelessness and indifference. Some keep them in a stew by irritating words and ways. Others roast them. Some keep them in pickle all their lives. It cannot be supposed that any husband will be tender and good managed in this way, but they are really delicious when properly treated. In selecting your husband you should not be guided by the silvery appearance, as in buying a mackerel, nor by the golden tint as if you wanted salmon. Be sure you select him yourself, as tastes differ. Do not go into the market for him, as the best are always brought to your door. It is far better to have none, unless you will patiently learn how to cook him. A preserving kettle of the finest porcelain is best, but if you have nothing but an earthen pipkin it will do with care. See that the linen in which you wrap him is nicely washed and mended with the required number of buttons and strings nicely sewed on. Tie him in the kettle by a strong silk cord called comfort, as the one called duty is apt to be weak. They are apt to fly out of the kettle and be burned and crusty on the edges, since like crabs and lobsters you have to cook them, while alive. Make a clear steady fire out of love, neatness, and cheerfulness. Set him as near this as seems to agree with him. If he sputters and fizzes do not be anxious; some husbands do this till they are quite done, add a little sugar in the form of kisses, but no vinegar or pepper on any account. A little spice improves them, but it must be used with judgment. Do not stick any sharp instruments into him to see if he is becoming tender. Stir him gently; watch the while lest he lie too flat and close to the kettle and so become useless. You cannot fail to know when he is done. If thus treated you will find him very digestible, agreeing with you and the children nicely, and he will keep as long as you want unless you become careless and set him in too cold a place.—From "A St. Mary Guild Cook Book."

A CHERUIT FROCK.

This gown, designed by Cheruit, the famous Frenchman, is built of black and white striped suiting. The bodice is belted across the front at the normal waist line, but hangs loose and low at the back. Sash ends of white pique are attached to the belt. The back buttoning and the straight cut of the skirt are most appropriate for young girls' wear.

THE BANDANA CLUB.

The popularity of the Bandana Club is asserting itself by its ever increasing membership. At its last meeting twenty-eight new members were admitted, consisting of many of the prominent business men as well as several from Biddeford.

The officers of the club are doing their best to make the club-room attractive for the members and visitors. Within the past two weeks a Sterling Piano has been purchased for the benefit of the members. The club is a strictly social one and the members are anxious to have suitably furnished quarters. Every one in Old Orchard should assist and help the members establish a first class organization for the young men of old Orchard.

This paper is glad to help in every way and we have it in mind to start a subscription toward the expense of the piano. What you can contribute conveniently toward the cause will be greatly appreciated by the boys of the club we can assure you. From week to week we will print the names of contributors and the amounts contributed. Boost and contribute toward a good cause. Contributions to the Bandana Club:

Summer Care of the Eyes

After an all day ride or a long tramp the burned, dry feeling of the lids can be assuaged by a weak solution of boric acid.

To make the solution take one part acid powder to thirty parts water. Drop in the eyes. It is easily accomplished by pulling down the lower lid to form a little socket.

If the lids smart and burn rub very weak camphor on the lashes.

In the case of a slight discharge there is a new form of silver which is remarkably effective, but this should be used at first only on an oculist's prescription.

The end of a perfectly clean handkerchief or a bit of cotton which has been slightly dampened to smooth the fine lint should be employed to brush away the offending particle. A handkerchief which has been used for any other purpose must never be brought near the eyes.

The girl who wears glasses should be sure that the center of the lens is directly in front of the eye. If headaches come on unexpectedly go to an optician and have him straighten out the frame or nose piece.

To remove a bit of sand or dust from the eye look up while some one else pulls down the lower lid gently. Failing to find it there, the patient should look far down at the floor, while her companion puts one finger on the middle of the lid quickly, but not harshly, and turns it back by the lashes with the other hand.

It is looking steadily up or down that makes this assistance effective.

Woman's World

Titled Daughters of Society Leaders Make Newport Season Gay.

DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH.

Newport is congratulating itself on the brilliancy of its social season. There are many distinguished guests present and expected. The beautiful and clever young Duchess Consuelo of Marlborough is the guest of her mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at Marble House. Other titled daughters of American families who may take part in the social festivities of Newport during the season are Lady Granard, the daughter of Mrs. Ogden Mills; Lady Camoys, daughter of Mrs. William Watts Sherman; Countess Szechenyi, daughter of Mrs. Vanderbilt; and Countess Guy de Lasteyrie.

The rank, beauty and public spirit of the Duchess of Marlborough have made her exceedingly popular in London society. Even Queen Mary has shown her liking for the young American woman who has been so generous with her wealth in relieving the London poor and devoting time and money to many movements for public betterment.

Her entertainments at Sunderland House are brilliant affairs, often graced by the presence of some member of the royal family.

Like her mother, Mrs. Belmont, the duchess is a suffragist, though not a militant one.

Her two boys, the elder of whom, the Marquis of Blandford, is heir to the dukedom, are in England in the care of their tutors.

THE VINE SCREEN.

Beautiful Effect in Nature That May Be Copied For the Lawn.

There is a beautiful curtain of hanging vines, stretching from one tree to another in a certain country place. It is the outgrowth of years, but it could be easily copied on a smaller scale by any one who has patience.

The curtain in question hangs from two old elm trees which stand about twenty feet apart. Virginia creeper is trained to grow up the trunk of the two trees to a height of about fifteen feet, and then it is trained along a strong wire fastened from one tree to the other.

The long tendrils of the creeper have grown many feet, and they hang down and intertwine until now they form a curtain, thick and strong, which reaches to within a few feet of the ground.

This curtain would make a satisfactory substitute for a conventional hedge in some situations. It could be copied with one of the thick growing annual vines, like hop or canary bird vine or balloon vine. Such a curtain could be trained to hang on one end of a sunny porch or veranda.

Of course the vines forming it would need gentle urging. The soil in which they are rooted should be rich and fine, and the vines should be scrupulously watered.

It might be better, in a sunny position, not to train the tendrils of the vine over wire, for wire becomes excessively hot and sometimes burns. Strong cord would be better.

Two Summer Hints.

To remove flyspecks from gilt picture frames beat the white of an egg lightly and add a half teaspoonful of baking soda; wipe the frames with this and then finish with a soft cloth. The legs of silk hose or the long arms cut from silk gloves make excellent cloths for this purpose. They are easily kept clean with soap and water and are easier to use than chamolins.

To clean a willow chair scrub with soap and water, rinsing thoroughly in tepid water in which a tablespoonful of borax has been dissolved. This will prevent its yellowing. Then pour warm water over the chair and set it in the sun to dry to keep it from getting brittle. This also serves to tighten the willow.

Leather Furniture.

Milk that is heated is excellent for cleaning leather furniture. Use soft cotton cloths and rub all over to take off spots and dirt. Then take a mixture of beeswax, melted and mixed with turpentine, one part wax to two of the turpentine. This should be rubbed in and soft, clean cloths used for rubbing off so dust will not settle.

VERANDA RUGS.

Grass or Rag Ones Are Much Used This Season.

Grass rugs hold precedence of all other sorts for the veranda floor. If the floor is tiled it is frequently left uncovered as the soft tones of the tiles are very decorative. But a rug saves wear on the floor, whether it is tiled or not. If the floor of the veranda is old it improves its looks greatly. Moreover, it makes the veranda less noisy. So the grass rug has come to enjoy a high place in the estimation of porch furnishers.

This year rag rugs are also a good deal used for veranda floors. They can be had in almost any color. If a special color is desired the rags can be dyed and woven to order. Gray or tan rugs, with borders at each end of colored stripes, are very good, and so are the hit or miss patterns.

The grass rugs are shown in new weaves and in many good colors. Those in various shades of green are still the most attractive for veranda use, unless the brown ones fit in better with the color scheme chosen.

The Great Trouble.

The great trouble with those of us that rob Peter to pay Paul is that we don't pay Paul.—Puck.

Kitchen Notes

The Fireless Cooker.

Make or buy a fireless cooker. It is unexcelled for stews, cereals, puddings and vegetables. A fireless cooker keeps the kitchen cool, saves labor and fuel and does not encourage flies, because there is no odor of cooking to attract them.

To manufacture a homemade cooker take a large wooden basket or box not less than sixteen inches high and fifteen inches across, an eight inch granite dinner pail holding about a gallon, with a tight fitting cover and some excelsior.

Pack the excelsior into the wooden bucket to the depth of about three inches and on this place the granite pail and pack the excelsior tightly around it to the top. If properly packed the pail can be lifted out of the excelsior without disturbing the packing.

To cook vegetables prepare in the usual way, put in the pail and boil for ten or twenty minutes in the pail.

Then place the pail in a box, pack the excelsior around it and pay no further attention to it until ready to serve the vegetables, which should be in a short time. However, as different cookers have different heat retaining properties the time can be best determined by experiment. With a fireless cooker there is no danger of having burned or scorched food.

Asparagus For Hot Weather.

Asparagus has medicinal qualities that are beneficial at this season. There are many ways of serving it, but the simplest way is the best. The tough ends should be cut off and the remaining stalks bound together in small bunches with a strip of muslin.

Boil in just enough water to cover until tender, but not soft. Cook about twenty minutes if the asparagus is young and fresh.

Remove the stalks from the water, drain thoroughly and place on toast.

With it can be served a sauce made of half a cupful of the water in which it has been boiled, a tablespoonful of butter, level tablespoonful of flour and half a cupful of rich cream.

The butter should be thoroughly mixed with the flour before it is added to the hot water and cream. An old fashioned way of serving asparagus is to cut the tender portions of the stalk into half inch pieces and boil them until they are tender, thoroughly drain and serve with butter, pepper and salt.

Peach and Rice Meringue.

Put rice on the fire in a saucepan of cold water. Stir occasionally while it is heating. Let boil five minutes; then drain in a sieve and pass cold water from the faucet through it. This is called blanched rice. Now cook a cupful of blanched rice and salt in three cupfuls of milk until tender and dry, add three egg yolks, one-quarter cupful each of butter, sugar and whipped cream. Make a border of rice on a serving dish that will stand the heat of the oven. Surround this with halves of peaches (fresh or canned), with skins removed. Inside the border place sliced peaches and rice in layers, sprinkling the peaches with sugar and giving the whole a dome shape. Cover

Huckleberry Muffins.

To make these take two cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a cupful of milk, an egg, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful of butter and a cupful of huckleberries. Sift the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar into a bowl; add the milk slowly, the well beaten egg and melted butter; mix well and add the huckleberries, which have been carefully picked over. Brush muffin tins with lard, put a spoonful of the mixture in each and bake thirty minutes in a moderate oven.

The After Meal Rest.

One should rest after meals if it is at all possible for a quarter of an hour at least. This is especially necessary after the chief meal.

Many people are addicted to the short nap after dinner, which is a good habit if the sleep is only a short one. But if the sleep is of two hours' duration it is decidedly bad for both digestion and health.

For the Children

At the horse show recently held at fashionable Tuxedo the members of the pony class attracted considerable attention. This class was made up of young folks who exhibited their favorite ponies and horses. Arrayed in the latest riding and driving habits, they presented a very smart, not to say sporty, appearance. Society's little folk are familiar with ponies from their infancy and as soon as they are able to sit in the saddle are taught to ride. They are also schooled in handling the reins and are altogether thoroughly versed in horse lore. The two little girls whose portraits are shown above are Misses J. Warner West and V. Carhart. They were exhibitors at the show.

An After Dinner Trick.

Tommy Brown, a little boy, tried this trick on some of his friends and was thought very clever. Just when dinner was nearly over Bridget quietly announced that the grocer must have forgotten to bring the nuts and raisins. The company were all more or less disappointed, but Tom, the host, seemed very angry at this omission. Impatiently he said to Bridget, "Fetch me the dish in which the nuts and raisins should have been served." Pretending to be very much annoyed, he flourished his own napkin vigorously over the empty dish; then, carefully lifting the napkin, much to the surprise of all, the dish was revealed full of nuts and raisins.

This is how Tom managed the trick. He had got Bridget to sew two napkins together all around the edges and to slit one across the middle. The space between the napkins made a bag, into which Tom had supplied the nuts and raisins. He held the bag between his knees, with another napkin over his lap. While he was gesticulating in apparent disappointment, he had quickly changed napkins. The trick was a clever bit of homemade slight of hand and all shouted at Tom's cleverness.

"Elephant Tag."

In playing the game called "elephant tag" each child takes the name of an animal—dog, cat, kangaroo, panther or anything he wishes, but one must be the elephant, and one must be the mouse. The elephant tries to catch all the animals except the mouse, and the mouse tries to catch the elephant. If the elephant touches one of the animals that animal must go into the menagerie (probably the front yard). He tries to get all the animals into the menagerie without getting caught by the mouse. If there are many children there can be two elephants and two mice. If one of the elephants is caught he is put into the menagerie, too, but he can be rescued if the other elephant touches him.

A "C" Game.

Each question can be answered by a word ending in "cy."

A stately C? Aristocracy.
A royal C? His excellency.
A deceptive C? Fallacy.
A criminal C? Piracy.
A much desired C? Currency.
A clever C? Policy.
An exclusive C? Privacy.
An aromatic C? Spicy.
A tempting C? Delicacy.
A merciful C? Clemency.

An Intelligent Horse.

A story is being told of the intelligence of a horse belonging to a rustic Scotchman of Ardow, Mull. It lost a shoe and, managing to get out of the field where it was grazing, traveled a considerable distance to a blacksmith, who was astonished to find the horse standing in front of the door holding up a foreleg. The horse was shod and galloped back home quite contented.

Teddy and Miss Rainy Day.

When Teddy meets Miss Rainy Day
He wears a rubber coat of gray.
A drooping hat protects his head,
A big umbrella's o'er him spread,
And on the street he seems to be
A blot of black and gray to me.

But if I peep beneath the rim
Of his umbrella, black and grim,
I find the loveliest surprise
Of laughing lips and merry eyes.
And I laugh back and quite forget
The grayness and the rain and wet.

And 'tis the very selfsame way
With what we call Miss Rainy Day.
Behind her cloak of dismal clouds
Gay little sunbeams lurk in crowds,
And if you look for them you'll see How nice Miss Rainy Day can be.

—St. Nicholas.

Dug His Own Grave.

A gravedigger named James Hambleton was buried alive in a grave at St. Stephen's church yard, Audenshaw, Ashton-under-Lyne, the other day. He had been digging a grave and was getting out when he fell backward and a large portion of the sides collapsed upon him. A conductor on a passing tramcar who saw the man's legs in the air ran to the spot and found the gravedigger buried headforemost. The man had ceased to struggle and was dead when extricated.—London Times.

Animated Flycatchers.

By forcing native laborers in the island of Principe, in Portuguese West Africa, to carry cloths covered with glue on their backs when working in places infested by flies sleeping sickness has been successfully combated in the island. The glue is dark and is the same color as the native's skin.

A Different Ending.

"Had quite an adventure lately. Gave an old gentleman my seat in a street car and he insisted on taking my card."

"And now he wants to give you $25,000, eh?"

"No; now he wants to sell me an encyclopaedia on dollar payments."—Pittsburgh Post.

OLD BEN BOLT

The Prize He Won and What He Thought He Would Lose.

By MYRA NORTHCLIFF.

His name wasn't "Old Ben Bolt," but everybody called him that, and strangers accepted it on the spot as singularly appropriate, for Captain Jim Staybolt's honest, kind blue eyes, his brown face and closely curling hair and his masterful yet good natured mouth made him indeed seem the embodiment of the famous "Ben Bolt of the salt sea gale."

He wasn't old at all, though he thought himself aged and beyond all the dreams of youth because he had just turned thirty-five. But then he had always had an abnormal modesty about his own masculine charms.

His head, albeit of pepper and salt, was filled with practical good sense that had brought him up from fisherman to superintendent and part owner of the Grantson company's big fleet of smacks.

He had his office in the cubby of a water stilled shanty at the end of the pier, and its window looked directly across at a certain young woman named Kate, dealing out candy, oranges and cheap cigars to the rolling crews of the boats.

There was a standing joke among the boys how the smoking habit took hold of everybody after he saw Kate.

It never got to her ears, though, for, notwithstanding the candy and cigars, there was a fine little line of reticence about the girl over which no one ever stepped, not even Hank Raynor, the vainest and most impudent fellow that ever trod a schooner's deck. But her pretty blushes and shining eyes gave the clew to her preference, and Raynor, who frequently consumed his entire wait buying a cigar, could not have been said to discourage the impression.

It is true the boys joked, but the majority of them swore as well, for the handsome Raynor bore no immaculate reputation among them.

"Cuss it!" said Dick Pearsall, mate of the Osprey schooner, savagely one night. "Why is it a woman can never see an inch from her nose when she's daffy on a man?"

"Marryin' takes that out of 'em, though," laughed old Captain Brown, who was on honorable drydock after fifty years of cod and halibut.

"Marryin'!" sneered the mate of the dandy, well built smack Lucinda V. "Marryin'! Raynor looks like a marryin' man, don't he? I ain't no masher myself, but I tell you that smarty is just tryin' to show off before us fellows. Marry her! Even if he wanted to he ain't fit to wipe her old shoes on!"

Nobody dissented. There were tongues in the fishing port that did not hesitate to declare that Raynor's skill as a fisherman was far inferior to the art with which he could wreck coasters for a living when the owners got tired of paying insurance and decided that it was time to collect some instead.

"All the same, he told me it was fixed up between 'em," insisted Captain Brown. "That's tellin', I s'pose, but he didn't say as there was anything private about it."

Unnoticed by the men, Captain Jim Staybolt had come up in time to catch the last words. He stopped a moment in the shadow of a column. When he moved on his face looked gray and drawn in the uncertain light.

"Get ready to take the Osprey and the Lucinda out next tide," he said evenly. "We'll have 'em unloaded in three hours more and ready for sea again."

He went back, and the group broke up. Pearsall as he turned caught a glimpse of his superior's face and wondered vaguely if "the boss" were ill.

With a fine sense of honor, Captain Jim himself had refrained from a look or word that might compromise Kate, but the memory of a chance touch of her fingers once when she passed back his change still sent a thrill over him. Since that day she had grown under his eyes to be the one desirable thing of his life.

He knew enough of Raynor to despise the man. Time and again he had all but prayed he might get actual cause for interference. Now the shattering of the dream seemed less his blunder than a crime.

A week afterward Kate's old father was struck by a falling block and laid on his bed, helpless for life. Her mother fell ill of typhoid. The superintendent saw the bloom fade from the girl's cheeks, to return only when Raynor appeared, and that in a nervous flush. He grew hot and cold alternately at the air of careless proprietorship the latter had lately assumed. Then suddenly the man announced that he was going away.

"Hank has got a ship," Captain Jim heard Kate confide to another girl. "It's a schooner running out of South Amboy for Norfolk, and the owners have promised him a raise in a few months, and then, if father and mother are able to be moved"—

Captain Jim lost the rest, but a sharp thrust went through him, whether of anguish or relief he could not have told. A month later came news of a shipwreck on the New Jersey coast.

The dispatches said openly that there were suspicious circumstances about the wreck, but as the captain, Hank Raynor, was announced as among those drowned it was impossible to do much investigating.

On that very day Kate failed to appear at the pier.

Day by day for a blank, wretched week Captain Jim faced the empty stand opposite his window. Then he went down to the waterside street and found there destitution, at once pitiful and reassuring.

"It isn't your love I am asking for, dear," he said to her gently as at the end of a half hour he found himself holding her trembling fingers and smoothing her hair. "I couldn't expect that. But if you will give me what is left, the right to take care of you and yours, God knows it will be a precious trust."

Captain Jim had no fine phrases, but months of effort had made him a marvel of self control. He stood quite still, though every nerve was tense with longing to clasp the slim little figure to his breast. In fact, he hardly dared breathe when at last Kate dropped her head against his arm for acquiescence and broke into soft sobbing. A guess at what was in his heart, he told himself, would have frightened her out of his reach forever.

The six weeks that followed were a mixture of paradise and purgatory to him. It was hard, indeed, to play the decorous, fatherly lover when his whole soul cried out for the touch of her lips on his and every swish of her dress against him set his pulses throbbing. But he did it, and well.

His paradise proved a fool's, however. Walking along the main street one evening, with Kate on his arm, Hank Raynor's unmistakable self passed the two almost at elbow touch. There was a livid scar along the apparition's cheek. Kate did not see him, but a pang like death went through "Old Ben Bolt." The sight of that handsome, devil-may-care face seemed to sound his doom.

During the next four and twenty hours Captain Jim worked out his bitter problem. Cost what it might to his own self respect, he would tell Kate the truth as he knew it concerning Hank Raynor. He could do that if she had been his young sister, but in honor he must free her from her promise to himself.

He had thought of a way out of her financial difficulties, but it was not necessary she should know that yet or, indeed, the cost to his own heart of these last few months.

"I have come to give you back what I asked that first night, Kate, but I must tell you something it will be hard for you to bear," he said to her hoarsely as he stood in the little parlor, whose very plainness had grown dear to him.

A flush ran into Kate's cheek, but it died there, leaving a white line around her lips. "Old Ben Bolt" gripped the back of the chair in front of him.

"I suppose you have seen Raynor?" he went on.

Kate's color rushed back in a rosy flood. Her eyes drooped for an instant; then, shy, but brave, they looked straight into Captain Jim's own.

"Yes, I have seen him and—his wife," she answered with a little laugh. "He brought her from Philadelphia. It—it was a good thing I had found out before that—that I didn't care most for him, after all, wasn't it, you dear 'Old Ben Bolt?'"

The room reeled round Captain Jim. Out of its chaos Kate's face grew flushed and smiling still, but with suspiciously luminous eyes. Then did this "Ben Bolt" give a great gasp as the truth burst upon him. He took two long strides with outstretched arms, and a second later Kate was quite lost in the big, warm embrace her dark hour had taught her was her heart's true haven.

THE SUMMER HOME.

Even Town Houses Are Transformed by the Use of Seasonable Furnishings.

Clever housekeepers have learned how to transform their town homes into inviting living places in the summer by denuding them of all the heavy winter furnishings and substituting the lightest possible chairs and ornaments—very few of the latter.

Nothing is cooler or prettier than a blue and white dining room for the summer. Matting in beautiful patterns can be had in these colors—not the dead white, of course, but the shade of natural wicker furniture, which may be substituted for the heavier pieces, even to the dining table.

Windows can be curtained with blue and white Japanese crape swung on rings so that it may be drawn easily.

Pretty blue and white china is sold now at a very low price and nothing is prettier than the eastern ware, although the old willow pattern has its admirers.

Pictures should be entirely removed from the summer dining room unless there is some special favorite.

COAT COLLARS.

Most of Them Are Attached to Little Chemisettes.

No coat is without its bit of white turning over at the collar. Most of these becoming white coat collars are attached to chemisettes, which are donned under the blouse of silk, lace or chiffon, or the collar may be part of a tub silk or handkerchief linen blouse worn under the coat.

Sheer white organdie is the popular collar material, and the smartest collars are cut double, seamed at the edge and without a hem.

If a single layer of organdie is used the hem is very narrow and is set in with hand stitches or a line of fine hemstitching.

Lace and embroidery collars are not as smart as these sheer organdie collars, though occasionally collars of very fine machine embroidery, mitered at the corners, are seen.

EMBROIDERED CRAPE.

Makes an Elegant Costume For Summer Afternoon Entertainments.

The gown shown here is of light crape combined with a darker shade. The latter is adopted for the collar, cuffs and the deep empiacement for the draped tunic. The coat is of the basqued style. The very novel high crowned straw hat worn with the costume is trimmed with an embroidered band.

Colored Glove Tips.

The tips of many gloves are colored. Occasionally the inside sections of the fingers are of a different color. Gray or champagne colors are worn to the exclusion of the white gloves so long popular.

USEFUL SUIT.

This Boy's Outfit May Be Easily Transformed Into a Bathing Suit.

BOY'S SUIT.

The little boy's suit illustrated here is made of blue flannel, with turned over linen collar and cuffs. The garment is presentable anywhere with collars and cuffs. With these removed it makes a neat little bathing suit. Lightweight mohair and wool is a material which may be adopted for the making of the suit if flannel is not liked. It may also be carried out in any of the lightweight or washable fabrics suitable for boys' suits at this season.

Playwright and Producer.

A good theatrical story was told by Jerome K. Jerome at the O. P. club dinner to dramatic authors.

"I spoke to an eminent producer not long ago," he said, "about a play a young friend of mine had sent to him. He remembered it.

"Ah, yes," he said. "Not at all bad. There's an idea in it."

"Later on it was produced, and after the show I went behind.

"Well," said the eminent producer, "what did you think of it?"

"Oh, all right!" I said. "It seems all correct. But what about that idea?"

"He didn't seem to understand.

"The idea," I reminded him; "you said there was an idea in it."

"He remembered then. 'Ah, yes,' he said. 'Yes; we had to cut that out.'"—Pall Mall Gazette.

Some Women Never Learn.

"You never put anything where it belongs," he complained.

"Why are you scolding me again, George?" she replied. "What have I done now that is wrong?"

"Every morning I find my knife and my keys in my right hip pocket. Won't you ever learn that I prefer to wear them on the left side?"—Chicago Herald.

HIS PRIVACY INVADED.

Knew There Was a Mistake Somewhere, and His Surmise Was Correct.

Once in awhile a man who has never been inside a theater more than once or twice in his life comes to Broadway for a supply of city impressions and experiences. One of these stepped into the lobby of a theater and said to the man in the box office:

"Give me a seat in one of them little rooms by itself."

He was given a ticket which entitled him to a box. Armed with this, he went around to the gallery entrance and climbed the long flight of stairs to the top of the house, where the ticket taker admitted him without question.

He found a seat, but seemed ill at ease and at the end of the second act went back to the doorman with a displeased frown.

"Look here!" he demanded petulantly. "What does this mean? What is all them people doin' in my box?"

He indicated the crowded gallery with a comprehensive sweep of his arm. When the nature of his complaint was realized by the staff he was duly conducted to the box that belonged to him in the middle tier.

"Nobody but you will be allowed to sit here," he was told in response to his anxious inquiry. "The place where you were sitting before is the gallery."

"I knew there was something wrong, and that is why I spoke of it," he explained. "I allow that the gallery is a box for the general public! Am I right?"

They assured him that he was right. —New York Times.

Baked Asparagus Tips.

Boil asparagus tips in salted water until tender. Have ready some slices of buttered toast. Arrange the asparagus in small mounds on the toast, sprinkle with buttered breadcrumbs and a little grated cheese and set in hot oven for five or eight minutes, just long enough to get perfectly hot. Pour over dish, just before serving, a little hot cream.

Raspberry Turnovers.

Roll out pie crust and cut in sections about four or five inches square. Put a spoonful of raspberry jam in center, fold over twice and press down the two ends and trim off with a sharp knife. Brush the tops with milk and bake in a hot oven.

Summer Economy.

Practice economy in small things. When using the oven for roasting bake a pie or pudding, bake the potatoes, eliminate the use of the other burners. Don't burn gas for toast to save a few pieces of stale bread.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

The Fly Menace.

It is said that the fly serves no good purpose. It is a mistake. He performs two very good services. He teaches the teachable to clean up and keep clean, and he kills off the others—that is, he assiduously works to cause a survival of the fittest.

Let us give the — —that is, the fly—his due, says Life and Health. While we give him credit for this much good, let us be among the teachable.

Let us see that nothing around our premises breeds flies. Let us shun the presence of flies in the house as we would shun poison. Let us screen effectually our doors and windows, so as to avoid stray flies and let us kill every fly that gets inside the sacred inclosure. Especially if there is a baby in the family the fly is dangerous. Funerals are expensive, and then we would miss baby.

Spencer at the Derby.

Herbert Spencer, the philosopher, once attended the Derby. Francis Galton, who was his guide, took notes of the jaunt: "All went off well, except that Spencer would not be roused to enthusiasm by the races. He said that the crowd of men on the grass looked disagreeable, like flies on a plate; also that the whole event was just like what he had imagined the Derby to be." Even the costumes of the men who shouted the odds was only what he had imagined them to be!

A Condition.

THE FIRST HOTEL AT OLD ORCHARD AND THE FESTIVAL OF WATERS.

In the year 1820, Mr. William Scammon, a grandson of Rev. John Fairfield, first minister of Saco, came to Old Orchard and opened for guests the Fairfield home, which stood where now is the Old Orchard House. He built a bowling alley at the eastern end, and many sleighing parties in winter, and driving parties in summer, came to this house from Saco and Biddeford. This was the first place for public entertainment at Old Orchard.

Everyone knows that the air of Old Orchard is invigorating and that the bathing is enjoyable, but few know that many years ago there used to exist a popular tradition that on the twenty-sixth of June the waters of the ocean were especially endowed with healing properties, that at this time they were "troubled," and "whoever stepped in was cured of whatsoever disease he possessed." This led thousands of the credulous and superstitious to flock to Old Orchard to be healed by bathing in the ocean. Little children and infants were "dipped" annually to insure safety against disease and death. From many miles around, early on the morning of the twenty-sixth, came vehicles of every description, bringing "the lame, the halt, and the blind," and others with almost every kind of illness, who were reverently "dipped," or bathed themselves in the rolling surf here. There were many accounts of the wonderful cures and benefits of bathing on this day.

This custom goes back to the ages of mythology. The Romans had their "Fontinalia," or religious feast of waters supposed to be presided over by nymphs, who took under their special care all who were sprinkled with the waters.

The Greeks had their sacred fountains, some of which were supposed to have healing properties.

With the spreading of Christianity, waters which had been considered sacred to some god or goddess, were dedicated to some church saint and called by his name. These fountains were common throughout Europe. Even now, in some parts of Ireland and Scotland they are considered sacred by many, who visit them annually to bathe in the healing waters. The early settlers on this coast came from England and Ireland, and with them came the customs of the old country. So our early settlers continued the custom of annually visiting some body of water. The beach and ocean at Old Orchard thus became the place for holding their Fontinalia, or Festival of Waters.

The first settlers visited the beach on the twenty-fourth of June, St. John the Baptist's day. But the day was changed when it was ordered that "There should be one General Court holden at Saco for the whole Province of Maine, every year on the 25th of June."

The court brought many people from all over Maine, and it was a great gala day. Those who came attended the court on the 25th, and rested from their journey, and the day following they came to Old Orchard to bathe in the ocean. Thus the celebration came on the 26th of June each year for many years.

LEGISLATION ON TUBERCULOSIS

48 States Have Laws of Different Kinds.

Legislation dealing with tuberculosis has been enacted in 48 states and territories of the United States, according to a comprehensive bulletin on this subject soon to be published by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Only in the states of Arizona, Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming, and Alaska, has the subject been given no legislative consideration.

State tuberculosis sanatoria to the number of 42 have been established in 33 different states. Special laws providing for the establishment of local hospitals by municipalities or counties have been passed in 14 states. In 34 states, laws are in force providing for the reporting and registration of living cases of tuberculosis. In four states, New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, special laws have been enacted giving state and local health authorities power to remove and detain tuberculous persons who menace the health of their families or associates. Six states, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, New York, and Texas, have laws which give the people the privilege of voting at general or special elections on the establishment of county or municipal tuberculosis hospitals. Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, Wisconsin, and Washington grant subsidies ranging from $3.00 to $5.00 per week to such local hospitals. Laws prohibiting spitting in public places have been enacted in more than 20 states.

Commenting on the problem of state legislation as it affects the prevention of tuberculosis, The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis says, "A law providing for the reporting and registration of every living case of tuberculosis is fundamental to any thoroughgoing campaign against this disease. Without a knowledge of the location of every case of tuberculosis, the disease cannot be controlled. Of equal importance also is legislation which will give cities, towns, and counties the authority to establish and maintain local hospitals for tuberculous cases. The control of tuberculosis is a local problem. Everything possible should be done to provide institutions easy of access, especially for advanced cases."

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT.

Last Thursday a very serious accident was barely escaped by an automobile party who were driving toward Saco from Old Orchard.

The car was a Ford and was driven by Dr. W. F. McCuen of Haverhill. In the party was Mrs. McCuen, the two McCuen children and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Campbell, also of Haverhill. They were returning from a week's outing spent at Wayne Lake, near Lewiston. They were driving along and chatting, when Mr. McCuen turned on to the car track to avoid a bad place in the road not hearing the electric car which was approaching from the rear. The electric was very close and approaching at a good speed. Mr. McCuen had just turned his wheel back into the road when the machine was hit. Mrs. McCuen who was in the seat near to the electric was thrown and badly shaken up and scratched in several places. The Ford escaped with a general shaking up, a crushed wheel and a bent axle. And the others in the party were fortunate in escaping injury. Mrs. McCuen was taken to a local hotel where she was attended by Dr. J. A. Randall and her husband, and Sunday she was taken to her home.

A PRAYER.

"Let me do my work each day, and if the darkened hour of despair overcome me, may I not forget the strength that comforted me in the desolation of other times. May I still remember the bright hours that found me walking over the silent hills on my childhood, or dreaming on the margin of the quiet river, when a light glowed within me, and I promised my early God to have courage amid the tempests of the changing years.

"Spare me from bitterness, and from the sharp passions of unguarded moments. May I not forget that poverty and riches are of the spirit. Though the world know me not, may my thoughts and actions be such as shall keep me friendly with myself.

"Lift my eyes from the earth, and let me not forget the uses of the stars. Forbid that I should judge others lest I condemn myself. Let me not follow the clamor of the world, but walk calmly in my path.

"Give me a few friends who will love me for what I am; and keep ever before my vagrant steps the kindly light of hope.

"And tho' age and infirmity overtake me, and I come not within sight of the castle of my dreams, teach me still to be thankful for life, and for time's olden memories that are good and sweet; and may 'the evening twilight find me gentle still.'" AMEN.

PASSING COMMENT.

SIDEWALK SIGNS.

Signs upon the public thoroughfare, and the display of goods upon the sidewalks of a town are a serious detriment to its general appearance inasmuch as they are as a rule cheap and gaudy things, lessening the neatness of their locality. Time and time again we have endeavored to bring these to the attention of the town authorities, but apparently with little success, for the abuse seems to continue.

BILL POSTING ON ELECTRIC LIGHT AND TELEPHONE POLES.

The persistency with which some of our local and enterprising business people show in their efforts to hide all of the telephone and electric light poles with their advertising matter would win praise for them in any other line of endeavor. We think that the one does it because his competitor does it, and that they individually know that it does not enhance the appearance of any locality. Why do they do it and why do the companies who own the poles permit their property to be so abused?

The first part of the week we have had some very exceptional weather, our hotels are rapidly completing capacity and our cottages are nearly filled for the summer months. The coming seven or eight weeks every one will be busy, either in enjoying their vacations, or else in endeavoring to entertain the vacationists. Then comes September, to many the loveliest and most pleasant month of the year, at this resort. September also means to the local man the summing up of how much he has gained by his efforts. Every merchant and business man should get together and "go after" conventions and large gatherings which could be accommodated here better than anywhere else in September and thus lengthen out the summer season.

The merchants in the vicinity of the railroad station are heard quite often commenting not at all favorable upon the speeding trains which daily run through the town without stopping or slowing their speed and raising in their paths great clouds of dust which gather in their various places of business.

What's in a name anyhow? One of our local business men has ever since we can remember been masquerading with the plain moniker of Edward or "Eddie" as some prefer to call him. But things will out, for only lately in going through a book of statistics, it was discovered that he had been christened Edward Alexander Everett—quite a formidable handle, eh, what? And while we are on the subject we will satisfy the curiosity of several whom we know to have wondered for some time what the N. H. stood for in one of our leading citizens' "John Henry" sign. Many guesses have been made and the best guess was New Hampshire. But for all time let us perish the thought, for we have it from him personally it stands for Newman Hall and not Never Home.

Whatever you do DON'T overlook the fact that the town of Old Orchard has today more houses and more accommodations than it ever has had. It is continually growing. The total assessment today is over one-third of a million dollars greater than it was at the time of the fire of 1908.

In the present method of assessing taxes there is considerable fault to be found. For when you are trying to interest an outside party in local property, it is always necessary to say that the assessment is low and the tax rate high. The same person is sure to ask why. You can only answer it is a habit, and then in turn he praises the advantage of an assessment on the real valuation. To any property owner it is a satisfaction to feel that property is fairly assessed on its real value and to feel that his neighbor's property is likewise assessed.

UPLIFTING THE PIG.

South Carolina Boy Proves That It Pays to Keep Him Clean.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has established a new rule; hogs must be showered, it declares.

Two South Carolina boys have had much to do with obtaining for the hogs a belated square deal. Also they have dealt a blow at the high cost of living and the high cost of hogs.

"Jerry" Moore raised 256¾ bushels of corn from one acre of land. "Terry" Dill, a 16-year-old Greenville County boy, at a cost of 3.8 cents a pound, raised a 308-pound pig.

"Terry" says that he keeps the pigs absolutely clean and that the animal "keenly relishes the daily attention" which he gives him.

"Terry's" pig was not the heaviest pig raised, but the boy, on the basis of cost, won over his nearest rival, whose pig was heavier, but was raised at a cost of 5.5 cents a pound.

"Terry" weaned the pig himself, built the pen, sheltered it from the north wind and got all the sunlight that was possible. He "manicured" the pig daily and kept a daily record of everything that happened.

The pig liked the manicuring immensely and demonstrated the theory of the Harvard professor that every pig would be a gentleman if he had a chance.

The pig caught cold and became hoarse, and "Terry" swabbed out his throat with kerosene and grease; the pig registered a 91-pound gain in one month.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the Harvard professor have done much to give the pig a square deal, but it remained for a 16-year-old boy to demonstrate that the pig is worthy of the "uplift."—Baltimore News.

A merry party of young people were entertained Monday evening at the summer cottage of Mrs. S. P. Dean on Cedar Ave. by her son, Carl, of Hallowell. Whist and other games were greatly enjoyed making the evening hours pass all too quickly. Refreshments of punch, fancy crackers and confections were served during the evening. Those present were Mrs. Moody and daughter, Miss Edna, of Hallowell; Mrs. McKenney and daughters, the Misses Bernice, Blanche, and Alice, and son Edward, of Natick; Miss Gertrude York of Biddeford; Miss Honor McCourt of Biddeford; Mr. E. S. Bucknam of Lewiston, Me.; Mr. E. L. Hayward of Somerville, Mass.; Mr. Fred Scruton of Lewiston, Me.

SURF ECHOES and the OLD ORCHARD MIRROR is on sale at all news-stands.

Published weekly at Old Orchard, Maine. The office is located over the Old Orchard Post-Office, telephone 14-12.

It is the aim of the paper to chronicle the social gossip, interesting events and general news of Old Orchard, Grand Beach, Pine Point, Ocean Park, Ferry Beach and Biddeford Pool.

Correspondence is desired, but the signature of the sender is requested merely as a matter of form to insure its reliability. The names of correspondents, however, will be treated in confidence unless otherwise desired.

PERCY R. RICH, Editor.

F. A. ELLIOTT,
Business Manager.

The first two weeks of July were not very encouraging ones to the local business people. But there is little satisfaction over regretting, so let us all boost for the coming weeks. A poor start with half a chance makes the best ending generally.

Certain people ought to be hit with the hammer they throw. Why "knock" when you should boost. Be a booster.

Use precaution. "Safety first."

Clean up the beach and swat the fly.

We never "scratch" our pen for less than twenty-five dollars? What????

If you don't like our paper, tell us about it. We would like to make it better.

We would like you to write to us and tell us how you like Old Orchard.

THE OLD ORCHARD HOUSE OCEAN FRONTAGE.

The Old Orchard House sea frontage we can best describe as follows. It is the lot next to the "Seashore" lot on the sea wall and bounded by Staples street and Grand avenue. Its appearance is not very attractive in its present condition being at times covered with blowing paper and always with coarse long sea grass. Through its center runs a brook which flows over the beach into the ocean. It is decidedly unattractive to say the least.

It has never been built upon by its owners fearing that such building would interfere with the view from the broad piazzas of the Old Orchard House. But its location makes the lot in itself a very valuable piece of property. It is in the center of the town and is daily passed by a greater majority of our inhabitants both year round and summer. It is an ideal spot for a park.

And if the suggestion appeals to those who exercise a franchise in Old Orchard, the realization of a park in this spot may be easily accomplished.

The brook should be covered up and drained out to sea, a bulk-head should be built and then it should be filled in to some extent and levelled with a soil that would readily grow grass. Perhaps some walks could be extended over it diagonally and a small bandstand placed in the center.

Following out the suggestion may we submit to the voters who want to boom our fair town and those who are interested and want to see this place the garden vacation spot on the Atlantic coast this idea about how it may be brought about.

Why cannot the townspeople make a proposition to the owners of the property that they wish to accomplish this immediately and offer to meet half of the expense of such an undertaking, the owners to meet the other half. And the owner in turn to be exempted from taxes on this particular piece of land so long as it remains a park, but should they who own it wish to sell or to build upon it, then they should pay the other half of the original outlay in improving.

An item appearing in the Portland Argus of yesterday quoted from the Rumford Falls Times an article touching rather strongly upon the so called "Old Orchard open liquor selling," and further strongly criticised Governor Haines and the York County Sheriff.

That paper being of an opposite faith to that of the before mentioned officials, the article hardly warrants more attention, and may be put down as an attempt to discredit the present administration.

Old Orchard, like every other community, has its faults as well as its virtues, and we are willing to wager that the localities in which the two papers are printed have as great evils as Old Orchard. Again, we do not know of any place in our town that is "openly selling liquors."

As far as our Governor is concerned, he seems determined in his efforts to enforce the law, and as for our York County Sheriff, Mr. Irving, and his deputies, they are certainly consistent in their efforts and it cannot be questioned that York County has seen a far more lax regime.

LEARNING TO SWIM.

Every paper feels it a duty at this season of the year to print an article impressing upon all and sundry the high wisdom of learning how to swim. Texts for such articles constantly appear in the news columns. We read of boating accidents in which some were drowned and some saved—and after the names of the drowned commonly appears the statement that they, alone, in the boat did not know how to swim. The fact that a strong swimmer is at times drowned through his recklessness, does not dilute the strength of this lesson. It was his recklessness and not his knowledge which killed him; and he would have had his recklessness, even if he could not swim a stroke.

Learning how to swim is great fun. There would be good reason for taking on the job if it were of no subsequent use. It is like learning a fascinating game. When a man or woman learns how to play tennis or golf, no life-saving accomplishment is acquired. The means justify themselves—do not have to wait for the end. But it is just as interesting to learn the trick of keeping afloat in the water, and then of paddling about it, and plunging headlong into it, and playing with it in many other ways. It is a splendid summer sport—and knowing how to play it, may save your life.

THIS WEEK'S PIER FEATURES.

Great crowds continue to enjoy the daily program offered on the Old Orchard Pier. Vaudeville, motion pictures indoors and outdoors, dancing, Punch and Judy, orchestral concert, fishing, large ocean breeze-cooled verandas, big comfortable chairs.

The three acts the first of the week delighted the folks, and today, there are three new ones coming. Blondell and Tucker, who will essay to entertain the old folks and young folks, with some comedy singing, talking and music. Well, everybody likes to hear a couple talk, and may be it might be gossip. It should be funny at any rate, so I guess that a trip out to the Casino will cheer us up a bit, possibly thrill us, for in addition there is Daredevil Johnny Reynolds, who arrived in town on the last train, just in time for the matinee, and one other act of which we, at this time only know of its coming. They forgot to send along their names and pedigrees.

Everybody likes the "movies," New pictures are shown every day on the pier. At night, if you would rather sit out under the light of the moon than dance, you can enjoy this year's innovation of the pier management, outdoor movies.

Of course if you dance, there is no better place in Maine than the pier, and the music is unexcelled.

Friday Night is Grand Ball Night. Sunday is a sacred concert with classical photo-plays, Monday a new show, and—be on hand Wednesday for the "world beaters" as they themselves think, but we call them amateurs. They're real funny though.—Advertisement.

OLD ORCHARD CAMP GROUND.

"Nature's camp ground by the sea, a spot serenely fair,
Where God's children often meet to utter words of prayer,
Where the tall, majestic pines wave their scented boughs,
Where the saints from far and near oft renew their vows.
Breezes from heaven gently fall on this sacred place;
Words like these are often heard, 'A sinner saved by grace.'
Tones sweet and full vibrate the air as songs of praise are heard,
Praises to God for loving care and for the grand old Word,
Voices once heard, now hushed in death, no more float through the air;
Happy are they with saints above, free from all strife and care.
'Seasons come and seasons go,' the tall pines wave their boughs,
In Nature's camp ground by the sea, while men renew their vows."

The Last of Old Orchard Beach MAINE

With the Development of "Surfside"

The last remaining tract (with one exception) on the most famous beach in all the world, will be gone. Do you realize what this actually means? It means that you now have your last opportunity to ever purchase a plot on this famous beach at a reasonable price. Hereafter those owning plots will own a monopoly. You know the law of supply and demand regulates prices. For shore front properties you have an increasing demand and a decreasing supply. You cannot make any more of it, so the only possible result is higher prices.

The purchase of a shore lot is the safest and sanest investment on earth. You simply cannot lose. "Old Ocean guarantees your investment."

A few dollars invested now on our monthly payment, non-forfeiture plan will help make you independent in old age. Then, too, it is an investment that can be used. You do not have to die to win. It returns you "DAILY DIVIDENDS" in health and wealth.

You can camp on your plot as soon as first payment is made.

A bungalow will return you 15 per cent on your money. Pretty good interest. It beats savings banks or railroad stocks.

Our prices range from $250 upwards for lots 50x100 feet. Terms are 10 per cent down and 2 per cent monthly. Better write today for booklet.

SURF ECHOES OF OLD ORCHARD PEOPLE.

Old Orchard is a lovely place,
So says the summer girl.
One trouble only have I here,
My hair won't stay in curl.

A New York gentleman, visiting Old Orchard, told some startling stories about the height of some of the New York buildings. An Irishman, who was listening, stood it as long as he could, and then queried:

"Ye haven't seen our newest hotel, have ye?"

The New Yorker thought not. "Well," said the Irishman, "it's so tall that we had to put the two top stories on hinges."

"What for?" asked the New Yorker.

"So we could let 'em down till the moon went by," said Pat.

An old lady went into one of the restaurants on Old Orchard Street the other day and asked the waiter how much the beef steak was.

"Twenty-five cents," answered the waiter.

"How much is your bread?" queried the old lady.

"We give that with the steak," said the waiter.

"How much is the butter?" asked the lady.

"We throw that in," replied the waiter.

"All right," said the old lady, "I'll take the bread and butter."

THE BALL TEAM.

Last Saturday the Old Orchard base ball team played its initial game against the Laughlin team of Portland. The local boys were victorious, winning by the score of 10 to 3.

Williamson of Fort Preble, who twirled for the opposing club, was speedy and pitched good ball, but poor support proved his undoing, while Blinn, who was in for the home team, was steady and effective throughout the game.

Old Orchard seems to have a strong team and some exciting games are assured when they meet some of the fast nines of the State.

Those who saw the game on Tuesday against the York Mill team went away favorably satisfied, for the game was a thriller from start to finish ending in the 10th inning, two base hits by Haley and Chapin sent across the winning run ending the game by a score of 2 to 1 in favor of Old Orchard. The local boys put up an excellent game of ball, Blinn pitching and allowing but three bingles.

Today they play the Sanford Independents and on Saturday the "Sears Cubs" of Sanford will be here, so let's all turn out and root for the local boys.

The new electric sign on the Pier is serving its purpose well in attracting the attention of the crowd who are walking the streets about town.

A GLUTTON FOR GOLD.

Bokhara's Ameer Has the Largest Private Hoard in the World.

The largest private hoard in the world is probably that owned by the ameer of Bokhara, the Russian vassal state in central Asia. According to the Turkestanskive Kraj, the ameer possesses in his stronghold a vault completely filled with gold bars and coined gold.

Some years ago the ameer had another vault built to hold his savings, and the new storehouse is now almost full. There is at the Bokharan court an enormous cash book, which has served for generations and in which all revenues and expenditures are supposed to be put down, but also for generations it has never been checked with the "cash in hand."

Grafting is the easiest thing in the world at Bokhara. The ameer's officials draw no salary. They are appointed on the understanding that they must keep themselves on what they can make out of their various offices. There is no budget, and the largest permanent charge on the ameer's income is one of $15,000 annually for a local hospital. Then there is a small contribution toward the upkeep of the Russian police in the protectorate and the maintenance of the Bokharan "army," which has shrunk to a mere bodyguard.

The ameer's annual savings, it is calculated, amount to more than $8,000,000 a year. He is by traditional usage compelled to send every year a number of valuable "presents" to the Russian authorities at Samarkand and Tashkent. These presents consist of carpets, silks and the like, which are immediately sold by the recipients to native traders, from whom the ameer as regularly buys them back at fixed prices, to be stored up and to serve again as "presents" the following year.—St. Petersburg Cor. New York Sun.

FIRE IN WATER.

Newest Idea For Making Steam and Wasting No Heat.

Fire in the middle of a tank of water instead of under a boiler is a new scheme in making steam for an engine. The idea is to save heat ordinarily wasted, for, with the fire in the middle of the water, every bit of the heat must work to heat the water, as there are no side paths by which it can escape.

Keeping a fire blazing when practically surrounded by water is a problem that has been successfully solved. Gas or oil properly mixed with air feeds the fire. To start the flame the tank is first emptied and the vapor fuel forced in through a pipe that ends in a nozzle pointed downward. The vapor is lighted, making a roaring torch flame shooting downward in the middle of the tank. Then the tank is partly filled with water until the surface of the water is well above the nozzle, entirely covering the flame.

The vapor fuel, of course, must be forced in at some pressure in order to prevent the water from putting the fire out. The water is soon boiling violently, making steam for running the engine. The steam, mixed with gas from the burning fuel, is led into a separate tank, which is a sort of storage bin for the steam.—Saturday Evening Post.

The Sun and the Weather.

Neither astronomers nor meteorologists are likely to take seriously the prediction of a French scientist that the recent renewal of sun spot activity will result in a long period of dry weather covering seventeen years. "The direct consequence of our dependence on the sun," he says, "is that seventeen years of dryness are followed by as many wet years." Many attempts have been made to discover any association between sun spot cycles and weather cycles, but as yet without success. There are three fairly well defined sun spot cycles, embracing four, eleven and thirty-three years, but no similar weather periods are known. During the last seventy years the Greenwich records of sun spots and rainfall show no relation, there being no correspondence between the two phenomena.—Westminster Gazette.

Paint Alarms.

Fire alarm paint is coming into use abroad. At ordinary temperatures the paint is light red, but when heated it becomes darker. Long before it reaches the temperature of boiling water it becomes black. On cooling it returns to its original shade. The principal use found for it is in painting machinery parts that are liable to overheating. An attendant needs only to glance at the machinery occasionally to know whether it is excessively hot. It has, however, another application—to give warning of threatened fire.—Saturday Evening Post.

A French Wonder.

The police force of the Ninth Paris Arrondissement boasts a policeman named Costy, whose powers of calculation are attracting the attention of the scientific world. The moment he hears a spoken phrase he is able to tell the number of letters it contains. He takes no time for reflection and says he does not even need to think, the calculation being automatic.

A Great Seismograph.

Work has been begun at the geological laboratory of the University of Chicago on a new seismograph, one of the four largest in the United States. Earthquake shocks in any part of the globe will be recorded by the instrument, whose base will be in a circular concrete column sunk eighty feet into the earth and ten feet into bed rock.—Pathfinder.

FALL FASHIONS.

Height to Be a Requirement in Smart Hats For Fall.

"Extreme height is a note of the new fall models," says the Millinery Trade Review. "And this does not mean that there will not be any flat trimmings, as silk and velvet fruits and flowers give good promise for fall. Coque in its many clever new designs is being shown. Pompons of this material in bronzed effect, the shape of an artichoke, are immensely clever, being placed on the top of a rather high crowned hat in clusters of two or three.

"Other models show bronzed coque forming military pompons, accompanied by a high, fancy effect. Curled coque in black, white and all the smart new shades for fall are well thought of. Manufacturers of ostrich feathers are showing numbers of new effects for fall, which include burnt effects in high fancies. The fall season always makes the demand for ostrich stronger, and good results are expected."

Flower Supports.

To go in the veranda jardiniere there are long wooden sticks, painted green and topped with little wooden birds of brilliant hues or with brownies or gnomes.

These are thrust into the vase or jardiniere when long stemmed flowers are used, and the heads of some of the flowers are tied to posts to keep them from falling.

These posts can also be used as stakes in the garden. They are very picturesque wherever they are used.

Floral Laces.

Among the decidedly effective ideas in colors are the net top laces with floral patterns painted in realistic shades, says the Dry Goods Economist. In some instances the beauty of the designs is greatly enhanced by an outlining thread of silver or gold.

Only the daintiest flowers are represented in these painted effects, and so delicate are the tints that their appearance is lovely indeed. The painted floral idea also appears in fine chintilly.

Thought It Tame.

Father (who had taken daughter to the play)—I'm sorry I brought you now Mabel. This is hardly a play for the young person. Daughter—Oh, I don't mind it, dad. It'll probably liven up a bit before the end.—Judge.

Japan's Earthquakes.

Nearly 1,400 earthquakes are recorded annually in the whole of the Japanese empire, and in Tokyo alone there are on an average fifty earthquakes that can be felt during the year, or about one a week.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Neuritis.

Neuritis, which is inflammation of a nerve, may be either acute or chronic, and sometimes an acute attack passes into a chronic form. The chief symptom of neuritis is pain in the affected nerve. Sometimes the patient describes the pain as "burning," sometimes as "shooting" or "darting" and sometimes as "boring." Movement makes it worse, and it is generally more severe at night. Cases that can be traced to some slight injury are likely to get well, but a chronic case may persist for many months. When neuritis is the result of a direct injury to a nerve surgical treatment may be necessary. If the nerve has been divided by a wound it must be brought together and sutured. If it is pinched or compressed by a tumor or an abscess or a piece of fractured bone it can be relieved only by surgery. In all cases the treatment of neuritis must include great care for the general health, absolute rest for the affected part and relief for the wearing pain. Sometimes the sick nerve can be kept at rest by a bandage or a sling. If it cannot be helped in that way the patient may have to go to bed. Massage is not advisable while the inflammation is high, but is often of service in the later stages of the trouble.

Formic Acid.

Formic acid is a well known organic acid found in considerable quantities in the bodies of red ants and in the poison of bees, as well as in many other places. In concentrated form it is a fuming liquid which is strongly antiseptic and which will blister the skin if dropped upon it. It has little or no place in medicine.

FLOWERS FOR THE VERANDA.

No veranda is complete that is not decorated with flowers.

Flowering vines growing about the posts of the veranda are attractive.

Climbing roses and other vines can be trained over lattices that may be ordered to fit any space.

Jardinières of heavy pottery in browns or blues or greens can be kept filled with field flowers—daisies, buttercups, wild asters or goldenrod, each in its appointed time.

Bowls and jars and vases of plain glass or of heavy pottery can be filled with garden flowers for the veranda.

Hanging baskets of Japanese mahogany stained split reeds or willow are very good on the veranda.

Baskets can be hung from the eaves of the porch or from brass or wooden spikes driven into the house wall for the purpose of holding them.

SKIRTS OF NET.

They Make the Fashionable Tunic Endurable In Hot Weather.

SMART FRENCH COSTUME

The long draped tunics which fashionable women are wearing this season are undoubtedly warm, but Parisian modistes, with their customary ingenuity, have found a way to remedy this. Skirts are sometimes made with a net yoke, over which the tunic falls. Some costumes even have entire skirts of lace or net. The gown illustrated here was snapped at one of the French races, where fashions are exploited. Tunic and corsage are of flowered silk, with a satin stripe which runs up and down. The surplice is finished with a plaited frill of net, and the waist is encircled with a girdle of satin ribbon. The skirt is of white net, adorned with rows of narrow frills.

The "No Toy" Theory.

There was a woman, rather prominent socially, who had a pet theory on which she always fell back. Her slogan was "Sticks and stones for children." She believed, in effect, that children could get along quite well without any toys save sticks and stones, that the fewer playthings they had the better off they were. She argued very convincingly. Of course when you found out that she had no chick or child of her own, but was, moreover, a spinster, your faith in her theory perhaps was somewhat shocked. The theory was right nevertheless, as you doubtless are forced to admit when you ponder on the happiness of the children you know. Without a question toys do not mean happiness.

If you are a believer in the no toy theory the summer is the best time to put it into practice, for in summer there are many things which an out of door loving child can find to take the place of toys. Doubtless the child who has only a limited number of toys and is therefore forced to amuse itself without them most of the time has a better chance to develop its resourcefulness and imagination and its power of getting happiness and amusement wherever it may be than the child who is surfeited with toys.

All to His Credit.

"My dear," he said, "you are superb! To any man a credit. You'll be the reigning belle tonight," and kissed her as he said it.

"My love, I'm glad you like my clothes," with beating heart she said it. "Because this party gown and wrap are also to your credit!"—Stray Stories.

Educational.

There is only one occasion when a business education is more preferable for a woman than housekeeping ability, and that is when she has a husband to support.—New Orleans Picayune.

And He Minds Her.

"He never seems to question a thing his wife says."

"No, he never argues with her."

"I wonder why?"

"I suspect that she has told him not to."—Houston Post.

Corrected.

"He says he is always outspoken in his wife's presence." "He means out-talked."—Houston Post.

BORDERED CRAPE WITH NET.

A most individual use of a bordered material is shown in this yellow crape, with a border of deeper yellow crape and yellow roses. The sleeves are one big puff of buff net gathered in a frill at the wrist.

Corsage Bouquets.

One of the prettiest combinations in corsage bouquets is made of wheat and poppies, gathered into a big bunch. Another is a huge bunch of purple grapes. Still another is a bunch of roses of deep rose colored velvet, each petal edged with tiny rhinestones.

Moslems and Women.

To protect a woman is a Moslem's highest duty and gains him the greatest reward in heaven.

ODD JOTTINGS.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Sullivan and family of Charlestown have rented the "Uneeda" cottage for the summer months. They have as their guest Miss Catherine McGee also of Charlestown.

Mr. T. F. LeBlanc with his family is located at the Jones House for the summer.

Mr. Samuel W. Garfinkle of Boston who is playing with the Arcade Orchestra is the guest of Mrs. Moses at her home in Saco.

Many people have commented upon the improvements to the little lunch room at the end of the arcade on the Pier remarking how much it resembled a pullman car.

It is remarked that musicians are more often forgetful of other things except melody. But the climax was capped the other day by the violinist of the Pier Orchestra who although not forgetting to show up on time left his fiddle at home.

Mason, Lebonte and Dane, who compose the Arcade singing trio harmonize well, passing pedestrians often pause in their progress to absorb the melody.

Oriental things possess a fascination for the average person. The one who passes the Japanese store on Old Orchard street of B. Kasai & Co., loses an opportunity to see many of these fascinating things. The front seems given up to objects of a lesser degree, but if you enter and look around you observe a great number of interesting things, such as beautiful hanging baskets of cherry flowers, the national flower of Japan, and many pieces of carved ivory, some vases which are interesting because of their decorations, the sacred mon-keys assuming their proper share in the decoration of different articles.

VACATION GARB FOR THE WEE LAD

Garments Should Be Comfortable and Pretty, Material That Does Not Tear Easily and That Launderers Well Being Preferred.

DURING vacation time, when children are free to romp and play, there is a wonderful amount of wear and tear on small garments. Scolding and punishment do not avail much in preventing accidents, for the youngsters really do forget to be careful, as they claim. When there is a tempting tree to climb or a fascinating brook in which to wade action precedes thought.

Luckily this season's garments for boys are unusually sensible. They are pretty too. Simple in outline, they are made of stout materials that emerge from the washtub in pristine freshness and beauty.

The Greenaway suits, so called, are simply very picturesque models, much in the style of a century or more ago. Linen of various weaves and heavy texture are favored for the small boy's suit.

There is usually an effect similar to the one pictured here. In this case the short breeches of green linen were attached to the little waist of white tub silk by large pearl buttons. Collars and cuffs were edged with braiding.

Novel suits for small boys are made of white pique and poplin. These have collars and cuffs of bright plaids. The little straw hats to wear with them have brims and bands of straw to match.

Mistake Made by Some.

Some seem to think opportunity ought to cross the street and walk on the shady side with them.—Toledo Blade.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Mastoiditis.

Mastoiditis is a dangerous disease, and the importance of detecting it in its earliest stages must never be overlooked. Delay means a fearful operation or death. Mastoiditis is recognized by pressing the hard, ridge-like bone behind the ear. Tenderness there, especially if combined with a running ear, is an almost certain proof of mastoiditis. It is always wise to consult a physician when trouble starts in the ear.

INDIRECT LIGHTING.

The New System Which Uses the Ceiling as a Diffuser.

The "indirect" system of lighting was invented about five years ago by an illuminating engineer in Chicago, who, while experimenting to find something that would diffuse light and yet keep it away from the eyes, tried turning the shades on his fixtures upside down. The effect led him to see the possibilities of using the ceiling as a diffuser of light and resulted in his working out the indirect method.

In this fixtures of a cup or bowl like shape are used, hung from the ceiling by chains or rods. The container is entirely opaque, either of metal or some metalized substance that prevents any light from coming through and forces it against the ceiling by means of powerful reflectors with which the container is lined. In some types the container has a highly glazed enamel lining which acts as a reflector. By this method the light is diffused evenly over an entire room, lighting up the corners and enabling every one in the room to see equally well.

The effect of this kind of lighting is interesting to watch. There are no puckered brows, no strained look on the faces of people who are reading or working in a room so illuminated. The eyes and nerves have involuntarily relaxed, and a feeling of well being and repose that must be experienced to be appreciated takes the place of the high strung, overwrought, nervous state induced by glaring, unshaded "direct" lights.—World's Work.

OLD TIME BASEBALL.

When the Athletics Averaged Thirty-eight Runs a Game.

The present Athletics are supposed to be the strongest attacking machine ever sent to the field.

Before awarding them the laurel suppose we turn to the Athletics of 1860-1871.

In excavating into the dope George Moreland has discovered that this old machine in its 405 match games averaged 38.30 runs to the battle—that it averaged fifty runs to the game no less than eighty-nine times; that it piled up more than 100 runs on ten occasions—and that in its 405 championship games it scored 15,353 to 5,349 for its opponents.

The record of that club was 351 victories and 54 defeats. What we can't quite understand is the fifty-four defeat part of it.

But, judging from these statistics, hitting the baseball is something of a Philadelphia institution. The habit seems to have become fixed. Small wonder with such a buoyant and elastic start.—Grantland Rice in Collier's Weekly.

French Style Originators Are Trying to Introduce Modified Chinese Fashions—Lovely Soft Silks and Beautiful Embroideries.

AFTER Persia, Paris turns to China for fashion inspiration. Chinese embroideries, Chinese fabrics and Chinese ideas in designing feminine apparel adapted to the requirements of the western world are being studiously considered by modistes. In Paris recently was given a dress exhibition at which gowns illustrating the Chinese influence were shown. One of these models is illustrated here. The skirt was cleverly draped and slashed in the front. At a distance it very markedly suggested trousers. The gown was of charmeuse with an apron tunic of lace which matched the lace of the corsage. Black tulle with a ruched edge fashioned the bolero like coat.

The beautiful embroideries and brocades for which the Chinese are famous make exceedingly fetching embellishments to the costume. Fine ornaments of jade to be worn with these Chinese costumes are treasures. There is an idea that jade jewelry is inexpensive, but good specimens of the art of the Chinese lapidary are very costly, as any one who has been in the orient can tell you. Carved jade is quite valuable.

A very rare and striking ornament worn by a woman who spent several years in China, where her husband's business interests lay, was a long strand of blue jade beads as beautiful as turquoises. Each bead was the size of a small marble. The strand could be doubled about her neck and still fall to the waist line. In her trunk she brought exquisite embroideries of silver and gold and a wonderful robe of ancient Chinese embroideries.

Among her treasures were laces and embroideries of modern workmanship made by the girls in the convent school which the French nuns have established in Peking for the education of Chinese girls in industrial work.

As she folded up some of the lovely gowns which she brought home with her she sighed. The fit of these garments is perfect and chic, equal to that of Paris, while the skillful Chinaman dressmaker who made them had been satisfied with a comparatively moderate fee. Said she:

"One measurement, and the old Chinaman, whose pigeon English was a succession of compliments, troubled me no more until my gowns were sent home, each fitting perfectly and a delight to the eye." She added, "Well, if Chinese fashions are coming here I wish the Chinese dressmaker could come with them."

BEAUTY SLEEP.

If you feel heavy and tired in the morning it means that you have had no beauty sleep. It means that your sleep has not rested you, and it means that you are little better off than you were the night before.

When you go to bed—if you are looking for beauty sleep—you should fall asleep almost at once. The beauty sleeper, the one who wakes up looking refreshed, will fall asleep the minute her head touches the pillow. She will fall into a slumber, heavy and dreamless, and she will waken in the morning of her own accord.

The beauty sleeper will sleep better if she takes something before going to bed, even though it be no more than a cup of hot water and a cracker. Her stomach will be quieter and her nerves will be easier. She will not have the restless feeling of the one who goes to bed hungry and who wakes up with lines in her face.

The old fashioned idea of the beauty sleep was the sleep that comes before 12 o'clock. Every hour passed in sleep before midnight was supposed to make a woman younger. After 12 the sleep is heavy and not so good for the nerves, being less invigorating and less strengthening. According to a certain specialist, "sleep after midnight is the sleep of exhaustion."

May Think He Is.

"It is ridiculous for a young man to get married as soon as he comes of age!" said the elderly bachelor.

"Think so, do you?" said Henpeck languidly.

"Of course. Why, he's scarcely old enough to be his own master."

"Well, he isn't if he gets married."

FOR TABLE DECORATIONS.

Flowers Which Are Favored For Table Embellishment.

Roses, carnations, and, above all, sweet peas, which are obtainable in exquisite colors and at quite reasonable prices, are the favorite flowers for table decoration, arranged usually in a big center bowl, though sweet peas look very charming distributed in small silver or crystal flower holders.

Roses are the most difficult to arrange satisfactorily, especially those that are home grown and have comparatively short stalks, for they are wont to hang their heads and shed their petals very soon unless they are cut just at the right time—either in the morning or evening, never during the heat of the day.

Roses last better if the ends of the stalks are dipped into melted candle wax as soon as possible after cutting. This seals them and keeps in the sap. If they are very heavy headed they should be delicately wired, and they always require placing in a rose bowl supplied with a meshed top, or one of the tall ringed wire holders. The long stalked roses supplied by florists last much longer than those from one's own garden, as they are grown specially for decoration.

Sweet peas are now grown in several new colors, among them salmon pink, pale green, and white narrowly edged with green, but there is something very artificial looking about these green blossoms, and they are not nearly as effective as the more natural hues—pale pink, rose, cerise or mauve. The lemon and sulphur shades are very charming. The candle shades and sweets always match or tone with the flowers.

Practical.

Sound practical advice given by a misanthrope: If ever you should be attacked by night never shout "Murder!" for no one will bother about you. Yell "Fire!" and everybody will be out of doors in a jiffy.

Points for Mothers

Child's Knowledge of Art.

A teacher was surprised one morning to see a pupil who had come to school for the first time showing a remarkable interest in the reprints of great paintings which she had arranged along the blackboard. Unobserved, she drew near the child and was further astonished to hear her exclaim delightedly, "There's 'Baby Stuart,' the 'Sistine Madonna' and 'The Horse Fair.'"

This teacher mentioned the occurrence to another teacher, who told her that the child's brother and sister had likewise surprised her by the knowledge they had not only of masterpieces in painting, but of sculpture and architecture as well. Later the teachers met the children's mother and were shown the playroom.

Instead of the highly colored pictures that one so often sees in play rooms, there were several good paintings illustrative of the time honored childlore and the ever new fairy tale. One could readily see that considerable time and money must have been spent on these pictures. The visitors particularly admired the imaginative suggestion and harmonious coloring of a painting of Cinderella. "That picture," said the mother, "is the best we have in the house. My little daughters and I sacrificed our new spring bonnets at Cinderella's shrine the first time we caught a glimpse of her."

Numerous prints of great paintings were arranged in groups according to subjects around the room. These pictures were mounted on mats of uniform size and color, and each one was plainly labeled with the name of its author and its subject.

"The pictures in the various groups are constantly changing," the mother explained. "If any one finds a picture which appeals to him it is brought in for consideration. No picture, however, gets the coveted place in the group if any of the children raise a valid objection to it. This censorship not only develops the children's observation and judgment, but keeps the groups of pictures from becoming too large and usually insures survival of the fittest."

"At different seasons the interest is transferred from one group to another. At Christmas the Madonnas claim most of our interest; later, when the children are enthusiastically building snow houses and fashioning snow men, we naturally turn to the groups headed by the Coliseum and Michelangelo's David. In the spring we are all enthusiastic about the flowers, birds and trees."

"We are always careful to encourage even the youngest member of the family to contribute to the changing collection. Occasionally we allow our judgment of a picture to be influenced by our hearts rather than our heads. This was the case when little Ned brought in a highly colored picture of Santa Claus which he evidently admired and astonished all by requesting us to hang it beside the 'Sistine Madonna.'"

Greenland.

Recent corrections in maps of Greenland have added about 150,000 square miles to its area.

CHIC MOIRE FROCK.

No material has been so fashionable as has moire this season, and here it is developed in the typical design of the season—the pannier drapery, the dropped shoulder and the narrow skirt. The beaded sash in the front gives an interesting oriental suggestion. The odd girdle is snap fastened to place.

A USE FOR PLAID TAFFETA.

Always, when a new fabric or design comes into fashion, there is much experimenting with it on the part of dressmakers and designers. This has naturally been the case in the plaids and stripes that have become popular this spring. The decision that every one has reached concerning them is that they are better used in small than in large quantities. One of the best uses of plaid taffeta is in the form of waistcoats as a part of fine blouses of white mousseline crepe de chine and chiffon.

First Aid to the Injured.

Helplessly he lay by the roadside, groaning and writhing with pain. A policeman, hearing the groans, hastened toward him and proceeded to investigate what ailed him. But all he could get from the sufferer was this:

"I ate one too—I ate one too!"

The policeman was puzzled, but not for long.

"Poison!" was his diagnosis.

Now, poison cases, so the policeman remembered, need immediate treatment, and poisons have antidotes. Hastily he procured what he believed to be a suitable antidote. Then he administered it.

The result was astonishing. Like a rocket the recipient sat up and abusively demanded the reason for such treatment. On being told he only became more angry.

"What did I eat?" he yelled. "Why, you idiot, 1-812 is the number of the car that knocked me down!"—Chicago News.

The English carry these when traveling, and they make a most useful equipment for the traveler. Motorists find them convenient, and picnickers declare them a joy. The baskets are to be had in great variety and are modest in price. Their style and contents may be judged after a glance at the picture.

Some of these baskets have neat little pockets for all sizes of small canisters, as they may be termed. These are little holders for condiments, jellies, pickles, olives and the like. Each is provided with a tight fitting cover that screws on. There are thermos bottles for ice water as well as for hot coffee or tea or cocoa, for soup and for ice cold milk or lemonade.

There is a neat square agate box for cold chicken or ham or beef jointed or sliced or perhaps, if one is fastidious, for squabs ready to serve whole. Other boxes hold a prepared relish. There are jars for butter and neat receptacles for grated cheese that some like so much with a bit of jelly.

OLD ORCHARD RETREAT

Or the First House on the Shore, and the Life Story of the Hermit of Old Orchard

We were sitting in the firelight one rainy night, the dear old lady and I. "Tell me more about those early days here," I said. So to the accompaniment of the rain on the veranda roof, and the flash from the burning logs in the open fireplace, she told me the story of the first house on the shore, and the life story of its proprietor, the hermit of Old Orchard.

On the sandy beach, with a background of fragrant pines, stood the rudely finished and furnished "Old Orchard Retreat," near where the Sea Shore House formerly stood and where the Sea Shore Theatre now stands. For a number of years the Retreat was the only house of any kind on the shore. Here the owner and proprietor, Edward B. Clemmens, lived alone and served dinners which consisted principally of chowders, to many picnic parties. He also let bathing suits, and so was the pioneer of that industry here in Old Orchard.

The life story of this man was known by all the first regular dwellers here. He came first to Saco in 1845, and established bathing houses under the old Thornton House. When this was destroyed later by fire he moved to the basement of another block, and opened an eating house department where he served oysters and made a specialty of turtle soup. He was well educated and had traveled widely, and he conversed interestingly on many subjects, although at that time he was reticent concerning his early life.

Beside his bathing rooms and restaurant he collected a natural history museum. He also constructed wonderful shell ornaments. At the death of an artist brother in another state, he inherited a panoramic painting of the river Rhine. Then he began the exhibition business, and finally came to Old Orchard.

Here he built the first house on the shore, "The Old Orchard Retreat," or "The Astor House," as he sometimes called it. While living there alone and serving dinners to parties, he also issued a newspaper called The Goose Fare Guide and Old Orchard Bellows, which was the first Old Orchard newspaper. In this paper he was said to have prophesied that Old Orchard would become a famous place, that railroads would open it to the whole world, and that pleasure seekers would come in great numbers. He urged people to invest their capital in real estate here, but many only laughed at his prophecies.

In his last days he told his friends the story of his early life. He was born in Philadelphia in 1810, and was educated for a dramatic life. For several years he followed that life, and he was also with Barnum in the early days of the famous circus. He left his native state because of an early disappointment in love, and he never returned to Philadelphia, but wandered through many lands, finally coming to Saco, and a little later to Old Orchard. Here he died in 1865, and was buried in the cemetery at Saco. Edward B. Clemmens did not live to see the fulfillment of his prophecies, but his dreams have come true.—Old Orchard real estate is valuable, the railroads are here, and the place is growing more and more popular every year.

After I had thanked the dear old lady for her story, and we sat for a while silently watching the flames in the fireplace, I tried to think of the beach with only a solitary house where now the long line of cottages and hotels greets the eye, while building sites are growing scarcer with each passing year.

ANNEBELLE R. BUCKNAM.

T FOR TURN ROAD

A good old minister on being complimented on the excellence of a sermon he had preached modestly said that he could find as good a text as anybody. Now my title for this article is perhaps as peculiar as could be found by any writer in the country, but I will not promise the reader anything more than the common place and the little things here and there, and these after all make up much of our daily lives. Any one wishing to enjoy the beauty of forest scenery would do well to visit this road which is reached by following the extension of Union Avenue to the entrance of the woodland. It is an old proprietor's road over which the public has enjoyed a free and unrestricted right of way from time immemorial whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary as the phrase is in law; but the road has not been laid out as a town road. At its intersection with the Ross road there stood a pine tree having a letter T cut in its bark as a sign to turn at that point, hence the name. Much of the tall timber has been cut and in some places forest fires have caused destruction, yet there is much thrifty growth left and he who seeks the quiet of this woodland retreat will find there a variety of trees and bushes and forest flowers; it is a place to delight the heart of a naturalist. Shortly after entering this wood the visitor will pass a spot of land once cleared, now becoming overgrown with trees. This once was a farm and here stood the farm buildings, but the family were scattered abroad by the changes of time and the town of Saco bought the house and a small portion of the land making use of the house as a hospital for patients suffering from contagious disease. And here was brought a man in last stages of suffering, whose case was incurable, one of the waifs and strays of humanity alone in the world, and in his last days, realizing that he could not live long, he made known to his attendant his wish that he might be buried on a knoll which he could see from his window. And when his life ended he was there laid at rest from his wanderings on the earth. In time the authorities sold the property and the house was torn down and the material used in a building on a neighboring farm. The remains of the cellar can still be seen, the mouth of the well is visible and on the pleasant knoll can be found the rough head stone that marks the lonely grave of him who rests there in the solitude far from the scenes of the great world wherein he fared so ill. Not far from here on a farm which is pleasantly situated and commands a fine view of the surrounding county can be seen indications of a dwelling having been erected at some time in the past. The owner at one time made inquiry of me but my knowledge of local history failed me; on inquiry of a friend, however, who is well informed in such matters, I learned that was once a farm known as the Andrew Patterson, and the farm house must have been on that spot. But few know of it today, and thus it is that men and events are soon forgotten as earth's generations pass.

THE NEW STATE ROAD.

The papers have recently been completed and signed by both state and town authorities for the construction of the new stretch of state road extending out and along East Grand Avenue to the Scarboro line just beyond Grand Beach and from there it will be carried on by the State and the Town of Scarboro to Pine Point.

The construction of the entire stretch will be under the direction of our Road Commissioner, Mr. Harry McGrath, and the work will begin in the early fall.

It will be constructed from crushed rock and gravel and it is proposed to install a rock crusher in one of the local pits to make all the rock and gravel of an even texture. This will be good news to those who have had occasion to use this particular stretch of road as its present condition is very bad. The total cost of the road in the Town of Old Orchard will be in the near vicinity of six thousand dollars.

Mrs. Maude Skinner and Mrs. Edna Folsom of Auburn arrived Saturday at the New Linwood for a two weeks' vacation.

Miss K. A. McCann, principal of school No. 17, New York City, and her two nieces, Miss Loretta McCann and Miss Katherine McCann, also of New York, have taken a cottage on Ocean Ave. They will remain until September.

Mr. J. W. Thompson of Lewiston, agent of Fern Park Land Co., is stopping at his log cabin in Fern Park for the summer.

THE WHY.

Some comment has been heard from a number of our summer residents about the finding on the beach of an occasional number of dying fish. Numerous reasons were ascribed as the cause, some not very complimentary to our sanitary system and others thinking that the dog-fish were chasing them out of the water.

It remained for a very observing visitor, Winton, by name, to find out the real cause. Much of his time had been spent on or near the beach, and he had observed upon numerous occasions the mackerel gulls pause in their flight and dive into the shoal water near the beach evidently intent upon securing some object in it. A number of times he had seen this same performance. At a later date he saw it repeated from a nearer viewpoint on the Pier. The gull flying along spies a hake or small haddock in the shoal water, and generally with a true eye dives and strikes the fish which are near the surface, just back of the gills with its beak, thus piercing it in a vital spot. The fish being too heavy for the gull to fly with, it is left to its fate, which is to gradually be carried in on the beach. Sometimes you will find that the fish is not yet dead, and most always you will find just back of its gills a hole that has been made by the gull in its too true dive into the surf.

THE BASE BALL TEAM.

Our base ball team is proving a source of pleasure to the many people who enjoy fast and well played ball. Up to Tuesday they had easily defeated all competitors, numbering among them many of the fastest teams in this section. Blinn, the twirler, is making an enviable reputation for himself in the box. A new recruit recently added is "Buster" Young, a former York Beach star. Young holds down first base in a first class manner.

On Tuesday the Old Orchard team was again victorious, defeating the fast York Beach aggregation by the score of 4 to 2. The game was interesting from the start to finish and it could not have been a better one to watch.

The continued victories of the Old Orchard base ball team should be a source of pride to the Town, and we cannot more strongly urge you to attend every game that is possible.

The team has won games as follows:

Laughlin team, Portland,	10 to 3
York Mills League team,	2 to 1
Westbrook,	8 to 1
Sears Cubs of Sanford,	8 to 1
York Beach,	4 to 2

To-day they play the fast Rochester, N. H., team and it should prove a very exciting game. And on the coming Saturday they play the Crossman team of Portland.

CARNIVAL WEEK

Much Fun and Entertainment Planned for Week of August Third

The week of August 3rd, Old Orchard is to have a Carnival Week. The local business men have made plans for some very excellent carnival attraction, that the summer visitor and excursionists may be entertained.

Toward this end they have secured the service of the Bonnetti Brothers, a famous team of balloonists and aerial gymnasts. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday of the week of August 3rd, the Bonnetti Brothers will perform the "Slide For Life." This will be a thrilling slide on a very high wire from the highest peaks in the Town to the beach. And on one of these days it will be performed in Seaside Park.

On Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of Carnival week balloon ascensions will be made with thrilling parachute drops. The balloon will go up from a convenient lot in the center of the Town, probably the Seashore lot.

On Thursday it is also planned to have a swimming contest and race. Prizes of Gold Medals will be awarded to the winners. And also running races of one-half, one and two mile races will be held. The prizes to be awarded for the winners in these events will be handsome medals. These events will be amateur and entrants are desired. All swimmers and runners should take notice and enter for a good time and much sport is predicted.

On Saturday a "Tub Race" is also planned, which should be much fun and attract a good crowd.

All enthusiasts should turn out and either enter the races or render assistance as judges or assist in any way, for the sport of the thing if nothing more.

Communications should be addressed to the Old Orchard Carnival committee, and all who wish to enter should pass in their names before August 3rd.

It is rumored that a party of young ladies from the Ocean House are planning a visit to Wood Island to get pointers about LIGHT housekeeping.

It is constantly within our ken that too many of us are given to talk rather than to action. How is it by you?

REMEMBER THAT this paper is always on the lookout for items. You will do us a great favor if you will kindly send in a line about anything that is interesting.

In this issue of SURF ECHOES AND THE OLD ORCHARD MIRROR may be found two very interesting stories about Old Orchard, one from the pen of Miss A. R. Bucknam and the other written by Mr. John Allen Guilford.

Some people seem persistent in putting off from one day to another what might well have been done today. If it is human to err, how human some people are.

Always safety first.

Don't forget to swat the fly.

Bury the hammer, knocking is out of fashion. (This does not apply to honest criticism.)

"On with the dance." Let joy be unconfined.

The following letter has been received from one of our summer residents, Mr. John J. Walsh of Boston. Mr. Walsh is a member of the City Planning Board and has been a summer resident here for a number of seasons. It is a part of Mr. Walsh's business to be critical and believing that it is sometimes well to see ourselves as others see us we print the following without further comment:

Editor of SURF ECHOES AND OLD ORCHARD MIRROR.

Old Orchard, Maine.

Dear Sir:

Some of your "Passing Comment" of July 16 prompts me to inquire if the authorities of Old Orchard are unconscious of the beauty and opportunity of this loveliest of northern summer resorts, so obvious to the casual visitor. One might so conclude who looks about and sees nothing done to arouse the civic spirit of the townspeople or to make the place increasingly attractive to the summer visitor, whose only right to be heard springs from the fact that he pays the bills.

If one receives a jewel as a gift he is expected to take some care of it, and be proud of it. Nature has been bountiful to Old Orchard and has given it a jewel in the form of miles of safe bathing beach, but it is allowed to be and remain littered with debris, unkempt and uncared for. Here by day and by night the physical and moral laws of safety are defied. If the shore of Old Orchard were miles of jagged rock it could not be more neglected. Enlightened self-interest may some day urge townspeople, merchants, cottagers and authorities to join hands in giving the Beach a thorough cleaning and keeping it clean. At least one good cleaning might be a wise experiment. Has it ever been tried, Mr. Editor?

Why not build a board-walk or boulevard along two miles of the ocean front? It would mean thousands of dollars in revenue to the property owners along its line, and the increase of valuations would be more than sufficient to amortize the bonds which the town might issue for its construction. It is silly to think that Old Orchard can do nothing to augment its attractions while other resorts are spending great sums to lure the wayward vacationist. If we cannot have diversity of entertainment features we can at least advocate the development of our nature wonder, the beach. If such a boulevard or board-walk were built there would be incentive to cottage owners along its line to clean up and garden their open spaces. Cooperation in this effort would in a few years make Old Orchard a peer of the Massachusetts North Shore, so famous for its ordered beauty.

Who fixed up West Grand Avenue this year? And why did he or they neglect to roll down the sides of the roadway? And is it lawful to run automobiles at forty miles an hour on this street, ruining the road in a season and endangering the lives of pedestrians, especially children, of whom, thank God, there are many? Is there no appropriation for policing Old Orchard? What is done with the taxes collected? Summer visitors, accustomed to see some of the municipal revenue spent for public purposes would like to have these questions answered by some Old Orchard official. Now let the brickbats fly, but answer the questions. Call an informal town meeting, and let the property owners, local and non-resident, have a word with the people of this town. The provincial blinding veil might be removed.

JOHN J. WALSH.

BOOST THE BALL TEAM.

To the Editor of SURF ECHO AND THE OLD ORCHARD MIRROR.

Dear Sir:—

Old Orchard is in a large sense a Summer Resort. Those who come here seek rest and recreation; pleasure and enjoyment. In the majority of cases these call and keep them here. That some things appealing to the visitors and to the public are offensive to many goes without saying.

But visitors and the public generally, in this overeating season, need rest and recreation. What is there in Old Orchard which can give sane enjoyment and real pleasure more than to witness a base ball game? We have here an excellent team. The sport they give us is clean, manly and skillful. They deserve the recognition and patronage of the public.

SECRET OF THE LOVE BIRD.

It May Be Discovered in the Milk of Human Kindness.

Everything else dwindles into insignificance when the love bird appears. Affection, devotion, tenderness and love burst gladly forth at her magic touch. * * *

The road to happiness is attained through the generous distribution of the milk of human kindness.

Success, achievement, wealth, prominence, are only worth while when shared by your friends. No matter how large you can spell "success," it gives you little satisfaction if your accomplishment is not sincerely enjoyed by many. When surrounded by friends and loved ones, if you are fortunate in the acquisition of a generous disposition and charming personality, what a joy it is to be able to give them cheer, comfort, pleasure and satisfaction!

Who does not feel better for the "God bless you" from an old lady to whom you have shown some trifling kindly attention? Who is not thrilled by the joyous barking of his dog upon returning home?

Fortunate are those who feel the arms of children around their necks, hear the baby's laugh and see the wonderful mites toddling toward them, happy and unafraid.

All these joys sink into insignificance when the one and only one looks into your eyes, tender, true, steadfast. Words need not be spoken; nothing else matters. Then, and not until then, will you know the excess of happiness, the full realization of love, and then is the time to unite yourself steadfastly to fidelity, magnanimous generosity and open heartedness to all.

Unto us a child is born, * * * and his Name shall be called Wonderful.
—From Richard Clough Anderson's "Animals in Social Captivity."

SURGICAL SHOCK.

Only In a Vague Way Does Science Know What Causes It.

Shock is still one of the great mysteries of surgery. Many theories have been put forward to explain just what it is. Each of these has seemed attractive until its inherent defects were discovered by experience.

In a lecture before the British Royal College of Surgery Dr. A. Rendle Short reviewed these successive theories and described the experiments of himself and others by which they were disproved. But researches by Dr. Crile of Cleveland, Professor Sherrington of England and Dr. F. H. Pike of Columbia university, New York, seemed to him to offer at least a clew to the real nature of shock.

Professor Short did not formulate a definite theory, but suggested that surgical shock was due to an inhibiting or paralyzing of the important nuclei in the region of the fourth ventricle of the brain and perhaps in the cerebellum. These are "continually sending impulses down the spinal cord, maintaining its functional activity and increasing muscular tone." The effect of this paralysis is to cut off these impulses, whereupon the functions of the spinal cord are greatly reduced, muscular tone is abolished, and as a secondary result the blood pressure may fall. The respiratory center and perhaps also the vasomotor center share in this inhibition or paralysis.

"Death," said Dr. Short, "is due to the accumulation of blood in the great veins," so that the flow does not provide a proper filling for the heart.—New York World.

Candid Criticism.

Mr. G. A. Storey, the well known artist, once told an amusing story of a family group he painted one year for the Academy. The picture was accepted and was hung "on the line," and he arranged to escort the family to the Academy to see how it looked. They were all grouped round the picture, each silently admiring his or her own portrait, when two other people drifted up to have a look.

Suddenly Mr. Storey was appalled to hear one of the newcomers say to his companion, "What an exceedingly ugly looking lot of people!"

A Serious Fault.

"It's nice of you to let me see your proofs, Mr. Lavender. Which do I consider the best? That's rather difficult. There isn't one here that really does you justice—photographic justice, I mean."

"Thank you, Miss Lydia. I would esteem it a great favor if you could intimate a preference."

"Really, I couldn't, Mr. Lavender. Each proof shows the prevailing fault." "And what fault is that, Miss Lydia?"

"They are all too lifelike."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PASSING COMMENT.

Keep Out the Peddler.

In many cities and towns a street peddler is a thing of the past, the wide awake citizens realizing that those itinerant persons rarely have good goods, and are generally dishonest. For another reason they are also excluded, namely because the merchants who hire business property should be protected from such an uneven form of competition. Every peddler if he would peddle should be compelled to pay at least twenty-five dollars for a license, and our police department should make it an object to see to it that every peddler had a license. If any one is found selling goods without a license, it is unlawful, an example should be made of any so found peddling.

Some people do not realize how they are slowly but surely killing their "Goose" that lays their "Golden Eggs."

Old Orchard can be made the big watering place of the entire coast if the citizens and those interested will only make it their object. Among the improvements in the near future should be a concrete driveway along Surf street. Surf street we will mention by the way is a street laid out above high water on the beach. We could start in and construct from the Pier to Googins Rocks and build on to it gradually. All the material is handy except the cement. The taxation upon the increased valuation would in a short time pay for such a project.

Some people are of the impression that the present location of the railroad tracks could be changed greatly to the advantage of the Town and also of the railroad, and it is suggested that the tracks should be moved back of the Town proper, cutting through by Milliken's ice houses and thence across the marsh. It is suggested that the railroad could offset the cost of this by the sale of its present right of way.

We regret to note that the formerly pretty lawns of the Butler house are gradually being covered by cheap sidewalk stands.

At several places along one of our prominent streets there are vendors vending "hot barkers" (the name is well known) from stands almost jutting into the sidewalk. The sight is not pretty nor the odors arising pungent. We would respectfully call the attention of our board of health to them. If they could stop such they would render a great service to Old Orchard.

A recent article in a Boston paper infers that Old Orchard was before the latest application of oil to our streets a hot bed of mosquitoes. It reads along and renders the impression that the oil was to rid us of the mosquito rather than the dust. We are under the opinion that the piece was written away from the town with one unacquainted with the situation. Anyway we are sure that Old Orchard is not nor has it been bothered any more than any other place with the mosquito.

THE SUNDAY PROBLEM.

We do not believe in the commercializing of Sunday by noisy assemblages that disturb the peace of neighborhoods and interfere with the worship of God in His sanctuary, in letting the rich man play golf and forbidding the poor man to play ball, or in anything that demoralizes and exploits the people on the day which God meant should rest and recreate them physically, intellectually and spiritually. On the other hand, every summer Sunday holds at least 15 daylight hours when thousands of persons whose homes are not attractive, who do not own carriages and automobiles, who have few inward resources, are likely to follow the crowd. Even if they go to church once or twice, as they ought to do, even if they sleep late and spend more time than usual at meals, they still have much leisure left on their hands. The temptation to loaf on street corners or to carouse in questionable resorts is strong. Some recreation of the right sort is essential. At this point we believe the influence of Christian sentiment should be felt in determining as far as possible the character of amusements and diversions and in overseeing what takes place in public resorts. — Congregationalist.

SURF ECHOES OF OLD ORCHARD PEOPLE

"This fishing fever seems to be contagious," said the Old Orchard stranger, noting the long row of anglers perched along the end of the pier.

"Yes, it's contagious all right," said the man who had been fishing four hours without a nibble, "but not 'ketchin'."

What is the difference between a man who has seen the dashing breakers of Old Orchard, and one who has not?

One has seen the mist, and the other has missed the scene.

"A babbling brook,
A rustic nook,
A moon serenely mellow,—
Swear to be true,
I do,—I do,—
Oh, my, the lucky fellow.

Another night,
The self-same sight,
Alas, how sad to tell, Oh—
The one who kissed,
Those ruby lips,
Was quite another fellow."

How Hadley Proposed.

The way President Arthur Twining Hadley, according to a Yale legend, asked his prospective father-in-law for permission to marry his daughter was characteristic. At the time this gentleman, Luzon B. Morris, occupied an anomalous political position. He had recently been elected governor of Connecticut, but his claim was disputed, and the state was in a political turmoil.

"Mr. Morris," was the way Mr. Hadley approached the subject of his call, "I hope that I—at least—may be permitted to—to call you—governor."—World's Work.

Speed of the Street Song.

One of the curious things about the popular song is the rapidity of its dissemination among the street children. Few of them can hear it at first hand at the music halls, yet long before the latest catchy tune has found its way to the barrel organs or Sunday newspaper you will hear it rendered with amazing accuracy by tiny boys and girls. It seems to travel like rumor through an East Indian bazar.—London Standard.

WON ON HIS BLUFF

How an American Consul Brought a Dictator to Terms.

A THREAT AND A SURPRISE.

The Venezuelan Despot to Whom Uncle Sam's Official Had Issued a Comic Opera Ultimatum First Got on His High Horse and Then Stepped Down.

A great many years ago Phil Hanna was consul at La Guayra, Venezuela, when a little revolution broke out. A military martinet in command of the town announced himself dictator and, needing money to carry on his activities, seized a bunch of American, English and German residents in the place and locked them in the town jail. They were informed that they would be released when they had made certain cash contributions to the revolutionary war chest.

Hanna was notified of the situation, and, looking up the consulate and leaving an extra sized American flag flying, he marched up to the headquarters of the dictator.

"Mr. Dictator," said Hanna, "I note that you have locked up a number of Americans. Permit me to introduce myself as the American consul."

The dictator asked what interest that fact had for him.

"It signifies that I am here in the name of my government to demand that these Americans be released instantly," replied Hanna.

"Can't do a thing for you," replied the general. "They've been told that when they cough up they'll be turned loose."

"They'll be turned loose without coughing and without delay," retorted Hanna. "I desire, in the name of my government, to say that if the Americans and all the European citizens whom you have locked up are not released by 6 o'clock this afternoon I shall proceed to shell the town."

"To shell—what'll you shell it with?" snorted the dictator. "Why, you haven't an American ship within a thousand miles, and you know it."

"What I said," replied Hanna with frozen faced dignity, "was that if those people are not released by 6 o'clock I'll shell the town." And he marched out again.

Hanna knew perfectly well that there wasn't an American ship nearer than New Orleans, and he knew the dictator knew it. But he had something up his sleeve. He went back to his office and waited patiently, meanwhile sending a clerk down to the water front to watch things.

The day wore on to midafternoon. Hanna was getting nervous. He must make good somehow. At last his messenger returned.

"Two British cruisers are coming into the harbor, sir," he reported.

"I knew they were due today," replied Hanna. "Now, you get word to the commander about what we've done here and tell him it's very important for him to come and see me."

At 5 o'clock that afternoon three very impressive officers in the uniform of the British navy came ashore and marched straight to the American consulate.

Hanna slouched out of his chair, shook hands all round and explained his scrape. The naval man wanted to know how he could best serve the necessities of the moment.

"Just go back on shipboard and begin clearing those vessels for action in the most ostentatious way you can," replied Hanna. "I'll do the rest."

As soon as the necessary time had elapsed to assure that these facts would have duly impressed themselves on his dictatorship Hanna started for the palace again. He didn't have to wait for admittance.

"Have the American and European prisoners been released?" he asked.

"They have not yet," replied the dictator.

"Then permit me to say that at 6 o'clock sharp, as I mentioned this morning, I begin shelling this town!"

"Where's your American ships?" persisted the dictator.

"The two British cruisers that have entered the harbor today are under my orders," replied the American consul, "and we'll blow you and your town off this coast before morning if you don't perform. Do you get it?"

The dictator didn't know whether it was bluff or not, but at 5:59 o'clock the prisoners were turned loose.

Hanna got a promotion for the job.—New York Sun.

ESKIMO WHALE DANCE.

When Arctic Natives Feast and Pick Their Life Mates.

A very primitive custom of the natives of the Bering and arctic coasts of Siberia, a custom that has come down from generations of savage ancestors, is the annual celebration of the whale dance, when the Eskimos select their wives.

When the sun moves southward at the end of the short summer season and the ice closes up the northern seas the whales come down to open water. Then, in celebration of the season's catch, the ice dwellers assemble for the whale dance, which lasts twenty-one days.

The great dance circle is prepared, and in the center the dancers, both male and female, perform the most savage of evolutions and motions to the accompaniment of rhythmless beating of the tom-toms and weird chanting. The dance songs tell of the prowess of the hunters and of the history of the tribe. The movements of the women are surprisingly graceful, and they mean to show in their dance that, as daughters of a great people, they are possessed of all the qualities such women should have. The men execute pantomimic scenes of the hunt and go through all the motions of the kill. They spear the ice bear, slay the walrus and seal and finally, with extraordinary contortions, vanquish the mighty whale.

During the last days of the feast, when the time arrives for the selection of husbands and wives, the man performs his mate dance before the woman he has picked out. In pantomime he promises to provide her generously with the fruit of the hunt, both food and fur. If she is pleased with him she walks out and dances her acceptance and shows how she will look after the igloo. When they have danced before each other they are married after the custom of the tribe, and he leads her off to his walrus hide lodge.

During the dance they feast on whale. The skin of the baleen whale is about an inch thick and looks like rubber. The solid blubber between it and the true flesh is usually about four teen inches thick. The black skin and the blubber, the latter cut to the thickness of the former, is called muktuk and is considered a great delicacy. It is eaten raw and, although it sounds repulsive to the civilized ear, is most palatable. It has a flavor something like that of chestnuts.—Youth's Companion.

Prime Numbers.

It might appear at first that every number can be divided by some number besides itself and one; but many numbers cannot, and if they cannot they are known as prime numbers. Of all the numbers having a value of less than 1,000, there are 169 that are prime. Of these twenty-six are smaller than 100, twenty-one appear between 100 and 200, sixteen between 200 and 300, sixteen between 300 and 400, seventeen between 400 and 500, fourteen between 500 and 600, sixteen between 600 and 700, fourteen between 700 and 800, fifteen between 800 and 900 and fourteen between 900 and 1,000.

His Vacation.

A woman had a negro cleaning the yard for her. His wife had been dead for several years. So his employer seized a favorable moment and proceeded to sound him.

"John," she said, "you're a good, steady man. Lots of women would be glad to have you. Why don't you get a wife?"

John leaned on his rake and scratched his head reflectively.

"Well, I tell you," he replied. "You know I was married seven years, and I've got to have a rest."—Indianapolis News.

The Price of a Kid.

Cordova is full of fun, says C. Bogue Luffmann in his "Quiet Days In Spain," and in the leisurely pace of life there the observer has time to see and appreciate all of it.

In the market one day a small boy with a big apron and a pompous manner was offering half of a small kid to a woman for a peseta. She objected that it was very tiny, and he fairly smothered her with: "Woman! Do you want half a bull for a tenpence?"

Which?

Is woman more interesting than man, or the reverse? Man varies more. He has more genius in exceptional individuals, and less of genius-like insight in the average person. He completes; woman endures. He builds externally, she at home. He fights; she preserves. Our worthless opinion is that men are more interesting than women, but that woman is more interesting than man.—Harper's Weekly.

Natural Objection.

"Why won't that rich old curmudgeon let his young wife act in amateur theatricals?"

"Because the last time she took part everybody raved about the way she acted a merry widow part."—Baltimore American.

"Some have greatness thrust upon them."

"I know. They blunder accidentally into a film."—Kansas City Journal.

A Compromise.

Fond Hubby (starting down town):—What will it be, love—flowers or candy? Wife—We'll compromise, dear. You can send both.—Judge.

Nothing is possible to him who is always dreaming of his past possibilities.

A Political Situation.

"What are your views on the political situation?"

"When it comes to a political situation," replied Farmer Cornstassel, "you will have to talk to Si Simlin, the postmaster. He's the only feller around here that ever had one."—Washington Star.

THREE TOASTS.

Giant Strides In Fixing the Boundaries of Our Country.

At a dinner party given by Americans residing in Paris some years ago there were proposed sundry toasts concerning not so much the past and present as the expected glories of the great American nation. In the general character of these toasts geographical considerations were very prominent, and the principal fact which seemed to occupy the minds of the speakers was the unprecedented bigness of our country.

"Here's to the United States," said the first speaker, "bounded on the north by British America, on the south by the gulf of Mexico, on the east by the Atlantic and on the west by the Pacific ocean."

"But," said the second speaker, "this is far too limited a view of the subject. In assigning our boundaries we must look to the great and glorious future, which is prescribed for us by the manifest destiny of the Anglo-Saxon race. Here's to the United States, bounded on the north by the north pole, on the south by the south pole, on the east by the rising sun and on the west by the setting sun."

Here the third speaker arose, a very serious gentleman from the far west. "If we are going," said this truly patriotic American, "to leave the history past and present and take our manifest destiny into account, why restrict ourselves within the narrow limits assigned by our fellow countryman who has just sat down? I give you the United States, bounded on the north by the aurora borealis, on the south by the procession of the equinoxes, on the east by primeval chaos and on the west by the day of judgment." —Philadelphia Press.

WORKED HIS WEAK POINTS.

Mr. Ape Had No Memory, but Lots of Curiosity and Cowardice.

"Curiosity and cowardice," said the one legged veteran, "are the chief characteristics of all monkeys and of most men. I worked in a zoo after the war. I was the keeper of the monkey house. My biggest charge was an ape the size of a twelve-year-old boy, and it was through his curiosity and cowardice that I used to manage him.

"We exercised this ape in the big room every day, but when we wanted him to go back to his cage he'd climb up to the roof of the big room, and even with food you couldn't tempt him down.

"So I would go to Jack Lover and take him gently by the arm and direct his attention in a quiet, mysterious manner to the dark passage under the steam pipes.

"Lover and I every day tiptoed to the pipes. We pretended to point out to each other some horrible, unknown creature in the passage, and we'd say,

"Look out! There he is! There he is!" "As we held each other's arms and bent over and peered into the darkness we'd hear very soon the delicate patter of small, active feet. The ape's curiosity had got the better of him. He crouched beside us. He, too, peered into the dark passage fearfully.

"Then suddenly Lover would shout: 'Look out! He's coming out! He's coming out!' And we'd scamper away in the direction of the ape's house. But the ape would be ahead of us. He'd rush into his house in a perfect whirlwind of excitement and terror. Then—click! We'd snap the door to on him, and he'd look very foolish.

"Every day we fooled the ape in this way. He was long, you see, on curiosity and cowardice, but very short on memory." —Chicago Herald.

Confidence.

Jackson—Heaven bless him! He showed confidence in me when the clouds were dark and threatening. Wilson—In what way? Jackson—He lent me an umbrella. —London Telegraph.

Strategy.

"How did pa act when you asked him for my hand?"

"Very gentle and courteous. It quite took me by surprise."

"I told him you used to be a pugilist." —Houston Post.

SELECT THIS FOR SUMMER.

Here is a linen thin enough to be cool and exquisite in its color of bermuda pink, braided with white cotton braid and trimmed with crochet buttons and the inevitable collar. The coat is in the directoire mode, which is showing itself again this season. A dainty hat of white tagal and pink flowers and button boots of white buck—and what is more summery?

AN UNFORTUNATE AFFAIR

Last Saturday the Walnut street crossing was again the scene of a serious accident when Eugene Libby in driving in back of one passing train was struck by another coming from an opposite direction, and instantly killed.

Mr. Libby had been a lifelong resident of Old Orchard, residing in the Milliken Mills section. He was forty-four years of age and is survived by two brothers and five nieces and nephews. His burial took place on Monday at the Dunstan cemetery. A number of Odd Fellows from the local lodge of which Mr. Libby was a member were in attendance.

AT THE CAMPGROUNDS.

Since Saturday the Portland District Campmeeting has been in full swing, the meetings proving very interesting to a large number who are interested in Christian work. The meetings continue until next Monday. Friday's speaker will be Rev. A. H. Nazarian. His subject will be Foreign and Home Missionary Work. On Saturday at 2.15 p. m. Rev. W. F. Berry of Waterville will give an address on Moral Reform. On Sunday the address will be given at 11.00 a. m. by Rev. J. W. Butler, D. D., of Mexico. His subject will be "Mexico and Her Needs." Mr. Butler has spent over forty years among the Mexican people and is exceptionally qualified to tell of their needs.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clark recently entertained at their home on Washington avenue the following auto party from Everett, Mass.: Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Burnside and family, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. F. O'Malley.

Mrs. F. D. Hale and Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Brown of Huddersfield, Eng., were recent guests of Mrs. Katie Luce at the Luce home on Fort Hill avenue. Mr. Hale is the American consul at Huddersfield, Eng.

ELIAS F. ALKAZIN.

One of Old Orchard's most interesting business men is Mr. Elias F. Alkazin, who at the present time carries on the business at the corner of Old Orchard street and East Grand avenue.

Mr. Alkazin was born in Beyruit, Syria, a little more than forty years ago. His people were prominent and occupied a high position in their community. The earlier part of his existence was spent in Cairo, Egypt, the gateway of the Orient. In Cairo he was educated and lived until nearly twenty years of age. Then it was decided that he should visit a sister who had come to America to live. So he came to Philadelphia merely to visit twenty-one years ago. His sister, Mrs. Barakat, devoted her time to religious and missionary work for the people of Syria, and at that time came to Old Orchard to attend the Christian Alliance Campmeetings. This summer she brought with her, her brother, Elias, to visit. It is well to mention, by the way, that at that time and up until a few years ago, Mr. Alkazin always dressed in the native costume or dress of his country and was a very picturesque character. This interested some of the ladies and they began to teach Elias the English language.

For a long while he cared little for the American ways and manners and was anxious to return to his native land, but the attention showed him did not go long without result for he in turn became interested in the American customs.

As it has been said before his sister was interested in teaching the Americans about Syria and the Orient, and so it was natural that they should have with them many interesting objects for the Orient. These objects were many of them very beautiful and costly and all were interesting. And many wished to purchase from them. The result was, of course, that Elias opened his first store on the Old Orchard Campgrounds twenty-one years ago and has continued in the business of selling Oriental goods since that time.

Later he opened a store in the Porter block on the corner where Cleaves' restaurant now stands. His importations of Oriental goods was large, the most of them expensive, some of the single items running well into the hundreds of dollars. In this location he remained for some years and then moved on what was called "Railroad Walk" and was located here when the fire of 1907 wiped out so many of our good hotels and stores. His store and goods valued at many thousand dollars were lost.

Since the fire he has established a store in the present location and barbers for the American dollar with some Oriental things and many souvenirs. He has also put in a large ice cream and soda place. Another store is carried on by him in Portland.

Mr. Alkazin has been naturalized and his chosen politics is Republican. He is quite progressive and is anxious to see bigger things and costly hotels for Old Orchard.

Making Things Even.

First Lawyer—I hear you are having trouble in getting a jury for that automobile case? Second Lawyer—Yes. We object to everybody who owns a car, and the other side rules out all who don't.—Puck.

COMBINATION OF MATERIALS.

Plain white cotton crape with crape striped in red and bordered with white and red dots makes a smart and effective combination in this summer frock, which follows the summer rule of combination of materials. The loose lines of the blouse, complemented by the vestee of sheer embroidered handkerchief linen and the short Russian tunic, not extending all the way around, have the right touch of summeriness.

THE PIER FEATURES.

Did you miss those exhibitions of Modern Dances on the Pier the early part of this week? If so, you missed a rare treat. Blunket and Daly were surely graceful and executed all of the latest steps with singularly effective punctiliousness. Three new acts came today, and boys, be on hand for Jack Levy arrived with his Symphony Girls and they give a musical act extraordinary. It will delight all, but we like to tip the boys off. There's bound to be plenty of fun, as Ward and Fay have trunks full of comedy which they will spring for the benefit of the Pier patrons. Henry Kelley, all the way from Dublin, or Queenstown, blew in alone to entertain folks with his line of talk and songs.

The grand ball is tomorrow night. Saturday night everybody goes out to the Pier, just because everybody else goes out. That's the place to meet all your friends. Father comes for the week end and brings out all the family.

The motion pictures are changed every day. Remember that if you don't care to dance after the vaudeville show, you can sit on the large piazza in a comfortable chair and enjoy the motion pictures on the outdoor screen. It is an innovation which has met with the greatest favor. The dance hall is the finest in the State, and the floor is in excellent condition.

Classical Photo plays are featured on Sunday, and Monday there will be three new vaudeville acts. If you missed last night's amateurs, don't miss them next week, Wednesday night.—Adv't.

CARNIVAL WEEK

Much Fun and Entertainment Planned for Week of August Third

Fifteen Hundred Dollars in Souvenirs
To Be Dropped from Balloons

Next Monday, Old Orchard will awake to find that Carnival Week is upon them and providing the weather man is lenient and barring all accidents a real festive time is in store for all. So if you have not already done so write and invite all your relatives, friends and acquaintances down for the week. And then all take hold and help to make things hum. If you think you can run, get out your togs and send in your name as an entrant, or if you can swim just write to the Carnival Committee and suggest that you are some swimmer, then you can prove it later. Medals will be awarded to the winners of all events.

Monday, the Bonetti Brothers will start the ball a rolling with the thrilling stunt called the "Slide for Life". Two days of the week this will be on to the beach from some adjacent high point. The third time it will be into Seaside Park. The "Slide for Life" will be on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. On Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday the Bonetti Brothers will ascend in a balloon and do the parachute drops. While they are up in the air they will throw out nearly fifteen hundred dollars worth of souvenirs donated by the various merchants. This will be accomplished by the Balloonists dropping envelopes in which will be orders on the different business people for certain articles in their stores.

So much for the Bonetti Brothers. Now on Thursday the swimming match is scheduled to take place at 11.30 a. m., so are also the running events, the foot races at 3 p. m. The distances to be run are one-half, one and two miles. Appropriate medals to be awarded to winners in each event. On Saturday on the program is a "Tub" race, a "Bag" race and a "three legged" race. These should prove funny and well worth attention.

The races are for amateurs and free for all, prizes are to be awarded in all events. So don't fail to enter or to do your share toward making it the greatest possible success.

The Aerial gymnasts have been on hand and made all arrangements for their part and signed the contract and every other detail has been carefully attended to so that there will not be any hitches. But it takes more than one or a dozen to make a big success of a Carnival, so just join in and help to make things merry for all. Any information which you may desire may be had by addressing the Carnival Committee at P. O. Box 571, or by dropping into the SURF ECHO and MIRROR office over the Post Office.

HOW OLD ORCHARD RECEIVED ITS NAME

A Story of the Early Days of This Place.

Many have wondered why this seaside place with its dashing breakers and miles of splendid beach was not given a name suggestive of these natural attractions. Others have searched for the orchard which might have given the place its name, but have not found it, because it ceased to exist many years ago.

As early as 1616 the portion of the coast now the State of Maine was granted to Sir Ferdinando Gorges. He sent a crew of men with Captain Richard Vines, and they arrived at the mouth of the Saco River in September of that year. They explored the shores of Saco Bay, and settled for the winter near what is now Biddeford Pool. Here Captain Vines and his men built a secure log cabin, and with an abundance of game and fish they were very comfortable. This cabin was the first home of civilized man in this region, and there were no nearer English neighbors than the settlement at Jamestown, Virginia.

During the next few years more colonists came, and an old historical document shows, that in 1629, two men, Richard Vines and John Oldham, were granted all the lands on both sides of the Saco River, including the lands where the cities of Saco and Biddeford are now located. These men were given this land because they had brought colonists, and they also agreed to "transport hither, within seven years, fifty settlers, advance the interests of the country, and give strength against the natives and other invaders." The settlers who came hired the land and paid annual rent. There is a record of one lease for one hundred acres of land for which the settler was to pay "five shillings, two days' work, and one good fat goose, annually, for 1,000 years."

The occupation of these first settlers was principally fishing, as dried fish was readily exchanged for goods from England and the West Indies, and also with the Virginia colony which was settled in 1607, and which was now raising grain and corn. Beside fishing, some of the settlers cut lumber and shaved shingles and clapboards from the pine trees. A few settlers became farmers, and among these was Thomas Rogers, whose farm was near Goose Fair Brook. (This brook was said to be called Goose Fare because the geese came there in large numbers to feed before they "fared" south for the winter.) The Rogers farm was so important that the early geographers are said to have marked it on their maps as "Rogers' Garden." Rogers settled there in 1638.

The trees which he planted were reported to have lived much more than a hundred years, and became known as the old orchard from which this beautiful seaside resort takes its name.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Pier This Week.

Everybody enjoyed the show during the early part of the week, and today three new acts arrived to entertain for the balance of the week. Doncourt and Clay, in a comedy sketch, are well known vaudevillians who have just returned from a trip around the States. The Kirks, object equilibrists supreme, will do quite a little balancing, which will be different from the balancing that most people do around the end of the month. Will Browning, a dialect comedian, is all alone, but his "spiels" should meet with popular approval.

Those Symphony girls made a great hit last week, and an effort will be made to have the act repeated later in the season. The pier management is always springing a surprise, so one should not miss any of the shows. The acts come from the first class vaudeville circuits.

The pictures are changed every day, and it is a well known fact that there are hundreds of people in Old Orchard and vicinity who never saw moving pictures until they went to the outdoor show on the end of the pier. They could not stand the stuffy halls.

Special features include the Grand Ball on Friday, modern dance contests on Saturday, and Amateur Night, Wednesday. If you are looking for any of your friends at night, you are pretty sure to find them on the pier.

The dance hall floor is in excellent condition. If one is interested in the modern dances they may see them in all styles, as the people who summer at Old Orchard come from all parts of the Globe.

At Seaside Park.

As stated in last week's issue of this paper, the new management of Seaside Park is doing everything in its power to make the place an up-to-date place of amusement.

Next Saturday and every following Saturday, boxing matches are scheduled to take place and will, no doubt, prove an item of interest for the boxing enthusiast. A first rate program has been arranged and if the sporting element of Old Orchard and vicinity give the right amount of support there is no question but what many good exhibitions will be given.

The many excursionists who visited the park on Sunday seemed well pleased with everything, and especially the Scenic Railway and the Prancing Ponies which are always a source of pleasure and amusement to all.

MISSIONARY ALLIANCE.

Beginning to-morrow and lasting until August 10th, the Christian Missionary Alliance will hold its annual campmeetings. As usual, Rev. A. B. Simpson will be the leader. Among his aides will be the following: Rev. Dr. Morrison of Kentucky, Rev. Paul Rader of Pittsburg, and probably Rev. Joseph Kemp of Edenburg, Scotland, Rev. E. O. Jago of Palestine, Rev. J. Hudson Ballard of Nyack, N. Y.

Sunday, August 9th, will be the day that the annual Old Orchard offering for foreign missions will be received. And it is expected that it will exceed those of the past few years by some thousands of dollars. The last year offering was approximately forty thousand dollars.

SURF ECHOES OF OLD ORCHARD PEOPLE

The other day on the beach Mr. Wood met Mr. Stone and asked him how all the little pebbles were. "Very well," said Mr. Stone. "How are all the little splinters?" Just then a fair bather emerged from the Seashore bathing house and both Mr. Stone and Mr. Wood turned to rubber.

There is a plumber on Old Orchard street by the name of William. One day recently William went to New York to purchase some supplies and while he was there he thought he would remain a few days and see the sights. Therefore his goods arrived at Old Orchard before he did. His wife being the only one in the store went to look after the goods and when she saw the large packing case she gave a scream and fainted, for in one corner of the case written in a bold hand was—BILL INSIDE.

Old Orchard beach,
Car, a peach;
Moonlight night,
Not too bright;
Young man's arm
'Round her tight;
Cannot guide,
Car aright;
Wild mad rush
Down steep hill,
Ditch at bottom—
All is still.
Broken bones,
Rumpled collars,
Doctor's bill,
Eighty dollars.

OF LOCAL INTEREST.

Miss Alma Brown, Miss Mary T. Brown, and Miss Agnes Wilson of West Somerville are at the Clifford cottage on Fifteenth street for a short visit. Miss May Brown is a contralto concert singer of note.

Dr. W. T. Bragdon of Limington is stopping at the Malvern. This is Dr. Bragdon's thirty-third consecutive season at Old Orchard, and despite his eighty-five years enjoys his daily ocean baths and is much spryer than a great many men many years his junior.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Curtis and children of Melrose are at the Sylvan cottage in the Campground section for the remainder of the season.

The many friends of Mayor and Mrs. Scanlon of Lawrence will regret to learn that the Mayor is seriously ill at Lawrence. After a hurried operation on last Thursday he is quite comfortable.

Sam E. Connor, the Lewiston Journal photographer, was down

Sunday taking pictures. Give us a good write up, Sam.

The following is a recent clipping:

Bar Harbor, Me., July 22.—Society has found a new diversion. Dancing and dinners have been discarded for the "movies." Every night a long line of automobiles can be seen in front of the Star Theatre. From one of the automobiles stepped Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. William H. Force, Miss Katherine E. Force and her fiancé, Henry Harnickel. The four seats cost forty cents.

We venture to say that for the expenditure of that forty cents in one of the local "movies" much better pictures could have been observed.

Harry Owl, Henry Owl and William Fletcher, who are Cherokee and Cheyenne Indians, stopped off at Old Orchard early in the week en route to Rockland. They are students at the Hamilton Institute in Virginia and have made the trip up the coast by power boat.

*PERCY R. RICH, Editor.
F. A. ELLIOTT,
Business Manager.*

Saturday ushers in August. To the worried business man the outlook seems very favorable. The last two weeks of July have done their durndest to make up for lost time and yet we may see a bigger season than ever before. Here's hoping.

A news item in the daily papers runs a pathetic story of how Villa, the Mexican general, is torturing the senior Terrazos (Mexico's richest man), by threats of death to his son unless he gives him so much money at regular intervals. Up to now it is claimed that Villa has mulcted over two million and he now insists that Terrazos sell all his cattle, over four million dollars worth, and divide with him as the price of the junior Terrazos' safety. The American people sit idly by and see such blackmail carried on. We wonder how much it must arouse some lovers of justice to thought.

Every now and then some vacationist is heard to complain about the high price of vacationing. If he would stop to think of the heavy investment made just for his two months' fun and recreation we "wot" his cry would seem insignificant even to him.

The Casco Bay Breeze, the live resort weekly covering the Islands in Casco Bay, is always a welcome exchange.

Speed the Summer months.

Remember, be vigilant—swat the fly.

STRAGGLERS.

Years ago, in this vicinity, the wanderers, now called tramps, were known as stragglers. They were sometimes a source of amusement and again of annoyance to the inhabitants and anecdotes of them were often told in later years. One time a farmer, going into his barn in the evening to give his cattle a feeding of hay, was surprised by a woman who suddenly rose up before him. In answer to his inquiry as to her name she replied in a shrill voice "Miss Susan," and the man, confused and bewildered, retreated to his fireside and Miss Susan wandered away to spend the night elsewhere. Another of these stragglers appeared, wearing an overcoat and barefoot, in the hot weather of haying time. He made his lodging place in a hay barn, but one day the farmer who owned it, finding him there when he wished to put in a load of hay, ordered him away in a very emphatic manner and he left to return no more.

One of the old time residents, being a sailor as well as a farmer, had gone on a coasting trip, leaving his family to care for the farm. Early one morning his daughter went to the barn and climbed to the top of the hay mow to discover a man sleeping there. She descended the ladder more quickly than she ascended it, and the nearest neighbor was called on for assistance. The sleeper was awakened and, being questioned, stated that he had served in the army and as he wore an old military coat his story seemed credible. After being breakfasted this wandering son of Mars went on his way. Old Hannah Smith was long remembered; and her story in some way came to the knowledge of those who gave her food and shelter when she made her journeys to Old Orchard. She was the daughter of a wealthy family and having married in opposition to her father's wishes was sternly forbidden his house. Love's dream was brief and she was left penniless. In her desolation and sorrow she went to her father's dwelling, where she had spent the happy days of childhood, and, standing outside the window in a wintry storm, begged for admittance and forgiveness. But her father refused and remained unmoved by her entreaties. This seemed the last drop in her cup of woe and thereafter she wandered about the country. In the summer time she would turn her steps toward Maine. Through York and Wells, by the seashore and along the banks of the Saco the poor creature made her way. One of her peculiarities was her care to leave a house by the same door at which she entered as she held fast the superstitious notion that to do otherwise might bring misfortune to the inmates. But the time came when the summer leaves and flowers unfolded in all their beauty and the air was soft and warm, but she came not,—long ago her life of sorrow ended.

Another visitor was Captain Francis, an Indian, who had great skill in working basket stuff. He also had knowledge of the medicinal properties of roots and herbs and his visits were not wholly unwelcome.

These strangers and pilgrims are members of the great human family; but in many cases they are indeed problems even for students of Sociology. But let the mantle of charity cover them when they have gone the way of all the earth.

SHOWING RAPID DEVELOPMENT

The Jas. Jay Smith Co., who are developing the Surf Side property, report eleven lots sold in the past ten days. Among the purchasers are the following:

Mr. Alfred Bonneau, editor and publisher of LaJustice of Biddeford, and Mrs. Josephine Ledoux, also of Biddeford, Mrs. Frank Leonard and Miss Katherine Hamilton of Brunswick, Mrs. Frank Gorman of Montreal, Mr. Perry of the Perry, Owen Art Co., of Portland, and H. H. Boody of North Windham.

Surf Side is the last but one of the undeveloped shore tracts here, and it will now be but a short time before this property is completely developed. The Smith Co. report many good prospects and they expect to complete plans at an early date for the erection of several houses (work to begin in August), for some of their customers.

Japanese Denied Luxuries.

The most expensive single fruit in the Japanese fruit stores is the natsumikan, a species of grapefruit (Citrus decumana), which sells throughout the winter for 7½ cents each. These are not eaten in great quantities by the class of people who make the great fruit-buying population in the United States. The average income of the Japanese family of four is about $150 a year. This sum does not leave much margin for the purchase of luxuries.

PASSING COMMENT.

If you were to interest yourself in Old Orchard and wanted to see a plan or map of the town which would show the streets and private ways as well as different plots of lands, your efforts would be to no avail for none is extant. There are several showing private plots or developments but not at all complete or quite up to date. Old Orchard has struggled along up to now without such a needful thing. Several people have made efforts to see that such a thing was provided but so far with little success.

Until a map is provided the municipal improvements will have to be made upon the hit or miss fashion which is always so unsatisfactory.

At the Annual Town meeting in March, a special appropriation was made by the citizens for the improvement of Hillside avenue from Union to Ocean avenues. This is a street which is a much traveled thoroughfare serving practically all the territory back of Union avenue as an outlet. Its condition has been so bad that it is almost impassable for automobiles, and quite dangerous for teams, several having been overturned on the steep grade. Without exaggeration it is the worst stretch of street in Old Orchard. The Road Commissioner, Mr. McGrath, has promised to those who have property near it that it would be immediately attended to, so have also two of the Selectmen, but to date (appropriation was made in March) it has not been touched, except that a surveyor some time in June drove in a few stakes. Those who had a hand in the securing of the appropriation are wondering just how much longer the road will remain in its present state.

Put this in your pipe and smoke it. Old Orchard at the time of the fire in 1907 was spending less than two thousand dollars on its roads. This year it is spending over sixty-five hundred dollars. Also at the time of the fire it had practically no good or cement sidewalks, today it has over fifteen miles, $24,000.00 having been spent in their construction. Again do you realize that the assessed valuation has increased over a third of a million dollars since that time, and also that it has now over a third greater room accommodation for guests at its hotels.

Here is another item from "Kinney Shores" just beyond Ocean Park. Road Commissioner Fletcher of Saco is constructing to the water front from West Grand avenue extended a good stretch of roadway. In its construction Mr. Fletcher is using rock as the first application, then clay and a later course of gravel.

Among those who are posting their doggers upon the telegraph posts we note the Seashore Theatre, The Base Ball Team, The Pentacostical Missionaries, Pastor Mark John Levy, announcements, and the Pier people. We wonder if they realize that besides detracting from the appearance of the locality, it is against the law and that it also endangers the lives of the linemen whose chances for a fall are greater if their spurs strike a tack and fail to catch.

We are in receipt of a communication commending the Police Department upon the placing of a crossing policeman at the corner of East Grand avenue and Old Orchard street during the heavy hours of traffic on Sunday.

Mr. O. P. Greene says that if the gentlemen or gentleman who visited his store the other evening without permission will return one of the two odd shoes he carried away, Mr. Greene will leave the mate on the following night.

Old Orchard is some place now, isn't it?

Master John R. Fell, Jr., during the summer season is a resident of Newport, the very fashionable resort of America's richest folks. In winter he lives in New York city, so he sees society in both seasons. That is, John R., Jr., might see it if he chose to bother about it, which he does not. He is too young and full of the carelessness of youth to bother about anything that isn't fun. John is a real boy of the American kind, who is mainly interested in things common to boys of his years. For instance, John met a photographer down at Newport, and he wasn't a bit uppish. He posed gleefully for the man with the camera and held his dog Buster by the tail, so that the little animal could be in

The Eagle Emblem.

The Etruscans were the first race to adopt the eagle as an emblem of their royal power and to carry it high upon their standards at the head of their armies. From the time of Marius it was the emblem of the Roman republic and was borne on the standard of the legions. It was generally represented with outstretched wings and was made of silver until the time of Hadrian, who made it of finest gold.

The Byzantine emperors used the double headed eagle to indicate their claim to the empire of the east and west.

The German emperors adopted it in the fourteenth century, and afterward it appeared on the arms of Russia.

Prussia carries on her standards the black eagle, and Poland bears a white eagle.

The United States of America has adopted the white headed eagle as an emblem.

Napoleon adopted the eagle as emblematic of imperial France.

A Wonderful Wall.

Few people realize what an almost perfect condition prevails along a large part of the great wall of China. The bricks of the parapet are as firm as ever, and their edges have stood the severe climatic conditions of north China with scarcely a break. The paving along the top of the wall is so smooth that one may ride over it with a bicycle, and the great granite blocks with which it is faced are smooth and as closely fitted as when put in place over 2,000 years ago.

The entire length of this wall is 1,400 miles. It is twenty-two feet high and twenty feet in thickness. At intervals of 100 yards or so there are towers, some forty feet in height.—Popular Mechanics.

FOURTH OF JULY FAR OUT AT SEA

HOW THE BOYS AND GIRLS MADE THE DAY MERRY

LITTLE STORIES OF BIG BOAT

Sea Sickness, the Three Stages, Sailor Stories, Nearing Honolulu

Some fellow who had probably been several times across the big drink got off these three stages of ocean sickness:

First—Afraid you are going to die.

Second—Don't care if you do die.

Third—Want to die.

Just before I left San Francisco for the Sandwich Islands, I read for the 'steenth time what a newspaper friend laid down as my rule and guide for the trip—if I wanted to stay on deck and notice things.

This was the dope:

The best preventative for sea-sickness is Christian Science. This is true. If you are sick and feel rotten, go down to meals anyway, even if you can't stay down—and even if the meals are afflicted the same way. Keep at it; keep trying to act as if you weren't sick, and finally your stomach will be bluffed out of it by your brains. This "cure" is on the principle of tiring your stomach out quick—it is better than watchful waiting."

With a beautiful faith I went to this treatment that is supposed to triumph over a sick stomach and long Pacific custom.

I went down and had the waiter bring me about all on the card, ate it, bought a strong cigar and started walking eight times around the deck. I was going to show these hundreds of passengers (who were already getting pale and dropping by the wayside) that all one had to do was to exert the will power and the old tub could roll as much as the winds wanted her to.

I made it twice, then felt a sort of elevator sensation in my stomach and went into the social hall to rest. There were about a dozen ahead of me, who had probably tried the mind cure.

The piano player started up "You'll remember me," and then some fellow tried to whistle "Nearer My God to Thee."

This was the first stage. We looked at each other and were afraid we were going to die. The steamer must be rolling frightfully. She pitched, dipped, side-rolled, stood on her end.

I pushed the sign of distress button and asked a steward to lead me below. I didn't want to see the ship go down and I couldn't longer stand the "Nearer My God to Thee" that fellow kept whistling.

Stateroom details of ocean sickness are not entertaining or edifying. For 24 hours I lay there, staring at the ceiling—and got the second and third stages—passed through the "don't care" to the "want to die;" listened to the sad sea waves and hoped every settle of the steamer would be the last, so my stomach could rest.

And the next afternoon when I crawled on deck to see if much of the boat was left, I heard the captain say it was the smoothest trip he had seen in months.

But there is nothing in that Christian Science doings as applied to a trip to Honolulu. It may work out in books; it may be all right in the southwest where an ocean in only a mirage, but out here on the pond, where the boats take you up, leave you for a second, then let you fall until your head reels and your stomach kicks—I don't believe the theory can be worked successfully, disciples of Mary Baker Eddy to the contrary.

This story is made up of the steamer's sidelights—of the incidents that go to break up the monotony of a long voyage. One will mill around (aft (after he gets in direct communication with his stomach) to find something new. The wireless newspaper has little more startling than that Sacramento beat San Francisco, and the decks have nothing of interest but the same old shuffle-board and rope quoit games, so a fellow looking for something of interest to write about will go up to the steerage end; will pick up an oiler, wiper or some other fellow with the blue denims on; catch them going to eat; tell them you are from Liverpool and a friend of Jack London, and some of them will tell you stories for a half hour—the most of which can't be printed.

They have tattooed pictures from their noses to their toes. They are the real salt water bums and have been in most every port, and every sailor who will tell you anything, will tell of about a dozen shipwrecks, most of which never happened, because he thinks that is what a newspaper man wants to know about.

At 4.30 A. M., long before the boat had come alive, I was walking on the steerage end and a Kanaka was down on the deck scraping off stains with a knifeblade. I asked him if he lived in the islands and he said he was born there. I told him I was going to write up the leper peninsula of Molakai, and asked if he knew anything about it.

He told me to sit down until he came back. When he returned he said the steward would let him polish the threshold and knob to my stateroom (for half the tip) and he could tell me a story newspaper men did not often get.

He did. It was early in the A. M., and he got it by. While he polished the brass and brought in a fresh pitcher of water (which the man outside handed him) he said that 16 years ago, when he came into Honolulu from China, as a sailor, his arms and legs were broken out and cracked open with eczema. And he had the scars to make the story good. The health board examined him, pronounced him a leper, and exiled him to Molakai for life; that he had a wife and six children in the island of Maui; that he lived there for four years, apart from the lepers and was then released.

And then in fifteen minutes this sailor told me of some of the awful conditions of the leper colony (details that made me shudder with horror) and told me that unless I wanted dreams to haunt me, to keep away from the leper end of Molakai.

All of which I will know about later, but I asked the steward to carry out the fruit and water pitcher, and that night I had nightmares of blackmen, raising themselves up from their sand beds looking at me with their lidless, awful eyes, and calling out "Unclean! Unclean!"

How much this half breed put it over on me I hope to tell you later on—for I am going over to Molakai.

iod, came two Englishmen, or rather boys. There were a dozen or two old-timers sitting around. The posing sons of English nobility, with their plaid caps and conspicuous clothes, lighted their cigarettes, when one of them posed and got rid of this:

"I have two ambitions; one to get fat, the other bald-headed."

An old-timer, doubtless sized up mama's tourist and remarked:

"Anybody can get fat eating fish and poi, but it takes a man with a high forehead to get bald."

The laughter drove the Englishmen out of the room, and I never saw them return.

Fourth of July at sea. I was thinking I would find an old newspaper or two, a magazine, a deck chair and sit there and wonder what they were doing back on land.

But Fourth of July on a Pacific steamer is just as big a day as in Bingville on land.

Friday night were the "commencement" exercises, and to the shame of the men, the American girls had to start it. With the assistance of the ship officers they went through the steamer and held up everybody—hunting them out of their staterooms and insisting they come down with at least four bits to "defray expenses" and contribute to the program in the way of some entertainment.

A bunch of we modest fellows found refuge in the smoking hall—the ladies wouldn't follow us there. But the chief steward got at the head of about twenty-five of them and they came in.

One by one they singled up out and informed us we must do something for our country—sing, dance, whistle, or jump overboard. A day or two before I would have welcomed dying for my country. When the seasickness was epidemic, I had that martyr feeling. But now I was back on three squares a day, coffee, fruit and beef tea before breakfast, and wanted to see Honolulu. So as a last expedient I was booked as the undertaker, to pick up the remains after it was all over. I was put down on the card where you find the "Raisins and Nuts"—and overlooked in the next day's excitement.

The next morning's wireless news had the full program—and the like of it was never seen on land. In the afternoon absolutely everybody got into the game, the officers, tourists, business men, the ship's doctor, society women, tiny tots—everybody forgot he or she ever lived in Chicago or Seattle, and just went in for a celebration that couldn't be pulled off with success anywhere else than 1,500 miles from shore.

For an opener was "Are you There, Casey?" Volunteers from the crowd started it, two ice cream tourists laid down on the mat and furnished the most entertainment an audience ever had. They knew they were to be made "goats" and were glad to push on the entertainment.

Each was blindfolded and on his forehead was tied a square cracker. They were placed head to head and each given a roll of newspapers, tightly wound with string. The winner was the one who could break the cracker on his opponent's head. One would ask, "Are you there, Casey?"

to get the bearings, and then he would "swat." And this was kept up, with side-rollings, squirmings, dodgings for a half hour, the hardrolled cubes of papers sounding like Hans Wagner's three base hits, when each brought it down with all his might on where he thought the other fellow's head should be. Of all the funny stunts I ever saw, this one was the real noise.

The "cockfight" was another that would send you to your stateroom laughing. Volunteers were simply forced into the ring. A circle perhaps a dozen feet in circumference was drawn on the deck. The two pit games were first class passengers. They would sit down, draw up their knees; clasp their arms over the knees. A trapeze bar would be shoved through, then the hands tied, and you had the most laughable exhibition of two men, hobbled, and each was to try to get his opponent outside the ring. And there they would lie, well-dressed business men or tourists, turned helplessly over on their sides, the crowd roaring, while one tried to crowd the other outside of the chalk circle. You must have to see it on an ocean deck to half appreciate it.

Then came the cigarette race. Four men lined up at one end of the course with cigarettes in their teeth; four ladies at the opposite end with boxes of safety matches. The winner was the girl who could first reach her partner; light his cigarette and the pair race back to starting place. With a stiff breeze blowing, it was great amusement for the crowd.

Then followed the other old-time games, three-legged race, potato race, etc., and in the evening a program in the social hall, which kept everybody awake until midnight.

And after six days and nights, early in the morning, we see the coast of Oahu in the distance, and the long journey will soon end.

I saw a Jap or Chinese mother, with her brood of three, stowed away in a lemon-box and the box on a sort of a wheelbarrow, and she wheeled it up the street, giving them the benefit of a bit of fresh air. The oldest couldn't wedge in, so he sat on the handle-bars and I suppose told mother where to guide the auto. She wore the pajamas and sandals, barefooted, with a string between the two great toes to hold the sandals on. She took the youngsters down to the public square and turned them loose and in less than five minutes the oldest (I figured he was a boy) had been hit in the nose with an American grounder, hit out by a Portuguese. Mixing 'em up some.

And in the next letter will try to give you something of the real life of the Hawaiian—of the way they live, etc., that should be interesting.

This letter is simply first impressions of a strange town—just side-lights written from notes as one jots them down on the street.
(M. J. Brown, Courier, Oregon City.)

Question of Height.

Lady Southwark, in her recently published reminiscences, tells a story of an Irishman who was cutting turf near a bog when a friend came up to him, crying: "Patrick is stuck in the bog up to his ankles." "Don't worry, then," was the reply; "if he's only up to his ankles he can soon get out again!" "Yes, but he went in head first!" retorted the other.—Pearson's Weekly.

Still Soaking Sapleigh.

George T. Marye, Named
Ambassador to Russia.

George Thomas Marye of San Francisco, who has been nominated for the post of ambassador to Russia by President Wilson, had previously been considered for the French portfolio. The government of France, however, intimated that while it would not refuse to receive Mr. Marye it would prefer that he be not appointed. The reason apparently was because of Mr. Marye's attitude toward the last tariff legislation, when he championed the interests of California winemakers to the detriment of their French competitors. It is understood, however, that Mr. Marye is entirely acceptable to the Russian government.

A native of Baltimore and fifty-eight years of age, Mr. Marye has lived in California since early life, having been taken there by his father, who was a pioneer gold prospector. As a young man he was sent abroad to complete his studies and spent several years at Cambridge, Paris, Barcelona and Berlin, where he became conversant with the modern languages and with the principles of international law.

Returning to this country, Mr. Marye was admitted to the bar of California and practiced with success. Some years ago, however, he succeeded his father in mining and business enterprises and gave up the law. Ten years ago he established a home in Washington, where he has since resided.

An Odd Beast Is the Aye-aye.

Have you ever heard of the aye-aye? No? Well, it is a small mammal about the size of a cat and inhabits Madagascar. It is said to have been named because of the peculiar cry it makes—aye-aye-aye! It has sharp teeth like those of a rat and long, thin fingers with pointed claws. But the middle finger of each paw is exceptionally long and thin. And for a purpose too. It feeds chiefly upon earthworms, so finds this middle finger very convenient for poking into worm holes and dragging forth the luckless dwellers therein.

Daily Thought.

"Patience . . . and have faith and thy prayer will be answered."—Longfellow.

To Seal Bottles.

Bottles may be securely sealed in the following manner: Melt together a quarter of a pound of sealing wax, the same quantity of resin and two ounces of beeswax. When the mixture froths, stir it with a tallow candle. As soon as each ingredient is melted, dip the tops of the corked bottles in the mixture. It will completely exclude the air.

Spirit of Independence.

"The spirit of American independence is growing stronger every year." "Mebbe 'tis," assented Uncle Flopsie. "Mebbe 'tis. When I was a young feller they had a man to call the figgers at a dance. An' you bet we tried to mind him. Now everybody gets out on the floor an' lets his feet do jes' about as they please."

To Cure a Cold.

Coughs and Colds—An ordinary cold can often be checked in the first stages by inducing a good perspiration. A glass of very hot milk drunk after you are in bed, or the juice of a lemon added to a tumbler of boiling water, will often accomplish this. A hot bath to which a little ammonia has been added is another method.

SUNDAY WAS BIG DAY AT OLD ORCHARD

Estimated 30,000 Were at the Resort on That Day.

(Clipped from Biddeford Journal.)

It looks as though Old Orchard is coming back.

Not since the days before the big fire has there been such a crowd at the resort as visited it Sunday, a conservative estimate of the number of people that thronged the beach, the pier and the streets being from 30,000 to 35,000.

It was a happy, care-free crowd, too, composed of folks in all stations of life, from millionaires to those who work six days a week throughout the year, and all were out for a good time. If any didn't enjoy themselves, it certainly was not for lack of entertainment in progress.

But the greatest show of all was the crowd itself. The men, women and children were coming and going all day by train, trolley and automobile, and at one time there must have been at least 500 motor cars lining the streets leading to the beach and parked elsewhere in the village. Hundreds were enjoying the bathing at high tide, and the beach, which is one of the finest on the Atlantic coast, was covered with many hundreds strolling back and forth or watching the bathers.

If anything, the place was gayest than ever before, and while there was undoubtedly some violation of the law, there was not enough to make conditions very noticeable. In fact, the crowd was far from being boisterous or noisy, but was simply having a mighty good time. One great improvement noted by the visitors was the oiling of the main street, so that not a particle of dust was in evidence during the day and as this thoroughfare is now brilliantly illuminated at night, the scene Sunday evening was one long to be remembered.

Several excursions were run to Old Orchard Sunday. One long train brought a tremendous crowd from Sherbrooke, Quebec, and there were other excursions from different points in the State of Maine. The regular trains also brought a throng of sightseers.

WANT RUINS REMOVED.

Residents of Ocean Park are wondering if something cannot be done towards having what is left of the ruins of last year's big fire near the railroad station, removed. They say it is not because the parties have not had plenty of time, as others who suffered by the fire cleared their lots last fall. The residents claim the ruins are an eye sore and earnestly hope that something will be done toward clearing up the lots. One man told the Journal that he knew of a dozen men at least who stood ready to take hold and help move the stuff away.

OLD PETER WAS CONTENTED

Nothing Disturbed Serenity of Baseball Umpire Until Little Son Told Wife of Mistake.

Old Peter was feeling like one big, contented smile as he stood in the glorious sunshine, arrayed in a long coat of dazzling whiteness, umpiring the first match of the season.

Looking up he noticed that the hands of the big clock on the pavilion had crept to ten minutes past twelve, and he realized that he was getting "peckish."

His right hand felt for the packet of sandwiches which his wife had insisted—much against his will—on putting in his pocket.

Salmon and shrimp paste plastered between slices of a new bread and butter make a pleasant meal, and old Peter felt happier than ever.

But on a sudden his brow became clouded, for, walking calmly out into the sacred field, came his small son, Billy. Heedless of frowns and warnings, Bill walked up to his parent.

"Mother says she wants them sandwiches back."

"Back?" roared the indignant umpire. "I've eaten them half an hour ago!"

"Then you must clean your boots with salmon and shrimp paste tomorrow! Mother put the polish in your sandwiches!"

Effective Substitute.

Tourist—You have an unusually large acreage of corn under cultivation; don't the crows annoy you a great deal?

Farmer—Oh, not to any extent.

Tourist—That's peculiar, considering you have no scarecrows.

Farmer—Oh, well, you see, I'm out here a good part of the time myself. —New York Mail.

No Longer Plain.

"Of course you can depend on the wisdom of the plain people?"

"I used to feel that way," replied the member of congress. "But after looking over the clothes and the dancing I can't help fearing that the people out home are getting rather fancy"

The Proper Procedure.

"I asked the doctor the other day why an operation could be such a success when the patient died?"

"What did he say?"

"He gave me a look of scorn and said: 'Let's bury the subject.'"

Points for Mothers

The Boy's Model.

In the Woman's Home Companion Mary Heaton Vorse, writing a story entitled "His Manly Dignity," comments as follows on the practice of urging small boys "to be a man like father:"

"From earliest infancy they implore their boy children to 'be a man.' That glorious goal is pointed out to a boy baby from the moment he can understand anything. He is not only told to 'be a man,' but to 'be a man like father.' I often wonder how the fathers bear it. I often wonder how they can stand there apparently so smug and contented when this ideal of conduct is suggested to their innocent babies. Don't they really see themselves, I wonder? Aren't there some of them at this who have a sudden, beneficent impulse to exterminate their own sons if the feat of growing up to be a man like father is all that awaits the innocent before them? How can they bear the adoring gaze that their little sons fasten upon them?

"Some little boys have a trick of looking so much more like real men with all the qualities that we love to think of as belonging to the most manly of men than grownup men do. I have seen them stamping down the street, still in skirts, and a man in the fullness of his powers couldn't have better exemplified finer masculine traits.

"No one tells little girls to hurry up and 'be a woman like mother.'"

Training the Ears.

A child should never be permitted to insert anything in its ear. Often if there is an itching sensation a child will poke in the head of a pin. This is altogether wrong and may bring about deafness.

In training the ears to lie straight in babyhood it is wrong to let the little one lie with its ears crumpled. Straighten them and see that they stay so.

In putting on a child's cap see that both ears are properly placed, as the cartilage, being so soft, the weight of a ribbon string may keep it out of place.

So much is done in the line of surgery these days that parents who can afford the prices should have any deformity of the ears attended to at as early an age as possible. It is not right to permit anything of the kind to be endured through life if it can be avoided.

Often after such diseases as measles, scarlet fever, etc., the hearing is defective. This comes from the inflammation of the ear drum and seems almost impossible to avoid. If there is a constant running from the ears of a child an aurist should be consulted immediately. There is a cause that should be treated without delay.

Canopies For Cribs.

A better protection for the baby's crib than is the length of quilting that goes around the four sides of the little one's daytime sleeping place is the tent canopy. It hangs from a hook in the ceiling, falls straight to the floor and may be drawn about the crib in a manner to protect the occupant thoroughly from whatever direction a draft is likely to come.

Yet at the same time the baby gets plenty of air, as no matter in what portion of the room the crib is placed the curtaining need go only part way around it.

Some mothers have these tent canopies in printed cretonne, but they are daintier and quite as serviceable in a lingerie or a muslin curtaining material, which may be finished with lace ruffings. Along the lower edges they are lead weighted so that they shall not blow about.

Hot Weather Tempers.

Many minor ailments—and much bad temper—can be prevented by intelligent anticipation.

The first signs of trouble are seen in restlessness at night and fidgetiness by day, a tendency to crossness and often to disobedience and fretfulness. Sometimes a tiny rash under the skin will be seen after a fairly warm bath, and a child suffers from capriciousness of appetite (which is not the same thing as loss of appetite, though this, too, may be present) and generally shows a tendency to either constipation or diarrhea.

Now, all these, temper and troubles of physical conditions alike, are due to the overheated condition of the blood, and a little simple dosing and careful dieting will soon mend matters.

Medicine Cakes.

Some children who refuse to take castor oil make no fuss if it is given in this way: Take one cupful of milk, one of molasses, half a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of castor oil, a teaspoonful of soda, two of ginger, a little salt and enough flour to make a stiff paste. Roll out, cut into shapes and bake in a quick oven. One or two are as good as a dose of oil.

Use For Gay Rugs.

Very cheap and gaudy little bath rugs that would look too garishly bright on the quiet inside of a house are delightful when bought for the garden. The tots are not so likely to take cold when they sit on a rug and play quiet games as when they roll on the ground which is likely to be damp.

TAFFETA AND TOWELING.

Here's a Striking Combination of Materials In Smart Afternoon Frock.

The oddest combinations of fabrics are sanctioned this season. One of these is cleverly carried out in the case of the gown of embroidered toweling and white pussy willow taffeta

Wagner.

Fred Clarke evidently fears that Hans Wagner is due to crack. The Pirate leader has just closed a deal for Jimmy McAuley, leading shortstop of the Central association, who will report Aug. 15. Both the Giants and White Sox were after McAuley, but Clarke beat them to it. In the meantime Honus goes along to the best of his present ability, which is quite some at that.

Umpire Pulls Queer Decision.

Umpire Silk O'Loughlin pulled a queer decision in Washington recently. Manager Griffith was coaching at third base with two men on bases when a wild throw was made to first base. Gandil scored easily, and Shanks, attempting to follow him, turned wide in rounding third base. Griffith had his back to Shanks when the latter crashed into him and knocked him down. Shanks got up and ran to the plate. Umpire Hildebrand allowed him to score, but O'Loughlin overruled him on the ground that Griffith had touched a base runner and that the latter was out. Here is a case where an umpire should have used a little common sense. Griffith was not trying to help the runner, and, as a matter of fact, he really hindered him, yet the runner was called out. O'Loughlin was right in a strict interpretation of the rules, but such a decision looks silly.

"Too Many Stars," Says Ewing.

"There are too many soubrettes in the Coast league," says J. Cal Ewing, part owner of the San Francisco club. "They cost the management anywhere from $200 to $1,000 a month, and what good are they?"

"If I had my way I'd cut out this temperament stuff from baseball. I don't want temperament, but ability. Yes, I'm carrying too many men now—not that I believe in it, but that I have to. All the other clubs are, and if I should begin to cut down I'd never hear the last of it from the public."

"Yet show me a club that is gaining anything by carrying from eight to ten pitchers when only four of them or possibly five do all the work. Ten or twelve years ago four pitchers were enough for any club, in spite of which we have people who complain that the twenty man limit is a hardship."

Disturber IV. In England.

Disturber IV., the 1,800 horsepower hydroplane built by James A. Pugh as challenger for the Harmsworth trophy, has arrived at Cowes, England, where on Aug. 15 it will meet foreign boats in the first race for the world's championship.

The racer attained a speed of fifty miles an hour at one time with much power in reserve. At this speed the boat was traveling with four planes out of the water, the air system keeping the water away from the sides at all times.

Billy M. Sets New Record.

Bill M., called the Indiana Thunderbolt, furnished a sensation at the Rockport track in the Lake Erie circuit races by reeling off three half mile heats in the average time of 1:01½, thereby setting a record in the harness sport for the fastest three heat races over a mile track.

FOR MATURE YEARS.

Dark Blue Serge Tailored Suit
Suitable For Elderly Woman.

MODISH SERGE SUIT

Of dark blue serge in the latest model, and in perfect accord with what the middle aged woman should wear is this tailored suit, with its suggestion of a cape. Good taste is exemplified rather than extremes of style a hat of black straw banded with taffeta ribbon and boasting a cluster of uncurled ostrich.

CLEANING HATS.

Oxalic Acid In Solution Gives Good Results For Fine Straws.

A panama hat is a delightful accessory to one's summer wardrobe. It may be cleaned or bleached repeatedly. A teaspoonful of oxalic acid to a pint of lukewarm water will safely clean a panama, jehorn, milan and other light straw hats. Oxalic acid is poisonous and must be kept away from children.

Apply to the hat with a soft brush or sponge. Clean only a small portion at a time and then rub off as much moisture as possible with a clean white cloth, as in this way there will be less tendency of the hat losing its shape.

Go over the entire hat carefully and when partly dry press with a moderately hot iron over a muslin cloth. Lemon juice may be used instead of the oxalic acid with good results.

Daily Thought.

As my life today has been determined by the way I lived my yesterday, so my tomorrow is being determined by the way I live today.—Ralph Waldo Trine.

The Ball Team.

Today they play the Cornish aggregation and they will undoubtedly have another scalp to their credit by tonight.

Friday they play York Beach. The York boys have a reputation of being some players but they were beaten last week by Old Orchard. For Saturday the fast Raymond team is scheduled and an interesting game seems imminent.

The team has won games as follows:

Laughlin team, Portland,	10 to 3
York Mills League team,	2 to 1
Westbrook,	8 to 1
Sears Cubs of Sanford,	8 to 1
York Beach,	4 to 2
Rochester,	5 to 2
Crossman A. C.,	7 to 2
Fort McKinley,	1 to 0

THE PARADISE OF THE PACIFIC

HONOLULU AND THE WRITER'S FIRST IMPRESSIONS

NOT A CITY IN WORLD LIKE IT

Fifteen Centuries can be Seen in a Fifteen Minute Street Walk

(M. J. Brown, Oregon City Courier.)

A friend once said to me, that when he had finished with the cares and vexations of a business and political life; when he had played the game to the ninth inning and couldn't make good any longer, that he hoped to go over to Hawaii and play the bench for the rest of the season—to finish the game along the lines of least resistance—where there were many grandstands and few pinch hitters.

After about two days in Honolulu I have come to the conclusion that when I pass out, I would rather have a choir that could sing, "We will Meet Him Bye and Bye," mostly in English.

In the early forenoon I walked down one street in Honolulu counted until I saw an American, and there were 64 to 1 against the States, and that isn't a ratio in favor of wanting to die over in an easy-going country.

Of course I may have strayed into a street that gave Uncle Sam the worst of it, but when I finally did see a Panama hat, I asked him what state he was from.

In the fewest minutes one can see the greatest varieties in life in Honolulu of any place I have ever visited.

On one street car (they have them in Honolulu) I heard as many different languages as there were seats in the car in a ride of a half dozen blocks.

The native Hawaiian, Japanese, Chinese, Portuguese, and some I thought must have been Limberger Cheese. The Filipino, the Cuban negro, the Malay, Korean—every nation on the globe, I think, can be seen in a walk of a block in Honolulu. But the most amusing scramble was an early morning scene—a big Dane (or Swede), a walnut-colored Kanaka and a little Jap. The Oriental may have been sober, but the other two, sailors, were too drunken to walk alone. Each had an arm around the son of Nippon. Vainly he tried to break away and beat it, but the sailors had him fast, and the street spectators had a free show.

The States may say they own the Hawaiian Islands, and really think so. Uncle Sam may run up the stars and stripes on these stragetic dots of the Pacific, and mail out post cards at the domestic rate. He may have his thousands of tons of coal laid by and his 8,000 soldiers drawing pay, but when it comes down to proving up the cash register—the Japs own the islands, run the islands, dominate them, and have everything but the deed. And the sailors tell you they don't need that—that they have a sort of a tax title they are satisfied with.

They are the whole thing. They simply run the islands. In every line they wedge in and crowd the other fellow out. From beer rustling in the wharf saloons to head clerks in the best department stores, the little brown men are there with the glitter and the goods. There is hardly a line of business they do not dominate, from sugar plantations to shoe shines. Quiet, persistent, cutting in, staying in and never quitting, the Japs have the Hawaiian Islands. Uncle Sam may have them on paper, and pay the expense.

Yet there is such a contrast. The Japs snap up every American custom and style. You will see them with the latest wireless in fashion, while their wives hobble along the streets in sandals of the time of Christ; holding up the oriental sunshade and clattering along with heels dragging, with a baby strung over the shoulder, like an Isleta Indian.

Such is life in a cosmopolitan town.

It's all so different in Honolulu—that is you can see something different any time you care to.

After Old Sol had quit the job and the city was cooling off, I went down to the (what shall I term it?)

the foreign quarter; where two or three acres were laid out in what white men would call a park. And for an hour I watched hundreds of people play almost every American game, from base ball to tennis, and I never heard an English word spoken.

After business hours you will see the Japs, Chinamen, or whatever they are, pull off their shoes and stockings, and hang their feet over the railings; while the mother will take the half dressed kiddies along the sidewalk, and I suppose teach them how to swipe a bunch of islands while the owner isn't looking.

Honolulu is worse than Boston. Narrow, crooked streets, and you don't know whether you are going or coming from school. Wander around for a half hour and you will meet yourself. And while you are burning up under the tropical sun, you can look a mile up in the mountains and see all kinds of a squall raging, rain pouring down from the fog clouds that almost hide the hills.

Without reference to any scientific works, I would state that the five principal islands of the Hawaiian group are simply peaks of a mountain chain, the highest peaks submerged. They are all volcanic. A folder tells me that Lanai is the oldest by about six million years, but I haven't taken the time to verify the figures. Anyhow centuries ago the smokepipes got busy, kept vomiting up the lava and millions of years after had a family group of islands, nicely inhabited, waiting for Captain Cook to come along and find them.

My reasoning is that the original Hawaiians were Chinese—the same as the original American Indians and the same as all the Pacific islanders were. How they first found root on the islands is a matter we can all guess over. Tell you more about this later on.

But Honolulu today is some town. You can't find any town like it. In it is everything you want to see, and some you don't care to see. There is the up-to-the-minute, and there is the middle age, all in a block or two—and back in the hills and valleys you will find Polynesian life; the thatched huts of the natives, ruined sanctuaries, old historic spots with history forgotten. And in Main street, Honolulu, you will see a native son with his sign up that he has opened 1914 headquarters and wants to represent the territories in Congress, Washington, D. C.

It's a land where little work is done. The natives can't work. They are swimmers, musicians, easy-going. It's a land of tomorrow. A land of abundant time.

The girls will sit along the sidewalk and offer beads, flowers, and fancy work for sale. They get enough change during the day to buy a meal of poi, and are happy and content.

But there is one subject I simply could not get any information on—the leper colony. "Yes, there is one, or WAS one, on Molokai, but it has been pretty much stamped out," and along these lines everybody will dodge.

That one word "leper" doesn't go in the Hawaiian Islands, and I found it out after vainly trying to get a little information for two days, all the way from the best hotels to the wharf rats. There is a leper colony, but the people want to forget it; they want you to, and a more unpopular subject could not be mentioned. But there is a way of getting over to this shunned bit of earth and I am going on.

SIMPSON CALLED AWAY.

Rev. A. B. Simpson, leader of the Christian Missionary Alliance, which are holding their meetings at present in the campgrounds, was called away soon after his arrival here last Friday, to Hamilton Ont., where his grandson is seriously ill. Dr. Simpson is greatly missed at the meetings. However, it is expected that he will return to-night or to-morrow in sufficient time to be on hand for next Sunday's meetings which will be the day of the offering for foreign missions.

Important Consideration.

BOSTON BEAUTY SPECIALIST TO VISIT OLD ORCHARD

The Seaside Drug Co. Looks Forward to Large Crowds During Her Week's Stay at The Rexall Store

Will Give Number of Free Facial Massages and Personal Advice in Your Home by Appointment

An opportunity which is sure to prove as beneficial as it is rare will be afforded the women of Old Orchard and vicinity when Mrs. N. Godwin, the much talked of Beauty Specialist, now touring as representative of the United Drug Company of Boston,—creators of the many Harmony Beauty Requisites and equally well-known toilet preparations, starts her public demonstrations for the week commencing Monday, Aug. 10, as the guest of Mr. A. L. Clark, proprietor of the Rexall Store and sole distributor of the Harmony Toilet Products in Old Orchard.

Mrs. Godwin contends that it is the privilege of every woman to take advantage of anything that will tend to lend a touch of added beauty to the skin; but, says Mrs. Godwin, "extreme care should be exercised to choose only such preparations that really do help nature in the beautifying of your complexion.

"Of course no one will question the assertion that the woman with the clean, well-preserved skin is a much admired person anywhere," and, she continues, "if the woman of today would only take the care to treat the skin to the benefits of a good massage that she takes in reading the household section of the paper, we would see fewer wrinkles, and more, yes, a great many more women young at fifty."

We have no doubt about Mrs. Godwin's ability to offer the women of Old Orchard some very valuable advice, and the Seaside Drug Co. will, we feel sure, have a store full of the "fairer sex" during Mrs. Godwin's stay at The Rexall Store.

Mr. Clark tells us that he has a real beauty treat in store for the women of Old Orchard, so you'd better get ready for Mrs. Godwin's arrival.—Adv.

DISCOVERED.

Billed for this week at the Pier as "exponents of modern dancing" are two local personages masquerading under "stage names." They really are Miss Grace Humphrey of Boston and Mr. Louis Dickinson Smith of Montreal. Miss Humphrey is the Mistress of Ceremonies at the Old Orchard House and Mr. Smith is summering at Ocean Park. Their dancing is very graceful and the Pier management could not have done better if they had scoured New York for exponents of the latest craze.

The Voice of Misanthropy.

"Suppose some power were to answer the poet's prayer and give us the gift of seeing ourselves as others see us!" "Well, for one thing, it would do a great deal to discourage the craze for dancing."

DOING EXCELLENT WORK.

Mr. Ed Beauchamp, who is doing life saving duty on the beach in the vicinity of the Pier, is making an enviable reputation for himself. Mr. Beauchamp has fished in from the depths at least six careless people who had gone beyond their depths and endurance. Upon one occasion last week he brought two swimmers in at one time, who had overestimated their strength against the heavy surf which was exceptional at that time.

NEW STATION AGENT.

Mr. L. S. Butler of Dover has recently begun duties as the local agent of the Boston & Maine Railroad, vice H. L. Brown who is transferred to another branch. For the remainder of the season he has taken the Eaton bungalow on Myrtle avenue which he will occupy with his family.

CAMP GROUNDS WIN.

The camp ground boys won their second straight game of the series being played with the Ocean Park nine on the latter's grounds Monday afternoon by the score of 15 to 2. Briggs was again in the box for the "Missionaries" and proved almost invincible. Errors of the home team proved costly. Collins and F. Maguire played well for the Camp Grounds, while Barton played conspicuously for the losers.

The score:

Camp Ground, 15; Ocean Park, 2.

The Camp Ground team, which is made up of a number of prep school players, has challenged the Old Orchard team to play a series but Capt. Smith believes his team far too superior to recognize these fast ball tossers.

Terrible.

The European war is on. Its aspects are even horrible to consider. It will leave the face of all Europe smeared in blood. It will take away from the world wealth over fifty million dollars in gold per day in destruction to say nothing of the human lives, and after it is over it will take the countries involved generations to again reach their present standing in the world commerce. For our Country we lose little directly so long as we are innocent bystanders and we may gain supremacy in merchant marine and also we may benefit by becoming the market for South American trade which has been so firmly established in France and Germany. But every American will regret to see the human toll which must be inevitable even for our direct benefit.

If the business man and property owner would just stop and consider all the objectionable features connected with "side walk" stands we are sure that they would make a quick disappearance. These pernicious features of our town or of any town if they are permitted slowly but surely take the attention of the prospective customer away from the inside of the store and this discourages the trade within the store. Therefore under the present method it would seem that a store front is but to protect the sidewalk stand. You take away the sidewalk stand and your merchant will immediately make plans to attract the customer into the store and thereby increase the value of the business property. There are exceptions, of course, to every rule.

By reading an article in this issue we note that in former times women were arrested for "tale bearing" at Old Orchard. What a pity the law is not enforced at the present time.

It seems as though on the cover or frontispiece of every August magazine a bathing beauty is depicted. Some are very attractive, but they all seem but poor attempts as compared with the real thing as seen on our beach.

Some people differentiate between right and wrong by what they do and what others do.

The "rocking chair fleet" has been sighted in action several times from a point twixt the Ocean House and the Goodall.

Some people are worrying about the high cost of living when they should worry about the cost of high living.

He who vaunts his virtue becomes a mark of critics who are sure to hold his faults greater than his virtues.

Oh, why did they build the ocean so close to the shore?

Use precaution—safety first.

REAL ESTATE.

Mr. John T. McGillicuddy of Lewiston has purchased through W. H. Eaton the "Spencer Villa" on Pearl Avenue.

Mr. Alexander Couper of Lewiston has purchased a house at "Kinney shores" from the Jas. Jay Smith Co., which he will use as a summer residence.

Mr. Albert Letarte of Brunswick was the recent purchaser of a lot at Surf Side upon which he intends to build at an early date.

Mr. P. T. Brennan, the Biddeford contractor, has taken a contract for the erection of a handsome new bungalow at Surf Side and has already begun work.

DROWNING RUMORS.

Every now and then some excitable person imagines that he or she hears of a drowning accident and without further attention proceeds to add to it the awful details attendant. Upon one occasion these groundless rumors had the Police Department and medical aid with the pulmotor scouring the neighborhood of Googins Rocks. And at another time the other end of the beach. These people who circulate such a report are a menace, causing uneasiness in every quarter. Some punishment should be meted out to them.

Old Orchard has the safest beach for bathing on the coast. With any care any fatalities can easily be avoided. Hotel men should post in their bath houses as well as in their rooms signs urging bathers to be precautions.

Use for Old Records.

Old talking machine records make very nice table mats for hot dishes. The mats can be made by gluing asbestos on both sides of records and covering with linen or cretonne and binding it with a brass strip with same material sewed into place.

Easily Gauged.

Johnny was sent to the cellar to draw a pitcher of cider. When he got back the guest commended him. "You must have good judgment to have filled the pitcher so accurately in the dark without running it over." "Aw, that ain't hard," replied Johnny. "Yer see, when the cider got up to the first joint of my thumb I stopped."

PASSING COMMENT.

The worst street in Old Orchard, Hillside Avenue, from Union to Sea View Avenues, at the time of writing still remains unimproved by the town authorities.

It is recently reported that the licenses of several of our summer business people have been raised. There seems no doubt in the mind of the average citizen but what the Town Fathers have made a move in the right direction. Some adverse comment is heard from those directly concerned who claim that while they pay licenses others do not. This criticism could be avoided if the parties doing business were compelled to post their licenses in a conspicuous place. Every one who has a store should be willing to pay the license fee and should realize that it is for their protection and for the benefit of the town. And when licenses are given to them they should be protected.

The offices of Tax Collector and Town Clerk should be combined. And the person holding the combined office should have a suitable office in the Town Hall and there should always be in attendance at the office from the first of July to September first a person to look after the various duties of the office in an up-to-date manner.

Stop — look — and — listen. Old Orchard is booming. In spite of a very backward season at every summer resort, Old Orchard is doing very well. The way is this. Old Orchard has the finest beach on the coast, it is easily accessible from every point in New England and Canada. The approaches of the town far surpass those of any other watering place. And then notice what is done for the convenience of the summer visitor, oiled streets, concrete sidewalks, festoons of lights up and down the thoroughfares and on the beach, good hotels, moderate prices, and every modern convenience.

Build better houses. Put cellars in them. The time is soon coming when people will want to come to the seashore in the winter to witness the grandeur of the ocean, for week end parties and for rest. Be prepared and have suitable houses built now.

Old Orchard would be greatly improved if a board walk ran the length of the beach just above high water mark. It should become as famous in a more modest way as is the board walk at Atlantic City.—Portland Express-Advertiser.

Why not?

Chief of Police Mewer is to be congratulated upon his efforts to keep bill posting from telegraph poles and to keep the sidewalks free from obstructing signs.

St. Margaret's church is greatly improved by new concrete steps and by the removal of a clump of bushes from the yard in the rear.

CAUSE OF TROUBLE,

$2,000 MEN IN $4,000 CARS.

"As a Democrat, I cannot see any use for an automobile," yelled Representative Fowler of Illinois, in the House Wednesday. He was in the midst of the annual attack by rural Congressmen on motor vehicles used by government officials, and he had an able second in Representative Quin of Mississippi, who declared:

"I am sick of seeing little officials in big automobiles. This city is full of $2,000 men in $4,000 cars."

To Editor of Express-Advertiser:

On reading the above from the Boston News Bureau, I said to myself that the Country is sick of seeing a $3,000 man in a $75,000 place. Perhaps this is what the matter is. A $3,000 schoolmaster at the head of the biggest financial and industrial corporation of the world. No wonder our mills are running half time.

Yours truly,

G.

FEATURING NEW DANCES

The management of the Old Orchard Pier is featuring exhibitions of all the modern dances every Tuesday and Thursday nights. If you are unfamiliar with all of the latest steps go out to the casino and watch a pair of terpsichorean artists supreme. You will be emulating them after a little "Watchful waiting."

The show the first part of the week was certainly a thriller. Those gowns of Mlle. LaDure were a treat for sore eyes, and besides she danced with grace unexcelled. Now for the last part of the week, the Bonnetti Brothers, who are giving all kinds of aerial exhibitions on the beach and hereabouts this week, have a number of stunts which will delight the audiences in the Casino.

The Capito brothers will entertain with music and song, and in summer, everybody likes that combination. Miller & Dean are comedy artists who are very fond of springing "something in the lighter vein," and besides they essay to try their voices on us, and we'll all be on hand to show our appreciation of their efforts. Joe Martin and his bunch of harmonists will see to it that there is music there, anyway.

The motion pictures are changed daily, and no doubt there are many in Old Orchard who do not know of the outdoor show. Just think of sitting out on the briny with the "World in Motion" before you. Everyone who has seen them proclaim "They're just great."

Why not enter the prize hesitation contest Saturday night. You are quite graceful and should be a successful competitor. See the floor director. Anyway, everybody dances daily, afternoon and evening, to the finest music and on the finest floor in the State.—Adv.

Mrs. M. F. Schultz with her two daughters, Misses Genevieve and Florence, of Montreal, are sojourning at one of the cottages in the "Kinney Shores" section.

SURF ECHOES OF OLD ORCHARD PEOPLE

There is a certain reporter in Old Orchard reporting for a Portland paper who is trying to raise a moustache and the following bit of conversation was overheard the other day between this young man and a young lady:

Reporter—"Yes, I'm trying to raise a moustache, and I'm wondering what color it will be when it comes out."

Young Lady—"Gray, I should say, at the rate it appears to be growing."

A man entered O. P. Greene's shoe store the other day and said to the clerk in charge, I want a pair of button shoes for my wife."

Said the clerk, "What kind do you wish?"

"Doesn't matter," said the gen-

To the Tourist or Visitor

We invite you to come in and see our interior store decorations—carried out entirely with Birch Bark from the giants of the Maine Forests. Odorous shrubs and fir trees from the Maine woods. Hundreds of blossoming plants, elegantly mounted heads of our native Moose, Caribou and Deer, as well as countless birds of many species are all used most artistically, presenting a picture at once restful, interesting, instructive and most pleasing.

It is indeed pleasant, too, to shop in such an environment, more especially in a store which is modern in every sense, with merchandise of absolute dependability and a scale of low prices which have made this store Portland's popular shopping place.

HOW THE SABBATH WAS OBSERVED BY THE FIRST SETTLERS OF OLD ORCHARD

A Story of the Religious Life of the First Days of Old Orchard

The early settlers of this section of the Maine coast were scattered along the Saco and Scarboro rivers, at Black Point, now Prout's Neck, at Spurwink, now Cape Elizabeth, at Casco, now Portland, and at Winter Harbor, now Biddeford Pool.

Richard Vines and all the first settlers were Episcopalians and the first form of worship here was according to the established usages of the English Church. Rev. Robert Jordan, of the English Church, minister at Spurwink (Cape Elizabeth), held the first regular service of the English Church in this settlement. He was the ancestor of the numerous families of Jordan in this vicinity. The colonies in Maine came under the government of Massachusetts, and the Puritans could not tolerate an Episcopalian, and Robert Jordan was summoned before the General Court at Boston, and was charged with the crime of baptizing children according to the rites of the English Church. The Puritans persecuted the Episcopalians so much that Mr. Jordan ceased his preaching and ministerial work, but when the government came again into the hands of the King's commissioners, the English Church was revived, and it was ordered that the "sacraments be administered according to the Church of England." So Mr. Jordan again took up his work.

For several years the Episcopal service was conducted in the Saco River settlement by a layman. In 1658 it was voted "that Robert Booth should teach the Word on the Lord's day till we have a better in place." The meetinghouse was at Winter Harbor, and in 1666 there is recorded a vote of the town meeting in regard to seating the women in the meeting," Mistress Maverick, Goody Booth, wife of Robert Booth, and Madam Phillips were to have the most distinguished positions. This was simply following a custom of the old country.

In 1661 Rev. Seth Fletcher, a Puritan clergyman, settled here, and remained for fourteen years. His salary was 50 pounds, paid in fish and farm products. Parson Fletcher was antagonistic to the Episcopalians, and there was much controversy in the settlement between the different sects. A complaint was entered in court against Robert Booth, the Episcopal teacher, "for disturbing the minister." held important offices in the settlement. Mr. Booth was a good man, who ment, and he was acquitted of this charge, which was probably caused by his opposition to the Puritan doctrine.

The stocks and the whipping-posts were in use for many years. A vote of the settlement shows that Captain Samuel Jordan "shall be paid 40 shillings for making the town stocks." If a settler was odious to his neighbors, the matter was presented in town meetings. A woman was fined for being a tale-bearer from house to house, "setting differences between neighbors," and another woman was ordered to be publicly whipped "for abusing Captain Bonython in slanderous and unreverend speeches."

Attendance of public worship was strictly enforced. "Traveling on the Sabbath" was punished by a fine of 10 shillings. A man was fined for "walking a mile on the Sabbath to ask another for his boat next week." One man was fined for "sailing out of the harbor on the Lord's day, and another for being "a common sleeper on the Lord's day at the meeting." The town of Scarboro was fined for not having a minister.

What would those early settlers say if they could see Old Orchard as it now is on the Sabbath? Verily the town would soon be rich from the fines which would come from the thousands who now seek the beach on their one day free from toil, and who find rest and strength in the life-giving air of our healthful Old Orchard.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT.

Mr. Wesley M. Kinney, son of Mrs. M. H. Kinney, by his presence of mind last Saturday barely averted what might have been a very serious accident. He was driving his Stoddard Dayton roadster up Grand avenue and was just speeding up his machine to pass another going in the same direction when without warning an express team drove out from the Atlantic house entrance completely blocking the street. Mr. Kinney was compelled to turn sharply out into the field along the railroad tracks to avoid bumping the wagon. Making the unexpected turn he headed for a telegraph post which the machine hit exactly in the center. The crank rod was driven a considerable distance into the post which was broken off a few feet from the top by the impact. The windshield was demolished and the auto was otherwise greatly shaken up.

It is with gladness that we greet the placent person with a not too humble spirit, but who is nevertheless always willing to assume proper pride and an equal or share of humanness.

THE SABBATH FOR MAN.

By REV. ALEXANDER HAMILTON.

The supreme teacher declared that "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." Attempts have been made to twist these words and use them as an argument for the secularization of the Lord's Day. It is maintained that our Lord sanctions the day by man as he pleases without consulting the will of the Lord in the matter. It is asserted that he may use the day for his own benefit or pleasure as profit or inclination shall dictate. The day must bend to the man and not man to the day. Places of amusement should be opened on the Sabbath, and excursion trains run for his convenience. Is this a correct interpretation of our Lord's statement?

The Sabbath is a divine institution. Man did not invent it. It was made for man and not by man. What other day is said to be made for man? The statement of Jesus proves that the day is sacred. Yet there are those who imagine that man may outgrow the Sabbath. They seem to think that the Sabbath was made for man just as a suit of clothes is made for him. They reason that as a youth may outgrow the clothes of his infancy, and a man the clothes of his youth, so we may outgrow the Sabbath. If men defend the Sabbath, and insist that the Creator made it for a special purpose, and that no man or set of men, have a right to use the day so as to hinder the object of God when He set it apart, we are gravely told that we are trying to force man back into their baby clothes, and to put restraints upon them they have outgrown. This reasoning is plausible. There are some things connected with the observance of the Sabbath we have outgrown. We have outgrown the ritualistic Sabbath with its cumbersome rites and burdensome ceremonies. These belong to Judaism. There are also some features of the Puritanic Sabbath we do not need, but the Sabbath itself is not an institution we can outgrow. It cannot be dispensed with in any age. It was never designed by Jehovah to be a temporary institution, to be destroyed or superseded in the development of a higher dispensation. The proper observance of the Sabbath has a vital relation to the advancement of humanity. The loss of the Sabbath would work great injury to mankind. If this citadel is surrendered "national degeneracy must inevitably follow." The statement made years ago in the Senate chamber, by Frelinghuysen, needs to be rung in the ears of this generation. He said: "I believe that the adversary of our race, could he be permitted to select the single object, would strike the blow at this divine institution. He would say: 'Resign to me this great moral lever; let my votaries drive on the pursuits of business, the schemes of enterprise and ambition without interruption; let there be no time for man to reflect, to gather in his thoughts, to renew his life, and to consider his origin and destiny, and I desire no more.'" Man outgrows the Sabbath? He may outgrow his clothes, but not his skin. Clothes are external, but the skin is a part of the body. It is "knit up," as one has said, "with the nerves and blood-vessels and vital tissues, and so woven into the fabric of our system, as well as upon it, that man would die without it." So with the Sabbath. It belongs no more to the Mosaic era than to any other. The Sabbath was made for man, not for the Jew alone. It was to continue beyond the Mosaic dispensation. The law of the Sabbath was in force in every part of the world from the beginning. Long before it was graven upon tables of stone it was written upon tables of flesh. If this is not so then it was not made for man. It is as old as creation. The Sabbath is a part of man's native constitution, and woven into the very texture of his life. The late Dr. A. J. Gordon said: "When your watch, as you take it from your pocket, if found to agree to a second with the town-clock, you are strongly assured that you have the true time of day. So when the dial of nature is found to agree with the dial of revelation, what conviction it awakens as to the truth of the Bible! If the pulse beats of the heart tick with the seconds of God's Sabbatic time, so that when God's clock strikes seven the heart says seven also, how the conviction is strengthened that God must be the author and regulator of both."

SEEN ON THE BEACH.

Bathing Costumes That Follow Fashions Approved For Ordinary Wear.

Bathing suits have lost their old time conventionality and adopted all the whims of the season—the tunic, ruffles and even the many colored striped materials.

Not to be outdone by other styles and fashions, those that govern bathing attire have taken cognizance of Roman striping and Scotch plaids.

Many of the caps show visors or trimming bands or puffed crowns of stripes or plaids. Some of the new bathing suits, too, are trimmed with girdles and waistcoats of stripes or plaids.

Bathing caps that are especially desirable have visors of rubberized silk mounted on stiff frames. These caps save much discomfort from the bright sunlight of the seashore. Some very pretty bathing caps made of rubberized silk are shirred into a rosette over each ear.

The small corsage bouquets of rubber flowers that made their appearance last year are still in evidence for the bather, and sometimes rubber flowers are used as trimming for bathing caps.

The slippers most popular for bathing are in the tango style, laced up the leg.

Combination Salads.

A delicious combination salad is the following: Shred fresh, crisp lettuce and on it arrange thin slices of beets and the whites of hard boiled eggs chopped fine. Add finely chopped gherkins and a little minced onion. Serve with mayonnaise dressing which is flavored with mustard.

Whatever sort of combination salad you make, prepare it daintily. Garnish it with slices of hard boiled eggs or minced white and yolk of hard boiled egg, olives, parsley, slices of pickles, slices of ripe tomato, nut meats or cheese balls.

Have the lettuce with which it is served always crisp and chilled. Then, no matter what sort of vegetables you utilize, the salad resulting will be worth eating.

Putting Away Dried Fruit.

Any dried fruit if put away with a little sassafras bark, about a handful to a bushel, will keep unmolested by worms. Dried fruit will have a better flavor if soaked before cooking in warm water to which a pinch of salt has been added.

Keeping Fish Fresh.

If you must keep fish for a time do not put one on top of the other. Instead wrap each fish separately in a clean cloth wrung out of cold salt water and put in a pail on ice.

FASHION'S FOIBLES.

Rose colorings are seen everywhere. The separate blouse is immensely popular.

Skirts of the newest frocks are trimmed with circular flounces, sometimes piped with plain colors.

Yolk of egg yellow is one of the smart shades.

Stockings should match the color of the frock.

Dresses for the street are most useful when made with coatee waists.

Modish white shoes are of white duck and made in colonial style.

The prettiest afternoon dresses are almost as simple as those for morning.

Collars and guimpes are so much alike this season it is hard to identify them apart.

Tango, purple and turquoise is a surprising color combination seen in silks.

American Golfers Show Class.

Foreign comment on the showing made by the American golfers entered in the recent English amateur championship is unusually fair and considerate. Although the pick of the American field was entered and did not survive the fourth round, it is generally conceded abroad that these players took their responsibilities too heavily and were doomed to defeat from the start. One English writer in reviewing the tournament stated:

"When your men can come over and play a round just as though they were out for a country walk and play not with any idea of winning, but simply to while away a summer holiday, they will probably win. You handicap them too heavily before they start. Too much publicity is bad for one's nerves."

A SUMMER EVENING.

There had been a shower early in the afternoon and all vegetation seemed freshened and thriving anew. It was near sunset and the boy scout reclined on the grass, enjoying a well earned hour of rest and looking over the field where he had driven a mowing machine through heavy grass with a courage like that of Ethan Allen, for he is a native of the Green Mountain State. Northeastward were masses of clouds, glowing in sunlight, and he said they looked like mountains. This suggested to my mind the lines of Tennyson, "The cloud may stoop from heaven and take the shape, With fold to fold, of mountain or cape;" and it was easy to fancy these forms in the drifting clouds, and again they took the shape of fleeces of wool. Evening came and I was on my way to the mail. The clouds were now drifting southeast, and such colors it would tax the skill of an artist to portray, purple, delicate shades of gray and one mass, projecting high in the upper air where it still caught the sun rays glowed in bright lake. On my way a field of corn, planted by an enterprising young farmer, who has heeded the call of "back to the land," attracted my attention. It is the old fashioned yellow corn, has been well cultivated, and will doubtless yield a good and profitable crop. Near the standpipe I passed the splendid oak, which has been so thrifty in its growth that the lower branches nearly equal in length the height of the tree from the ground. In the driest summers the sward beneath its shade is always green and moist and cool. Beyond in the distance is a "cut-down" in the forest which a lady, who admires the writings of Gene Stratton Porter, has named the "Lumberlost." From the recesses of Fern Park I heard some woodland bird singing his even song. Beautiful that evening seemed the willows that so gracefully fringe the Old Orchard House field, and beyond was the white surf, breaking gently on the beach while the blue ocean was dimly seen in the deepening twilight. The vast crowd at mail time gave cheering evidence of the prosperity of our town, but, while I am kindly disposed toward my fellow men I forbore to linger long. Nearing home I saw bright Venus in the west and great Jupiter with its golden radiance in the southeast. Through the centuries of human history upon what scenes have the stars looked down! On armed camps and watchmen on the walls of cities, on the shepherds of Bethlehem and on the Nile, on desert caravans and the beauties of Venice, on the England of Shakespeare and the ships that bore daring men across the sea to the New World!

And now it is to be feared they are soon to look down on the fields of Europe drenched in blood, on a struggle that may change the map and that is fraught with momentous consequences to all the world.

Well is it for us that the Atlantic rolls between us and the complications of the Old World; while the strife rages there may we live in the enjoyment of the blessings of peace.

J. A. G.

DEALING IN FUTURES.

Mr. Acker—That's right; calculating how much you have spent on your spring outfit, are you?

Mrs. Acker (calmly)—I am making up my appropriation for summer dresses and hats.

An Innocent Victim.

"This food problem is something awful!" exclaimed the querulous man.

"Still harping on the high cost of living?"

"No. My wife has decided to reduce her weight. I wouldn't care what food cost if she would only consent to buy it."

Hopeless.

"Is there any public man who really meets with your full approval?" asked the weary listener.

"No," replied Mr. Growcher; "years ago I gave up trying to decide which man I liked most. I went ahead and voted for the one who displeased me least."

Sam's Idea.

"Sam!"

"Yes, boss."

"I read in the paper today that an electric burglar alarm has been adapted for the chicken coop. What do you think of that?"

"Why, I sees in dat, boss, a blow at de liberties of de people!"

Disgusted.

John—I see that a New York policeman is charged with mendacity.

Jim—That's the way with those high-brow officials. Always trumping up something new and far-fetched. Why don't they get after the liars an' grafters?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Comes Handy.

Redd—They say he was quite a hurdle-racer in his college days.

Greene—But what good does that do him now?

"A lot of good. Why, he says they're nearly always housecleaning at his home."

Safe Place.

Patience—This paper says that, according to scientists, not a single microbe exists in mountain air above the height of 2,000 feet.

Patrice—Good! Now I'll look up some mountain summer resort where a girl can kiss without any danger.

Knowing How to Stand Correctly.

In the correct standing position the chest is held high and thrown out strongly, the abdomen drawn in, the chin in toward the chest, with the body held erect and leaning slightly forward, says a writer in the Woman's Home Companion. The weight of the body is equally distributed upon both feet, either with one foot in advance of the other, as in the military "at rest," or with heels together, as in figure. In the military carriage the body is bent farther forward than in the ordinary walking posture. The cadet gets his erect posture not so much by the physical exercise he takes as by constantly being reminded by his officers that he must hold his body erect.

There are three ways to tell whether you are carrying yourself properly. Stand with the back to a wall which has a smooth surface with the head, shoulders, hips and heels touching the wall. Try to maintain this position at all times. Another way is to lie on the back, note the posture of the head, shoulders, chest and hips, arise and assume the same posture. Still another is to practice balancing a moderately heavy book on the head. Place a soft cushion on the head and the book on top, as this gives the book more surface upon which to rest and is more easily balanced.

Keeping the chest high and the body erect is an excellent exercise and should be cultivated.

The Vinegar Bath.

For the tourist or vacationist who has no bathroom privileges a huge bowl, or, better still, an old fashioned foot bathtub, is essential. With the aid of either of these she can sponge in cool water in the morning and in warm at night.

If her skin is sluggish and she has a generally rundown feeling in hot weather let her try the vinegar bath. For this allow a pint of pure cider or wine vinegar to two gallons of water, which is about what is needed for the average sponge bath. Put this into the basin and stand in the tub. Use a large sponge and saturate it with the water and vinegar. This should be pressed over the spine.

Repeat this several times and then proceed the same way, pressing the sponge to the base of the brain and on the shoulders until the body has been literally showered with vinegar and water.

The body is then patted, not rubbed, dry, and the patient should lie down at once and rest. Two vinegar baths a week are sufficient.

Summer Care of the Eyes.

It behooves the summer girl to rest her eyes as well as her body. She should make a point of sleeping so that the light shines over her head. It pays to invest in a dark green shade through which the light cannot penetrate and force the eyes into harness before she is ready to get up.

Many women have an idea that it helps the eyes to open them the first thing in the morning into an eye cup filled with some mild antiseptic. The best oculists disapprove of this. It washes out the natural secretions of the orb, and if a stimulant is needed for the lids it is much better to insert it with a glass dropper.

One of the most sensible fashions of summer is the fancy for lining hats and parasols with green. This throws a wonderfully restful light on the eyes and relieves them from the merciless glare of midsummer sun. Both pongee and white parasols can be had that show the lining or an edging of green.

Fighting Dust.

The first of summer evils for the skin is dust. In the hot, dry weather dust is blowing about everywhere and soon settles into the pores of the skin. If we allow it to remain there it can well be imagined what havoc it will work.

In the summer we should massage the skin frequently with good skin food. There is nothing so effective for thoroughly cleansing the pores. Do the massage at bedtime, rubbing and tapping the cream into the skin of the face and neck, then bathe face and neck in some tepid water to which about from eight to ten drops of tincture of benzoin have been added. This prevents the skin getting flabby.

Air In Sleeping Car.

No matter how carefully screened the windows of a sleeping car may be, dust and dirt will sift through the netting. So when you travel in a train at night you are forced to breathe in some unwelcome particles of soot and soil.

To keep out these particles carry a roll of cheesecloth or gauze with you and at night wet a square of it and tack it with thumb tacks or pins over the window screen. In the morning this square will be covered with soot and dust and your lungs will be free of just that much less. So will your clothes, which is another important consideration.

For Dull Eyes.

When the eyes are tired and dull, as after motoring, use either an eye lotion bath or one made of water to which a little boracic powder or witch hazel has been added. Keep the eyes open in the water. This both strengthens and brightens them.

THE SEASHORE WARDROBE.

For the Little Folks It Should Be Dainty and Appropriate.

Children at the seaside resorts must be provided with an entirely different kind of a wardrobe from that needed for the country. One that ascends at a bound from the bathing suit or sand frock to the glories of an elaborate creation is required. For the former the little ones wear their rompers or jumper suits, overalls or bathing suits, both in the water and on the sands, the rompers being made of strong wash material and the bathing suits of flannel, serge or mohair.

Evening finds them dressed in the daintiest of frocks, slippers, stockings and ribbons, though even here economy may be practiced without detection. Instead of purchasing a great number of frocks it will be better to get a few and have numerous little accessories, such as dainty aprons, correct footwear, ribbons and bows, all of which help so much toward making a child's outfit attractive.

Shoes, whether high or low, should be substantial for day wear, slippers to be donned in the evening only. Sunbonnets of white lawn or dimity in delicate shades are dainty and picturesque and more practical than hats.

How to Make Pillows.

When making pillows put the feathers into a cheesecloth case and then slip this into the regular case of ticking. When the pillow is soiled the ticking can be taken off and washed and the feathers washed, sunned and dried without emptying them from the cheesecloth. The latter should be made much larger than the ticking to allow for the spreading of the feathers.

FOR THE CHILDREN

A Vegetable Freak.

A wonderful growth discovered some time ago in the sandy dry plains of Mexico seems, after all, not to be such a wonder as it was at first believed to be. A species of cactus, the fouquier, growing in the shape of a tapered column, is rather commonly found thirty feet or more in height. One specimen, however, was found bent into a huge arch, both ends of which entered the soil at a distance of six yards from each other. In the center of the arch a shoot grew out, which is now more than ten feet long. How did this oddity grow thus? The question was answered in a very simple way the other day. An old herder related that when he was young he and other cowboys lassoed for fun the highest of the tall cactuses they found, and, pulling it down, they buried the top of the column in the sand. This end grew roots, and a few years after the superabundance of vitality of this cactus forced for itself a way out in the new shoot, although this species never grows branches ordinarily. Now the plant looks like a gigantic spur.

Why We Say "Hello."

Long, long ago wolves were numerous in all parts of the world, especially in England. Wolf hunting was a favorite sport with the gentry, and to kill wolves was regarded as the sacred duty of all Englishmen. In fact, an old law reads, "All barons must hunt and chase a wolf four times a year."

French was the language of the court at that time, so the burly old English hunters used the cry of the French wolf hunters, which was "Au loup! Au loup!" (to the wolf). These words heard at a distance sounded like "A loo," but the English, who always put an H on wherever they possibly can, put it on the words "A loo" and when wolf hunting shouted "Ha-loo." This form we use when he call "hello," as no word has been found that carries so far or so well as hello. For this reason it is the accepted form of the telephone companies the world over.

Johnny and His Sister.

Johnny—They say you live in some other form after you leave this world. I wonder what I'll be?

Sister—I guess a goat, because you're always butting in.

Johnny—Do you know why a man's hand can't be over eleven inches?

Sister—No. Do you?

Johnny—Sure! Because if it were twelve inches it would be a foot.

Johnny—Next time there's a comet in the sky be careful not to talk of me to your girl friends.

Sister—Why not?

Johnny—Because comets carry tails.

Human Hair Tells Race.

By the use of microscopes in connection with human hair scientists are able to tell to what great racial division the owner belonged. If a cross section of the hair is elliptical the man was black; if round, the man was red or yellow. The white man's hair is oval.

The Australian native has the finest hair, the bushmen of Africa next, then the American Indian, the Chinese, the white races of Europe and the Japanese coarsest of all.

The strength of human hair is in proportion to its thickness.

Conundrums.

Why is an absconding bank cashier like an air gun? Because he goes off loaded and makes no report.

What is that which you cannot hold ten minutes, although it is light as a feather? Your breath.

When is the worst weather for rats and mice? When it rains cats and dogs.

Why is I the luckiest of the vowels? Because it is the center of bliss.

Why does an onion resemble a ringing bell? Because peel follows peel in an onion and peal follows peal in a ringing bell.

A Queer Animal.

There is a queer animal in Central and South America which is so disguised that when hanging from the branch of a tree it looks for all the world like a part of the tree. It is called the sloth. Its feet are curved and armed with long, powerful, hook-like claws with which it hangs to the branches of trees, generally back downward. It has a green growth upon its back which makes it closely resemble the foliage of the trees. It feeds upon the leaves and fruits and seldom comes down to the ground.

About Doorknobs.

Doorknobs are found on the doors in every home. You all use them daily, yet if you were asked to tell what these doorknobs were put there for you'd all be guilty of the same omission as a little girl who answered, "Why, doorknobs are made to open doors with, of course!"

This is true as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far enough. Doorknobs are also made to shut doors with and thus avoid slamming the door and soiling the paint.

The Starfish Pool.

We know a pool at dead low tide Where strange sea visitors may hide, Shrimps, mussels, barnacles and snails And horseshoe crabs with jointed tails. One day we found some little stars That once had dived near shining Mars— At least we think that must be so, For "starfish" is their name, you know. Perhaps they fell down one dark night And in the wet sea lost their light. —Youth's Companion.

Gay Waistcoats.

Roman striped and plaided waistcoats are exceedingly smart with tailors of dark serge or mohair, but with a suit of lighter colored fabric the flowered silk waistcoat is prettiest. Pussy willow taffeta in moire effect makes a charming waistcoat for a golden brown talleur. Another suit with a short cut-away Eton jacket has a waistcoat of Egyptian crape in post-impressionist design.

Jet Buttons.

Small jet buttons are much used on vests and neckwear. Large crocheted buttons in round and square designs of one or two colors are used on coats of heavy corded cottons and on linen and ratine dresses and suits. There are many fancy stitches introduced in these buttons.

WASHING LACES.

To launder a linen, cluny or any other lace centerpiece successfully wash carefully, boil, rinse and blue, but do not starch.

Spread a sheet on rug, lay the centerpiece right side down and begin to pin, being sure to stretch while pinning and catch every scallop.

When finished there should not be a wrinkle in it.

THE PASSING OF A DESPERADO

Border Justice Meted Out by a Relentless Pursuer.

A countryman stood in the door of a tavern in the far west looking out on a pair of horses hitched to a wagon standing in the road. Turning to several loungers about the bar, he asked:

"Any gent goin' to Centerville?"

"You goin' to Centerville?" asked one of the loungers.

"Yes."

"I'm a-goin' that way. Reckon I'll go with you."

"Much obleeged to you for comin' along," remarked the farmer as he drove off. "There's been a turrible lot o' holdups round here lately. I don't like goin' alone very much."

"Why don't the committee stop it?" asked the passenger.

ened the strap, the horse's neck meanwhile being between him and the countryman. When he had finished and looked up at the farmer a great change had come. The "hayseed" held a revolver in each hand, and each revolver was pointed directly at Flint's head.

"Hands up!"

The astonished Flint did not comply with alacrity, whereupon the farmer repeated the order with a finger pressed close on each trigger. Flint raised his hands. He looked puzzled.

"Who are you?" he asked the farmer, "a sheriff?"

"No."

"One of the committee?"

"No."

"Then who are you?"

"Tom Tucker, Bill Tucker's brother."

A tinge of white spread itself over Flint's face.

"I was there when Bill was brought in," continued Tucker, "and saw my own brother, who I'd gone around with when we were little shavers with our arms around each other's necks, laid low by the man who wanted his wife, and I saw the little girl crazed by it. If I could 'a' found you then, Tom Flint, you'd 'a' got the better of me, for I was reckless. Lucky I didn't."

I went to work

Again Flint winced, but said nothing. "Was they goin' to be married soon?" asked the farmer.

"Married! They was married."

The words were spoken with a good deal of feeling, and the countryman pressed the subject no further. Something was wrong with the hames on the near horse. They were slipping back off the collar. The farmer drew rely. "Reckon I'll git down and tighten the hames," he said. "Will you hold the lines, Mr. Flint?"

Instead of holding the lines Flint jumped down off the seat and went forward to fix the hames. He tight-

WHAT LIFE IS LIKE IN OLD HONOLULU

WHEN THE SHIPS COME IN THEN THINGS ARE DOING

"ISLES OF TRANQUIL DELIGHT"

Sometimes Islands of Riot and Killings yet Great is Hawaii

(M. J. Brown, Courier, Oregon City.)

It was an interesting and entertaining sight when a shipload of militia boys came in to Honolulu, went in bunches up and down the streets, from one saloon to another, and simply ran things. I don't believe these conditions would be tolerated in any city or earth except these most remote inhabited islands on the globe.

They would go from one saloon to another, in bunches from twenty-five to fifty, and simply turn things over. Big, husky fellows, but drunken, noisy and vile. It is stated that such is the climatic influence that stimulants, particularly whiskey, makes one who drinks too much, run amuck and do crazy stunts. That may or may not be true, but these sailors got the drunkest, the noisiest and the quickest of any bunch of men I ever saw.

A bunch of them went into one of the finest saloons of the city and made every man in it sit down.

"Sit down; you're rocking the boat," was the order, and the inmates either sat down or got out. They evidently knew what a bunch of man of war sailors were.

These fellows have only a short shore leave and they make the most of it. They see how quick they can get drunk and what crazy stunts they can do.

A group of the regular militia gathered around a fellow who was trying to climb a steel electric lighting pole. He couldn't have gone up it if sober, but he could try, and when he would fail and slide down, his companions would howl in mirth, and the vulgar language was unfit for even Chinese ears.

The sailors were on a tear of rebellion, I learned. They were with the Milwaukee, the boat that took the Oregon and Washington naval militia on a cruise. They were out from Bremerton, Wash., and the ship had been out of commission for years. Through some loose cog in the commissary department it was ill fitted and poorly provisioned.

These regulars each take on a naval militiaman to teach him the game and there are as many of the regulars as the landsmen. They don't like the job any too well, for as one of them told me "we have to do all the work. As soon as the 'lubbers' get tired, then we have to do their work and they are a bunch of pets, anyhow."

Then the chuck ran short and the regulars mutinied. They were going from one to another urging "don't go back to the ship," and I heard that the officials had a merry time of it rounding them up at leaving time.

Yet the police, native Hawaiians, are always busy somewhere else when the sailors come in. The liquor and gambling interests run the city and native policemen are easier to handle than white officials. Yet I noted the two morning newspapers are day after day protesting against these conditions.

In the evening these sailors go to the park (they call it a park) and there mixed up with soldiers, they pack over from nearby saloons great quantities of beer in quart bottles and lie on the grass and drink. They have wrestling matches, fights and all sorts of sailor and soldier sports, and no cop ever molests.

A ball game was on between two Hawaiian teams one night and the sailors had no end of fun trying to break it up. The field was small, and very often the ball would come out where they were, when they would promptly get it and throw it in the river. But here the soldiers interfered, or there would probably have been a riot.

Little Chinese girls will hang around these drinking crowds to cop the empty beer bottles, the "dead soldiers," which they sell. A soldier or sailor will occasionally catch one, take out his knife and threaten to cut her pig tail off, then there will go up Chinese shrieks on the night air and from all over the park Chinamen, men and women, will come in droves. Then the girl is let go.

The soldiers are not as bad as the sailors, for the restraint is more. It means guard house and loss of

TROLLEY JUMPS TRACK.

Last Sunday evening an electric car on the Saco line jumped the track at the curve, corner of the Saco road and Union avenue, and struck a York County Power Company pole, putting Old Orchard in complete darkness by the breaking of wires.

The car was of the single truck, closed type, and was manned by J. L. Smith and H. C. Clark. Fortunately there were only three passengers, two women and one man. The women escaped with only a general shaking up, while the man was fortunate in escaping with slight injuries from falling glass. He was taken to Dr. Randall's house where he was treated and later removed to the Trull Hospital.

THREE CANDIDATES IN THE FIELD.

Old Orchard has three of its citizens contesting for the legislative seat to represent Old Orchard and Kennebunkport at the coming election in September.

The Republican nominee is P. N. H. Lombard, who is one of our "legal lights" as well as a member of our Board of Selectmen and our local Trial Justice.

The Progressive nominee is Mr. Geo. H. Hinchliffe, our tax collector, and who carries on the Penutine business with Mr. King Sears.

The Democrats have placed in the field Mr. F. H. Libby, proprietor of the Hotel Everette, and who formerly carried on the grocery business under his name.

Every indication points to an interesting election contest, each one of the candidates having many friends and supporters.

OVER FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Fifty-two thousand and one hundred dollars is the approximate amount of money pledged last Sunday at the local Camp Grounds for the support of Foreign Missions under the Christian Missionary Alliance.

Of the twenty-nine years that the Missionary Alliance has held conventions at the local grounds, last Sunday was perhaps the most inclement because of very unpromising weather. A crowd estimated at over four thousand, however, were on hand to hear

Rev. A. B. Simpson in his appeal for the support of this work. His manner was earnest and he quoted from many famous people who had spoken in favor of the foreign missions, among whom were Gladstone and Darwin.

The contributions at the morning service amounted to about forty-one thousand dollars and the balance was contributed in the afternoon. The total amount exceeds by about five thousand dollars the amount subscribed last year.

DESERVES MUCH CREDIT.

Mr. Joseph Duncan of the Everingham at Googins Rocks, deserves much credit for his work in rescuing the several people who have got beyond their depths in the water and became exhausted. Last Thursday a very exciting time enlivened the scene in the locality of Googins Rocks when two people were seen in difficulty in the water. A party immediately started in a boat to the rescue but upon arriving at the scene were thrown into the water themselves. Six persons at one time were in peril of drowning. But at this point another boat was taken to the scene and by good management by Mr. Duncan, they were brought safely to shore.

LOCAL PROGRESSIVES PUT CANDIDATE IN FIELD.

Last Thursday the local Progressives held a caucus for the purpose of choosing a candidate to represent Old Orchard and Kennebunkport in the legislature. Kennebunkport and Old Orchard comprise the legislative district and by custom the representatives are chosen from one place one year and from the other the following election. The coming election an Old Orchard man is to be chosen.

At the Progressives' caucus three candidates appeared, Eugene Bowditch, W. J. C. Milliken and George H. Hinchliffe. Mr. Hinchliffe received the largest number of ballots and thus becomes the nominee of the Progressive party.

Mr. Hinchliffe is at present the collector of taxes for Old Orchard and is a partner of Mr. King Sears in the Penutine Candy Co.

THE FIRST INDIAN WAR IN THIS VICINITY, OR THE BURNING OF SACO SETTLEMENT.

The early settlers in this region for nearly fifty years lived in peace with the Indian tribes of the Saco River. They traded manufactured goods for furs, but there was a heavy penalty for selling arms or ammunition to an Indian. However, the Indians, having learned the use of the musket, often journeyed through the forests to Mount Royal (now Montreal), and exchanged furs with the French for guns and ammunition.

The English settlers erected strong blockhouses only as a precaution as they were at peace with the Indians. But it was well that they did, as when the Indian war broke out, it was sudden and furious. An incident which occurred on the Saco River infuriated the Indians and started the first attack. In the summer of 1675 an English vessel was anchored in the river. The sailors, seeing an Indian woman with her child in a canoe crossing the river, upset the canoe to see if the Indian child could swim by instinct. The child sank, and the terrified mother finally rescued him, and brought him ashore, but he died soon after. This woman was the wife and the child was the oldest son of Squando, a noted chief of the Sakoki tribe. Squando and his tribe determined to be revenged for the act of the sailors, so they joined with the Indians under Phillip of Mount Hope in attacking all the white settlers on the coast. The settlement at Saco Falls was the first place to be attacked.

Captain John Bonython received a hint from an Indian whom he had once befriended, that there was danger of an attack. He spread the alarm and the settlers fled to the block house of Major Phillips on the west side of the river. They were scarcely inside the garrison when the Indians began to set fire to the houses and the mills, and then attacked the garrison. This siege lasted eighteen hours, and was the first battle with the Indians on the Saco River. The Indians finally withdrew, and in a few days the settlers left the garrison and went to the settlement at Winter Harbor (now Biddeford Pool). The Indians later burned the garrison and thus every building of the Saco settlement was destroyed. Many settlers between the Falls and the Pool, and many all along the coast were slain, and their homes burned.

Two days after the burning of Saco, two brothers, Andrew and Arthur Auger, were killed in ambush at Black Point. These brothers came from Dunster Parish, in England, in 1650, and purchased from the Indians a thousand acres of land in what is now Scarborough. John, a son of Andrew, inherited the whole estate. His daughter Elizabeth married John Milliken of Boston, who, in 1727, purchased the interest of the other four daughters of John Auger, and settled on the estate with his family. The numerous families of Millikens in the vicinity descended from this John.

The name Dunstan comes from Dunster, the name of the parish in England from which the Augers came.

The scattered settlers along the coast from New Hampshire to the Kennebec were attacked by Indians and many were killed. Here at Old Orchard, near Goose Fare Brook, Thomas Rogers' house was destroyed, and nine young men, including his son, were ambushed and killed. It was a time of terror. Men carried their muskets as they worked, and at public worship, armed men sat at the end of the seats to protect the women. This first Indian War lasted for three years, but it was followed by almost universal peace for about ten years, during which time the settlements were restored, and took on new life.

CARNIVAL WEEK OVER.

The week of August third a number of local people endeavored to make more entertaining than any other during the summer and for that purpose they secured the services of the balloonists and aerial gymnasts and also planned to hold amateur events. The events of Thursday were carried out as planned and proved interesting to the contestants if not to a very large crowd. And no doubt the balloon ascensions and the "Slide for Life" gave a number of vacationists, especially the "kids," something to talk about. Saturday it was scheduled to hold the big running races and the "bag race," as well as the "three-legged race" and the swimming events, but the weather man was not on our side and the result was that these could not be carried out. However, those who had a hand in the making of the "Carnival" hope that it helped to amuse and to advertise Old Orchard as the best summer resort on the Atlantic coast.

MUSIC, MIRTH AND DANCE ON PIER THIS WEEK.

Well, we people here are uttering our "Ish Ka Bibbles" about things across the sea, and we are having great times every afternoon and evening out on the pier, yes and mornings too, for the fish are biting well these days. Anglers get out your tackle and give it a try.

The vaudeville show, the outdoor movies and the dancing combined has the public flocking to the casino. The first three days furnished an excellent program, and commencing today, "Poole," a comedy magician, will spread smiles over your faces. He's a wonder. Keep your coat buttoned though, for he has a great habit of making your friendship, then extracting a guinea pig from your inside pocket. We need not fear war here for he can vanish any of the enemy that may appear.

Cogan and Gilman are chock full of eccentricities which will delight, and Churchill and Alden are introducing something novel in song.

The dancing exhibitions by two well-known artists have proven popular innovations on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and the hesitation contests on Saturday nights are developing keen rivalry among the terpsichorean artists. Every Wednesday the amateurs lend excitement.

The motion pictures are changed daily, and if you don't care to dance you can enjoy the pictures shown outdoors on the end of the pier. The casino floor is in excellent condition, and the music is the best in the state. All aboard for the pier. Everybody's doing it.—Adv.

SURF ECHOES AND THE OLD ORCHARD MIRROR

Entered as second-class matter at Post Office, Old Orchard, Me., July 15, 1914, according to Act of Congress, Aug. 24, 1912.

Price—Single copies five cents, by mail, fifty cents the season.

Day of publication Thursday.

Surf Echoes established 1913; Old Orchard Mirror established 1900.

SURF ECHOES and the OLD ORCHARD MIRROR is on sale at all news-stands.

Published weekly at Old Orchard, Maine. The office is located over the Old Orchard Post-Office, telephone 14-12.

It is the aim of the paper to chronicle the social gossip, interesting events and general news of Old Orchard, Grand Beach, Pine Point, Ocean Park, Ferry Beach and Biddeford Pool.

Correspondence is desired, but the signature of the sender is requested merely as a matter of form to insure its reliability. The names of correspondents, however, will be treated in confidence unless otherwise desired.

PERCY R. RICH, Editor.
F. A. ELLIOTT,
Business Manager.

From time to time it is forcibly brought home to the people interested in Old Orchard the lack of things that are done for the protection of bathers. Had it not been for the presence of mind of several of those on the beach upon several occasions, obituary notices might have been sent away of drowning accidents here. The beach seems by far the greatest attraction of Old Orchard. Its bathing is unsurpassed. The town should make some effort to have life guards patrol its length from July first to September first.

The Pointed Paragrapher of the Boston Transcript says "If we are going to have any summer it must soon begin to sum." Undoubtedly the summer season of nineteen fourteen will go down in the memory of the Resort business man as the most inclement in a decade.

But "We must have weather whether or no."

If you are interested in Old Orchard, and you have an idea about how Old Orchard can be improved, you would do us a great favor if you would embody that idea in a letter and mail it to Surf Echoes and the Old Orchard Mirror.

Those who are interested in this paper are anxious to give wide publicity to any suggestion which will be of ultimate advantage to Old Orchard.

Editor Surf Echoes and the Old Orchard Mirror,

Dear Sir:

I would like to call the attention of the readers of your paper to a few things in connection with Old Orchard, which, I believe, if changed, would lead to the improvement of the beach.

The first of these is the fact that the railroad company continually stop trains of only three and four cars, so as to block the crossing on Old Orchard street and discommode hundreds of people daily. These short trains could be stopped fifty feet below the crossing and neither the railroad company nor the public would then be inconvenienced. The long through trains some times block both Staples and Old Orchard streets for a good length of time, and this is a matter which the fire department should protest against, as they would be unable in case of fire to get through with their apparatus without considerable delay.

Another matter deserving attention is that of the street car company in unloading their baggage right on the Main street, and blocking the majority of the street in the most important time with their wagons backed up to the cars. The trolley company should be compelled to run a siding down one of the smaller streets, and into a lot there, and where the unloading could be done without inconveniencing the public.

The matter of cleaning the beach is also of great importance, and one that ought to be looked after. At the present time I believe there is but one man to look after the entire beach and adjacent streets. It is the only play ground that the people have, and the seaweed, papers and rubbish to be found there any day are a disgrace.

I am not making these suggestions in the spirit of a knocker, but in the hope that they will be for the good of Old Orchard.

Yours very truly,
JAS. JAY SMITH CO.,
Jay B. Smith.

THE TOWN KNOCKER

Help Develop Your Own Community and Put Croakers Out of Business.

When a man is dead his sons and daughters mourn, but when a town is dead most of the sons and daughters seem to glory in the fact. At least that is the impression that the visitor gets. The town sage is usually on the railway platform loaded to the muzzle with the glad tidings that the town is dead no business is being done, nobody ever buys anything, the population has shrunk, the hotel isn't fit for human beings, the station bus isn't so good as it used to be and it's rotten weather.

Every man who has traveled a week "on the road" has run into that town sage. He is the duly recognized, though not officially appointed, town "kill-joy." He is the most expensive town officer, though he doesn't draw any salary. It would be better if he did and was sent on a mission to the Sandwich islands. He meets the grocery salesman with the remark that the village store-keeper could sell twice as many goods if he knew his business. He meets the book agent with the observation that the town don't need books, it needs an undertaker. He greets the organizer for a secret order with the cheerful tidings that there's too many orders in that town already and that nobody will join another. And when it comes to getting him to contribute one dollar to an effort to correct all the troubles he talks about, it is as hopeless as he is, himself. Usually he hasn't the dollar and cannot get it. If he would let it go at that, little harm would be done. But he don't; he not only doesn't contribute himself, but he seems to take an evil delight in keeping others from doing so.

The Develop Maine Movement is meeting this class of gentlemen constantly. It is to overcome their croakings that the movement was organized. The movement will endeavor to inspire confidence, encourage investment, help development, bring in new capital, interest possible settlers and advertise the state's summer and winter attractions. If you want to help with this movement you should become a member of it, by sending the membership fee of $1 to W. E. Lawry, Treasurer, Box 374, Augusta, Me. He will send you a certificate of membership by return mail.

Home.

This is the true nature of home—it is the place of peace; the shelter not only from all injury, but from all terror, doubt and division.—Ruskin.

We invite you to come in and see our interior store decorations—carried out entirely with Birch Bark from the giants of the Maine Forests. Odorous shrubs and fir trees from the Maine woods. Hundreds of blossoming plants, elegantly mounted heads of our native Moose, Caribou and Deer, as well as countless birds of many species are all used most artistically, presenting a picture at once restful, interesting, instructive and most pleasing.

It is indeed pleasant, too, to shop in such an environment, more especially in a store which is modern in every sense, with merchandise of absolute dependability and a scale of low prices which have made this store Portland's popular shopping place.

What Life is Like in Old Honolulu

pay to them if they get too bad, yet they are a bad lot.

They tell me there are about 8,000 on the Island of Oahu, and about 90 per cent. of them are soldiers because they had been failures at something else.

I talked with one of the men and he said that nearly every private was there for some bad cause, getting into trouble, drink, failure, that they were the down-and-outs, young fellows who enlisted as a last resort.

On a Sunday morning I witnessed a nasty shooting scrap that came nearly ending in a riot.

A Hawaiian policeman was told that a white soldier was packing a gun and had tried a hold-up. The cop went to the soldier and ordered his hands up. I was across the street, heard the loud talk, and saw the soldier resist arrest. The Hawaiian pulled his gun and the soldier ran. He was brought down with two shots, both in the head. In five minutes there were twenty or more soldiers after the cop yelling "kill him; cut him; kick his head in." With his big gun he held them off, backed down the street into a Chinese joint and held the place until the reserves came. If the soldiers had had guns the native would not have lived long, but they are not permitted to go armed.

In twenty minutes there was a search for witnesses. A plain clothes man, with a note book in hand, as if he was a reporter, asked me if I saw the shooting, and when I asked "What shooting?" he passed me up.

There has been an ill feeling between the natives and soldiers since annexation time. The natives refer to them as "haloes" (snakes), and look at them about as the Mexican does the "gringo." There is the feeling that it was the soldiers who brought about the uprising that lost to them their islands. While they are outwardly courteous to them, they hate them, and many a poor regular has been caught out alone and badly beaten up.

The Hawaiians are a splendid physical race, handsome, easy-living and happy. Their color is more like the Indian than the Negro, but in features they much resemble the southern negro of the States, only that the hair is black and straight, not crimp. Nearly all the younger generation speak English, but with a brogue that is almost like the Alabama coon.

Wandering along the wharf on a Sunday afternoon I found a bunch of Hawaiian girls in swimming and it was interesting to watch them. They were almost naked, but paid not the least attention to we few spectators. And such diving and swimming. They would climb up onto the pier, make a run, shoot high in the air and then dive as gracefully as fish hawks. And the speed with which they can swim seems to be a Hawaiian secret, the propelling being done largely with the feet.

But in another letter I will take up Hawaiian life, as it is lived outside of Honolulu and try to give you an interesting insight of the life of a most interesting people.

Honolulu's climate is world famous, but I am inclined to think that, like Southern California, it has been somewhat overdone. Yet when considered that these islands are in the torrid zone, the climate is indeed rare.

They say it is ever cool on the islands and the temperature never goes above 90. The last statement has to be taken on trust, for certainly a thermometer couldn't be found on the islands, and as for it always being cool, it is if you find the cool place.

There is always a breeze, a cool, invigorating breeze, blowing in from the mountains, and not a day passes that you can't look up on those barren lava hills and see a local hail storm busy at it, while from two to five miles away the tropical sun beats down on you like a furnace from a cloudless sky. These local hail and rain storms continually form in the mountains; a dozen or more times a day, and they serve as fans for the city. And were it not for these I don't know how one could live there.

But one can't always find the mountain breezes. He may be on a street that shuts them off. They don't come into the restaurants, the stores and sleeping rooms. You have to go to them.

I have walked a block or two on some shut-in street, where there was not a breath of air and the sun came down in its awful straight heat, until it would seem I could not stand it, and then at the next block the mountain breeze met me, and in a minute I was cool and comfortable.

It's my judgment that the Sandwich Islands have the world stopped for a winter resort, but I believe they can be beaten in July or August, and before their name "Pacific Paradise" would be taken literally there would have to be a lot more of the English language spoken.

I expect the advertising managers of the promotion office would hang me in effigy if they knew this was being written, but I always write what the other fellows do not, and I want to say they grow the biggest cockroaches on earth here, and the most of them. In the hotels, and restaurants you will see them and out on the street—some so big a bird has a tough fight to kill one.

Eating a steak in a Jap restaurant (the only variety they have) I looked over at the lunch counter and saw about a thousand, baby size, running in and out of the cracks on the side. You can guess where my appetite went. And turning on the light in my room in the middle of the night about a dozen of the big brown fellows were dancing the halo on my dresser. And another point the hotels neglect to advertise, that the beds are mosquito screened.

Altho foreigners are in big majority in the islands, very few can vote, and the native Kanakas have the majority voting power. There is a strong fight for prohibition being waged by the missionaries and the better class Hawaiians, and the liquor interests are becoming alarmed. The natives take to liquor as readily as our negroes, and intemperance is becoming a menace. And in the saloons you will see these signs:

"There is no hell, but there will be if Honolulu goes dry."

I saw two drunken Kanakas in a street fight one day, rolling over on the pavement and pounding each other. A native policeman across the street looked on and laughed.

A man and woman drove up in a buggy and stopped near the fighters, while the man went into a plumbing office. The horse became frightened at the men rolling over in the street, when the policeman ran across and held the horse until the scrap was finished.

Such is Honolulu.

But it's a beautiful country, in its fertile spots and one can well overlook the drawbacks. Everywhere there is tropical vegetation, and such a profusion. Great palm trees are everywhere and they say almost every tropical plant and shrub grows there. And at night, when one stretches out on the grass; hears the most wonderful of all bands playing the most wonderful of all music; sees people from half the nations of the world in like enjoyment—well that Hawaiian rest sort of gets into your nerves and makes you a booster like the rest.

And just as I was trying to get poetical a Hawaiian flower girl came along. I was sitting in the park. I bought a bunch of flowers and she handed me this card. Perhaps she guessed I needed something to fill out on. Here it is:

Hawaii is harmony. Each day is a revelation. The land is limpid poetry in climate and in endowments of a singularly fortunate location. It is perfect in its soft tone—dreamily natural in all its settings. It has the ultimate in colors—in flowers, in blooming trees, in strangely blending verdure, in "painted" fish from the mysterious depths of the kindly Pacific—Queen of the Seven Seas. With its cliffs and volcano, with its extinct craters graphically exhibiting the world in the making, it all clings on the instant and firmly grips to the end. Hawaii is satisfying, entrancing and worth while—one of the choicest of creation's heritage to man.

SPUDS BRING IN $10,000,000.

For outside consumption—17,000,000 bushels of potatoes!

For home consumption and seed—3,000,000 bushels.

Total money return for crop—$10,000,000.

This is the wonderful potato record of Aroostook county, Me., the last of the old crop having just been sold.

It is a record that is causing wide discussion in agricultural circles in New England and all over the country.

The advance in Aroostook County agriculture has been one of the marvels in scientific farming of recent years. From an almost unknown territory Aroostook county has come to be the "big potato country."

Other Crops Also Raised.

Aroostook county with its 9000 square miles of territory is about the same size as the State of Connecticut. Last year this county, the most northerly in Maine, not only produced more than 20,000,000 bushels of the finest potatoes, but large quantities of hay, oats, and other crops, and yet only a narrow strip along its easterly border is under cultivation.

For that part of the potato crop which was shipped away the farmers of the county received about $10,000,000, or at the average rate of $1.35 a barrel.

Much of this money went to pay debts incurred in the preceding year, which was not favorable for the potato farmers—debts for fertilizer and implements—but much, also, for comforts and luxuries.

In the olden days, before the railroad was built from Bangor, farming in Aroostook was carried on in a primitive way and on a small scale, for access to markets was only to be had by the round-about and expensive rail journey through the province of New Brunswick, thence back into Maine.

York county also has many farms which will also yield big returns, if farmed in an up-to-date method.

Railroad Starts Boom.

Then in 1894 came the railroad from Bangor, at first only as far as Houlton, but since then extended in various branches to cover most of the inhabited section and reaching at last to the farthest north of all Maine—Fort Kent, which is farther north from Bangor than Boston is west, the distance by rail being 281 miles.

Since the railroad was built and a direct outlet afforded for the produce of the county, Aroostook has gained amazingly in wealth and having now more than 75,000 inhabitants and a valuation exceeding $40,000,000, and leading even the old county of Penobscot in the number of its school children.

The potato crop has jumped in 20 years from insignificant proportions to more than 20,000,000 bushels annually, and from the profits of this one staple crop the farmers have progressed from log huts, debt and back-breaking labor to modern houses, fat bank accounts and the most improved farm machinery.

Children Go to College.

The Aroostook farmer now sends his daughters and sons to college, has pianos and organs and oriental rugs, first-class plumbing, electric lights and telephones in his house, gas engines and electric motors to help in the farm work, and rides to town in his motor.

Superstition.

"What worries me about my wife," said Mr. Meekton, confidentially, "is that she is getting superstitious." "What about?" "Me. Whenever anything goes wrong she always manages to figure it out that I'm the person who brought bad luck into the family."

Here is an idea.

Instead of trying to stir up trouble in this old world, let us get busy and help those who are in trouble and see how much we shall enjoy the change.

THE BENEFITS OF TRUE SABBATH OBSERVANCE

By REV. ALEXANDER HAMILTON.

The Sabbath was founded on the necessities of the race. It is a merciful institution; intended to be a blessing to man. It is good for him to keep the Sabbath. This is the great principle laid down by our Lord. Both the positive and ceremonial Sabbaths were made for man's highest good. He may outgrow the ceremonial, but never the positive or moral.

There Are Physical Blessings Attending a Proper Observance of the Sabbath.—The Sabbath is God's present to the working man. It brings rest to his body, replenishes his elasticity, and helps to prolong his life. It preserves his bodily vigor, and enables him to do more and better work. The physical system needs to be supplied with new force after a week of toil to prepare for six days more of work. Doctor Blakie says: "In the economy of existence it answers the same purpose as the economy of income is answered by a savings bank." William Wilberforce, in a letter to Christopher King of Haiti, Oct. 8, 1818, wrote: "I well remember that during the war, when it was proposed to work all Sunday in one of the royal manufactories for a continuance, not for an occasional service, it was found that the workmen who obtained government consent to abstain from working on Sundays executed in a few months even more work than the others." Dr. Farre, in his testimony before the British House of Commons, said: "Men who labor six days in a week will be more healthy, and live longer, other things being equal, than those who labor seven; and they will do more work, and do it in a better manner." This statement was endorsed by the unanimous vote of an association of twenty physicians. The Sabbath question is of vital importance to the health and happiness of the people. The proper observance of the Sabbath is a duty we owe to ourselves and to God.

Sabbath Keeping Brings Intellectual Advantages.—It relieves the strain upon the mental faculties. Without it the mind becomes enfeebled, and, in some cases, entirely wrecked. A distinguished merchant, who for twenty years had done a vast amount of business, remarked, in the presence of a company of merchants: "Had it not been for the Sabbath, I have no doubt I should have been a maniac long ago." This remark brought up the case of one of the greatest importers, who used to say that the Sabbath was the best day in the week to plan successful voyages, showing that his mind had no Sabbath. He was then in the insane asylum, where he had been for years. One writer declared that "he never knew a man to work seven days in a week who did not kill himself or kill his mind."

The Sabbath, Correctly Observed, Promotes Business Interests.—Experiments have been made in great business concerns, manufactories and railroads, showing that the men who rest on Sunday do better work on Monday and cause fewer accidents than when they work seven days of the week. The testimony of the Paris builders, given in the interdenominational Conference on Sunday Rest, that always on Sundays workmen do the worst work, and make their employers incur heavier responsibilities. Why then do they require the men to work on the Sabbath against their own interests? Blinded by the lust for wealth they are unable to see the facts, or seeing them do not wisely interpret them. It is wrong to defraud workmen of their needed Sunday rest and those who do must pay the penalty as well as the workmen themselves.

There Are Social, Moral and Religious Benefits Arising from a Wise Use of the Sabbath.—A French Assembly voted to abolish the Sabbath, and set apart one day in ten for amusements. In 1789, the infuriated French mob razed the Bastille to the ground, looted the churches, and guillotined every man that was well dressed. One hundred years later in connection with the great exhibition there assembled in one of the halls of the exhibition building, under the patronage of the French government, an international congress for the discussion of the Sunday question. It was composed of Protestants, Catholics, Infidels and Jews. They assembled as scientific men purely—the religious side of the question being excluded, as it was a governmental affair. Yet there was a consensus of opinion that man's best interest—physical, mental, moral, economical and political require that he should have one day's rest in seven.

The Lure of the Cash.

"Why have you abandoned the stage?" "I haven't left it, but I'm so busy signing soap testimonials, hair-restorer ads and indorsements for piano players and safety razors that I really haven't time to rehearse properly."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Sweet Grass.

We never know how much sweetness there is in grass till it is cut. Severed from the root, it gives out a perfume which the garden itself can hardly rival. Misfortune instead of making us bitter, should bring out the sweetness of the spirit, like the fragrance of the mown grass.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Wire Device For Taking Eggs From Hot Water.

In the accompanying illustration is shown a little device which may be made by any handy boy with a piece of springy wire and a pair of pincers:

Take a piece of wire about twenty-four inches in length and bend it in a complete loop in the middle, with the two ends brought quite together. Other loops should be made on each end of the wire so as to clasp the egg. When this arrangement is held in the hands it is a simple matter to spread the two ends apart so as to clasp the egg firmly, but the pressure is not great enough to damage the egg.

Raspberry Shrub.

One quart of cider vinegar, six quarts of red raspberries, one pint of sugar to each pint of juice. Put three quarts of the berries into an earthen jar and pour over them the vinegar. Let stand about twenty-four hours; then strain through a jelly bag, pressing out all the liquid. Pour this liquid over a second three quarts of fresh berries and let stand again twenty-four hours. Again strain through a jelly bag, expressing the juice. Add the sugar as above and let boil twenty minutes. Store as canned fruit or in bottles. To serve use one-fourth of a cupful of the shrub to three-fourths of a cupful of water.

Lemon Ginger Beer.

This should be made a couple of days before using. Put two gallons of cold water over six lemons sliced thin, one and one-half pounds of sugar and a scant ounce of ginger root. Let it come to a boil; then add a tablespoonful of cream of tartar. Strain and set in a cool place. When nearly cold add a yeast cake dissolved in a little lukewarm water, stir thoroughly; then set in the cellar overnight. In the morning mix well, bottle, corking air tight, and lay the bottles on their sides in a cold place. A small bottle of Jamaica ginger extract may be used in the place of the whole ginger if preferred.

Steak and Rice.

Procure about one and a half pounds of stewing steak, cut thin. Put a tablespoonful of flour on a plate and season it well with pepper and salt. Cut the steak into strips and well cover with the prepared flour. Roll them up tightly and place them in a stewing jar. Have a saucepan with enough boiling water to reach about half way up the jar and cook the meat slowly for about two and one-half hours. Boil a large breakfast cup of rice in salted water and well dry it until the grains separate. Arrange the steak in the center of a dish, with the rice as a border.

Temperance Loving Cup.

Mix together the juice of five lemons and five oranges, one pint of strawberry sirup, one can of grated pineapple and one ounce of mineral water. Make sirup of one cupful of water, one cupful of rather strong tea and two cupfuls of sugar. When cold add to the fruit mixture, with enough water to make one and one-half gallons of liquid. This same mixture makes a good filling for the punch bowl, in which case a half pint of maraschino cherries, chips of orange peel or a few slices of red bananas or muscatel grapes cut in halves make an improvement.

Fried Fish.

If the fish is too large for the pan, cut steaks from it, slicing down on either side of the backbone. Small fish, to be fried whole, should have the backbone severed to prevent curling. Rub them with flour before putting in the pan—this browns them and prevents them from absorbing grease. Fry to a golden brown, sprinkling lightly with pepper and salt just as the color turns. If fish are fried in butter do not salt them. Fish should be wiped dry before frying and the grease should be hot.

Oatmeal Water.

Put one cupful of oatmeal in a stone jar, add a cupful of sugar and the juice and rind of three lemons cut thin. Cover with three quarts of boiling water and let it stand until the sugar is dissolved and the water cold. Strain and put on ice.

Care of Linoleum.

Once a week go over linoleum with a rag dampened with kerosene oil. Otherwise it needs only a simple wiping off occasionally with a cloth moistened with warm water and milk.

The Kind Of Government He Liked

By JOHN G. LARNED

"In any event, the crown prince must not be exposed," said Von Bernstein.

"Which means that I must lose myself to the world."

The reply was made by Count Esterhoff, on whose person had been found a pack of marked cards. A party of young noblemen and the prince had been playing baccarat. His royal highness had lost heavily, and Esterhoff had won. In order to force the latter to return his winnings the prince, who sat near the winner, slipped the marked pack into his pocket and then accused him of having won his money by cheating. To prove his accusation he demanded that Esterhoff be searched, and the cards were found.

No one was deceived, nor was it intended that any one should be deceived. The scheme was to effect the return of the money the prince had lost to Esterhoff without the heir apparent being obliged to demean himself by accepting it as a gift.

"There is a way out of it if you choose to avail yourself of it," said Bernstein.

"What way?"

"Give up what you have won to the prince and the matter will be hushed up."

"That would be to acknowledge myself guilty. I prefer to appear guilty to the world and preserve my own self respect."

"Nonsense, count. It is our duty to preserve the sovereign from reproach. He belongs to the people. Let them lose confidence in him and what follows? Anarchy."

Esterhoff stood firm. He was excluded from the prince's set on the ground that he had used marked cards. He gave his winnings to the poor, which was considered a proof that his conscience had in the end got the better of him. Under the name of Peter Esterhoff he went to America. His family estates had been lost by his father, and it was his ambition to make money and redeem them.

Twenty years rolled by. The crown prince had become king under the title of Oscar VIII. He had remained a gambler and a spendthrift, though the ill success to recoup his losses with Count Esterhoff had kept him from trying such a method again. During the two decades that had since passed he had become personally bankrupt. All that saved him was that the wealthy nobility, fearing that if he collapsed he would carry the government and them down with him, kept him afloat.

A wealthy American came to the capital and took a residence. He was unmarried and lived entirely alone. Nobody knew why he had come, why he remained or what he did with himself. Bankers knew that he had brought with him unlimited credit from America, and it seemed to them that the money he drew was expended for something, though they did not know what.

One day the king received notice from a lawyer that one of his notes which was due must be paid at once. Oscar forwarded the note through his chamberlain to a noble who had been appointed by the other nobles to take care of the king's debts. The amount was paid, but other similar notices came pouring in so fast that it was found impossible to take care of them. His majesty was informed that there was danger of a public scandal. Many of these claims were for money advanced for illegitimate purposes. The king asked who was pressing them and was told that an American multimillionaire was supposed to be at the bottom of it all.

One morning the American received a "command" to appear at the palace. He replied that he had no wish to visit the king; if the king wished to see him he would find him at home. The next day the royal carriage stopped at the American's house; the king alighted and was received in the drawing room.

"I have called," said Oscar, "to learn the meaning of your having bought up claims against me and pressing them for payment."

"Perhaps your majesty may remember when you were crown prince slipping a pack of marked cards into my pocket."

"Your pocket?"

"I am Count Esterhoff."

The king blanched.

"I have kept those cards," continued Esterhoff, "and would like to sell them to your majesty."

"How much do you ask for them?" inquired Oscar after collecting his faculties.

"Two hundred thousand American dollars for each card."

"Great heavens, man! What do you mean?"

"I mean that in my youth I lived under a system wherein the chief men and women found it to their interest to support injustice. If your people still feel the same in this matter let them raise $10,400,000 and buy the cards. I hold your notes to that amount, and the notes will go with the cards."

After a great effort those whose fortunes depended on the stability of the government raised the amount. As fast as the money came in they would redeem one or more cards and corresponding notes till all were taken up. Then Esterhoff instead of redeeming his family domains went back to America. He said he had no use for a government except of the people, by the people and for the people.

Enamelware Cement.

For mending enamelware pots and pans where a hole has been made or the enamel has been chipped off, the following is effective: Equal parts of soft putty, finely sifted coal ashes and sifted table salt. Mix all together and pack it into the hole. Place the mended article on the stove with a little water in it until the cement gets hard. It never fails, and it becomes as hard as the enamel itself.

From "Poor Richard."

When you incline to have new new clothes, look first well over the old ones, and see if you cannot shift with them another year, either by scouring, mending or even patching, if necessary. Remember a patch on your coat and money in your pocket is better and more creditable than a writ on your back and no money to take it off.

Was Looking for It, Too.

"I say, my friend," called the motorist to the farmer, as he drew alongside of the field, "I'm looking for a decent road to take me into Squigglesville." "I'm derved glad to hear it," replied the farmer. "Ef ye happen to find it, stranger, send me a tellygram, will ye?"

RECOGNITION DAY AT OCEAN PARK

Last Thursday was Recognition Day, the Chautauqua Graduation Day at Ocean Park. Chandler's Band of Portland gave an excellent concert at the band stand in Furber Park in the morning.

The afternoon program opened with the march of the flower children, the Society of the Hall in the Grove, the Graduates and undergraduates of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle headed by the band. The exercises at the Gates and the graduation followed.

Mrs. Minnie A. Milliken and Miss Edna A. Goodier received diplomas with seals for special work.

Addresses by Rev. Mr. Woodworth of Providence, R. I., and by Rev. H. T. McDonald, President of Storer College, Harper's Ferry, and a reading from Whittier by Mrs. Coralie F. Cook of Washington, D. C., with several numbers by the band, made up the program.

The regular meeting of the Society of the Hall in the Grove was held at seven o'clock and a program of unusual excellence followed. Miss Mildred Sheldon Bass of New York, who has given two fine programs this season, read Henry Van Dyke's "The Other Wise Man," and Longfellow's "Hiawatha" with a musical accompaniment by Mr. Harry Anderton. Miss Beatrice Newby Phinney pleased the audience with her selections on the harp.

Recognition Day, as usual, was a day to be long remembered by all who were fortunate enough to be in Ocean Park that day.

MAYOR SCANLON.

News was received at Old Orchard last Sunday morning of the death in Lawrence of Mayor Scanlon, the Flag mayor, as he was called. Mayor Scanlon had been a summer resident of Old Orchard for a number of seasons and had a large number of friends here who will mourn with his family and the city of Lawrence in their loss.

He returned to Lawrence from here and was compelled to go to the hospital for an operation. The operation was considered successful and he seemed rapidly on the road to health when a relapse brought the end.

WHAT IS A PROPER OBSERVANCE OF THE SABBATH?

(By Rev. Alexander Hamilton.)

The Sabbath is the unchanging register of man's need of rest. It shows what proportion of rest he needs. It regulates the ratio of the toil to the rest. The French Philosopher, M. Proudhin, wrote: "What statician could have discovered that in ordinary times the period of labor ought to be to the period of rest in the ratio of six to one? Moses, then, having to regulate in a nation the labors and the days, the rests and the festivals, the toils of the body and the exercises of the mind, the interests of hygiene and of morals, political economy and personal subsistence, had recourse to a science of numbers which embraced all space, duration, movements, spirits, bodies, the sacred and profane. The certainty of the science is demonstrated by the result. Diminish the week by a single day, the labor is insufficient relatively to the repose; augment it in the same quantity it becomes excessive. Establish every three days and a half, a half-day of relaxation, you multiply by the day's loss of time: and in shattering the natural unity of the day you break the numerical equilibrium of things. Accord, on the other hand, forty-eight hours of repose after twelve consecutive days of labor, you kill the man by inertia after having exhausted him by fatigue."

The Sabbath is properly observed only when the interests of man are promoted. Every part of his being must be advanced—physical, intellectual, social, moral and spiritual.

The Sabbath was designed as a sacred day of rest. Secular employment was forbidden. Works of necessity, such as will serve the interests of man, were permitted. This is shown in the example of Jesus and His apostles. "And it came to pass, that He was going on the Sabbath day through the corn-fields; and His disciples began, as they went, to pluck the ears of corn. And the Pharisees said unto Him, Behold, why do they on the Sabbath day that which is not lawful?" So far as the plucking of the corn was concerned it was permitted by divine authority. The law said:

"When thou comest into the standing corn of thy neighbor, thou mayest pluck the ears with thine hand; but thou shalt not move a sickle unto thy neighbor's standing corn." It was not the act to which they objected, but to the day on which it was performed. All servile work was prohibited on the Sabbath as sinful. The Jews had perverted the law. They were overparticular about the letter, but had departed from the spirit. Jesus and His disciples had simply satisfied hunger. "His disciples were an hungered." This was doubtless the only food to be obtained. Practically it was the same as eating food off a table. Jesus defends His disciples on the ground of necessity. At the same time He rebukes their inhospitality—no one had invited them to eat. Jesus does not argue for a violation of the law, but for a better interpretation of the law. He defended His disciples against the interpretation of the Pharisees.

There were ordinary rules respecting the observance of the Sabbath that must yield to the temple and its requirements, and there were rights before which even the temple must give way. Jesus claims to be superior to the temple and its sacrifices. Jesus came into the world to elevate mankind. Whatever interfered with this purpose must be laid aside. It has been well said: "If God rested as the Jew would have man rest, no sun would rise, no flower bloom." It is not a work of necessity to accumulate property, but it may be lawful to prevent its destruction as in the case of fire or floods, etc.

Works of mercy are commanded. On the Sabbath day Jesus healed the sick. He taught that it was lawful to do good on the Sabbath. Not to do well, when it is in our power to do so, is to do evil; not to save life, when we can, is to kill. The physician is clearly a Sabbath-keeper as he performs his work of restoring health, and preserving life, but the conscientious doctor will not permit his profession to interfere unnecessarily with his Sabbath duties. Works of mercy and of necessity are in perfect harmony with a proper observance of the Lord's Day. Care must be exercised in determining what are and what are not works of necessity and of mercy. Sometimes we call things by wrong names.

AUTO ACCIDENT AT ATLANTIC AVENUE

Last Thursday the Atlantic avenue crossing was the scene of an automobile accident, when a Ford automobile, driven by Rev. M. E. Broader of Massachusetts, and occupied by him and the Rev. Wm. Huff of Sioux City, Iowa, was struck by the scoot train running between here and Camp Ellis. The train was backing into Old Orchard when it struck the machine which was completely wrecked. Mr. Broader was thrown against his steering gear and received several broken ribs. Mr. Huff was more fortunate and escaped with slight sprains to his limbs. A. O. Hill, the crossing man, claims that he was at his post and had to jump to avoid being hit himself by the train. The crossing is blind when trains are coming from the direction of the Camp Ground station and makes it a place to be watched very carefully by those using the crossing.

A man is always stationed on the rear end of the train when it is backing up from Camp Ellis to Old Orchard, in a sense this could be considered the front end of the train from the direction the train is going. The rear end of the train is equipped with a whistle signaling apparatus which the brakeman is supposed to blow at all crossings, and also to warn people who may be too close to the track as the train approaches.

Miss Ebba Nybord and Miss Gertrude Nybord of Meriden, Conn., are spending the summer at Old Orchard. Miss Ebba Nybord is contralto soloist in one of the Meriden churches.

Mr. Floyd F. Warner of Meriden, Conn, is again summering at the beach. He is staying at Chaseholm.

SURF ECHOES

AND THE

OLD ORCHARD MIRROR

OLD ORCHARD, MAINE. AUGUST 20, 1914

VOL. XIV, No. 8

ANN MARIA DOOLITTLE'S FIRST TRIP TO OLD ORCHARD BEACH.

(Written for Surf Echoes and Old Orchard Mirror by Lida Holmes.)

When my uncle, Joshua Doolittle, died last spring and left me two thousand dollars in the Squashtown Bank, I made up my mind I would go to Old Orchard Beach and spend the day. I didn't want to go on a pleasure exertion all alone, so I asked my nephew, John, who owns the next farm to mine, to go along with me.

He is an awful good fellow only kinder quick tempered, but he knows enough not to get married, same as I do. He said he would be tickled to death to go especially after I told him I would pay his fare on the kyers, but he must pay the rest himself.

I never rid on the kyers before but I liked to see the trees and farm houses flying by the winders fust rate.

It took us about all the forenoon to git there but I liked riding in the kyers so well, I didn't mind that. But John did, for he was getting hungry. But, O my land! When we did get to the Old Orchard depot, I never hed sich a noise as them Tavern-men made. One rushed up to me and said, "Ever-eat, Madam?" I said, "Guess you'd think so if you ever paid my store-bill." Another said, "Come right this way, lady, to our carriage." I said, "No, sir, I guess not. You can't kidnap me."

Just then my nephew, John, grabbed me by the arm and said, "What did you come way down here for? I thought I had lost you. Come on, I have found a good place to eat," for you know men folks allus want to eat fust thing.

Well, I called it anything but good when I got there. But John said it was the cheapest place he could find, so that settled it. When we went into the room there was a lot of little tables with nothing on them, and a gal handed me a hand-bill to read but I said, "I left my specs to home and I can't read without them," so I folded it up and put it in my pocket.

Nephew John sat at the same table with me (there was only room for two), and he hollered up to the gal, "Bring on your grub," and she said, "Will you have soup or clam chowder?" He said, "Both." She looked at me and said, "You the same?" and I said, "Sartin."

The soup and chowder looked just alike only the chowder had one small clam in it. John told me not to eat the clam, as it was only put there for a sign, and they would want to use it the next day.

The soup was so thin, John said he guessed we'd better drink it to save time, so we did.

After we drank the slops, the gal came along and said, "Will you have some dessert?" I said, "What is that, meat?"

"Pudding or pie," she says, "either pudding or pie."

John says, "Puddin and pie, bring us both." So, after we had waited about ten minutes, she brought us in a small sample of both. Then he beckoned to the gal and said:

"The samples were good, now bring us a plateful."

She said, "Sir, do you wish for another order?"

"Another order," says John, "what's that, something different? No, bring same old things. We haven't time to try any more samples."

And would you believe it, she came back with some more samples. She went out, and as she did not come back, John says, "I guess we'd better go out and look at the ocean while she cooks the stuff. But as we were passing a box with a man inside, right by the door, he said, 'You will settle here.' I said, 'O, no, we don't want to settle here, we are only here for the day.'"

The man then looked at John and said, "Sir, you must pay for your orders." Said John, "The gal is cooking them now, and we will be back after we go down and see the ocean."

"Sir, here is your bill for what you have already eaten," he said, awful cross.

And will you believe me when I tell you, John had to pay seventy cents for that drink of soup and them samples.

John was awful mad, but he got over it when I told him I would pay the bill, as he would not have come if it had not been for me.

Then we walked down to see the water and I tell you it was a great sight. No, I don't mean the water, but the folks. Most all women, and they only had on one little dress (not half big enough) only come to their knees, and they were bare-footed, too.

I told John them must be the suffergrates women that have been traveling around the country 'till they had worn their shoes and stockings all out, and have got so discouraged, they are going to drown themselves, for they were all heading for the water.

Then I wished I had left nephew John at home and come along alone, but I see a man coming and I run up to him and said, "Mister, mister, can you tell me where those naked wimen come from, and what on arth they are going to do?" and he laughed and said, "Why, they are going to take their baths."

"Purty public place," I said, "to wash themselves. Why don't they take a tub to home in the kitchen, way all decent folks do." The man walked off, laughing, and I looked back for John, and there he stood, with his eyes and mouth wide open, looking at them wimen. I took him by the arm and said, "Come up this way, John, away from the water." For

I knew it want no fit place for my Nephew John. He hated to leave, but I pulled him right along and purty soon I spied the depot and I knew it must be about time to start for home, and sure enough we arrived at the depot just in time to take the fust train home, so we got right aboard, though John said he wished he could go down to the beach and look at the water once more, but I said, "No, sir, you have seen enough of Old Orchard for one day's trip. Next year we will come again and stay a week."

We got home about ten o'clock that night, and after a good, hearty supper, I went to bed, awful tired but well pleased with my fust but it shan't be my last trip to Old Orchard Beach.

The calendar is a very inoffensive little thing generally speaking. But have you ever noticed the speed with which the dates upon it become passe?

Vanity is a funny part of human nature. Some people being hit hard in a soft place are pleased.

Now we can sympathize with other editors who have had their "stuff" stolen. Ain't it awful?

That rocking chair fleet is always on the reconnoitre and their ammunition is apparently exhaustless.

Who chased who how many times around what?

How much am I offered?

Swat the fly.

A Progressive recently informed us that a part of their platform of which they were proud was contained in the following: "We believe in the enforcement of the law." If you will stop and consider you will easily appreciate how foolish that statement is. For certainly every good citizen, regardless of political faith, will abide the honest judgment of the community in which he lives. Laws are rules in the game of life, made necessary by the inequality of mankind. When any party or individual becomes so disintegrated that they do not believe in the laws they make hypocrisy prevail and the doom of better things is at hand.

Election day is drawing near. Forgetting for a moment the strife in National Politics and examining the local situation we find three candidates. A Democrat, a Progressive, and a Republican, by name F. H. Libby, Geo. T. Hinchliffe and Percy N. H. Lombard, who are competing for the legislative seat to represent Old Orchard and Kennebunkport. All three of the candidates coming from Old Orchard, they are practically neighbors and friends of all the local voters. We pay our respects to the Progressive candidate, Mr. Geo. T. Hinchliffe, by saying he is a very energetic and likeable person and an all around excellent citizen. Of Mr. F. H. Libby, the Democratic nominee, we can say that he is one of the leaders in the local Hotel Men's Association, a very progressive body, but he stands upon the Democratic Platform. Practically the whole Democratic platform in this State is built upon the liquor situation which is a very much abused platform and we say nothing further.

Percy N. H. Lombard is the Republican nominee. He has already had experience in the legislature, and he is an exceptionally capable person. Old Orchard needs to represent it in the legislature a man of experience and one who can show to that body why we should receive especial attention from the State. He has declared himself to fight for a State highway along our waterfront, a wonderful project which would mean millions of dollars to us in the coming years. He has also made a promise to fight for a modern Sunday Observance Law which is also a very progressive idea. Therefore we say Vote for Percy N. H. Lombard and the Progressive Republican idea.

(Contributed.)

The Ford is my auto, I shall not want (another).

It maketh me to lie down beneath it; it leadeth me in paths of ridicule for its name sake.

Yea, though I ride through the valley, I am towed up the hill, for I fear much evil.

The rods and the engine discomfort me.

I annoint the tires with patches, my radiator runneth over.

I have a blow-out in the presence of mine enemies;

Surely, if this thing follows me all the days of my life

I will dwell in a Bug-House forever.

ANOTHER

NEARLY DROWNS

Daniel Porrell, aged 58, a retired merchant of Sanford, narrowly escaped drowning near the Pier last Sunday when he evidently waded out beyond his depths and was seized with cramps. His struggles were seen from the Pier and help was summoned from the Sea Shore bath house. The bath house attendant went out in the boat and dived bringing up Mr. Porrell, who was rushed to shore where medical attendance was waiting with the pulmotor from the York County Power Company's office.

The pulmotor was used with excellent results, bringing the victim rapidly to. He was taken to the Sea Shore bath house and later returned to Sanford.

It is presumed that Mr. Porrell ventured into the water immediately after eating a very hearty dinner and the shock proved nearly too much for his system.

ANTICIPATE LATE SEASON

The local hotel and business men look forward to a larger late season business this year than ever before, due partially to the arrival of many who had planned to spend their vacations abroad this year and also to the fact that September is by far the most beautiful month in the year here and each year a larger number plan to be here and enjoy the beautiful September weather.

The ex-President's last stop here was in 1908, just before the great fire.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIG FIRE

Seven years ago last Saturday evening was the anniversary of the conflagration that laid to waste so many of our cottages and hotels, burning over about seventy-five acres of ground and doing damage to the extent of a million dollars. The fire started in the Hotel Emerson annex where now stands the Pastime Theatre. It spread with great rapidity and five hours after found fully seven thousand people without shelter, a great many of whom slept on the beach. Fire apparatus was called from points as far away as Lewiston but to little avail.

Since that time many improvements have been made. We now have a high pressure water system and are always assured with a sufficient supply to cope with any fire. We have many new hotels, newer cottages and better streets and an improved lighting system. Old Orchard has been rehabilitated very rapidly and its future seems to point that it will be the great watering place of the Atlantic coast. A closer co-operation of its citizens will hasten its advancement.

Mr. H. Huntington Smith, Treasurer of Meriden Trust & Deposit Co. of Meriden, Conn., with his wife and son, Philip, is spending a few weeks at the Swan cottage on Union avenue. Mr. Smith motored from Meriden in his new six passenger Hupmobile.

Modern Education.

A prominent school principal lately told us some of the answers found in pupils' examination papers. Here are two of them: "What is a volcano?" "A volcano is a mountain that sometimes blows the equator off." "What is the difference between a mountain and a hill?" "A hill is like a mountain, only a mountain is a little more hillier."

More American Supremacy.

Fresno county, California, produces 94,000,000 pounds, or about 60 per cent of the California raisin crop, and nearly twice the quantity produced by Spain.

To the Tourist or Visitor

We invite you to come in and see our interior store decorations—carried out entirely with Birch Bark from the giants of the Maine Forests. Odorous shrubs and fir trees from the Maine woods. Hundreds of blossoming plants, elegantly mounted heads of our native Moose, Caribou and Deer, as well as countless birds of many species are all used most artistically, presenting a picture at once restful, interesting, instructive and most pleasing.

"Movies" in the Churches.

Rev. William Carter, formerly pastor of the Madison Avenue Reformed church, New York, field secretary of the International Peace Forum, a member of the national board of censorship for moving pictures, has been the prime mover in establishing the Church and School Social Service organization, by which the churches have definitely entered the moving picture field to teach of the Bible missions and great historical events which have tended to the betterment of mankind. Pictures will be taken of many biblical scenes at the places where the events were transacted, so far as possible, and of the great missionary centers, and others to show "how the other half lives." Doctor Carter says the organization "is not joined with commercial interests, but is one of clergymen, educators and social service workers formed for religious and philanthropic purposes to uplift humanity through this popular and wide spread amusement." Represented on the advisory board are the Baptist, Congregational, Episcopalian, Methodist, Presbyterian and Reformed churches, the Y. M. C. A., Boy Scouts, and the Big Brother movement.

"What makes that man start laughing when he tells a story?" "He always announces that it will be a funny story, doesn't he?" asked Miss Cayenne. "Yes." "Well, I suppose he laughs to show that he has the courage of his convictions."

PASSING COMMENT.

The Maine Insurance report for 1913 which has just been published shows the following statistics about Old Orchard. There were 10 fires doing damage of $8,927.00 to buildings that were valued at $38,365.00, insured for $34,500, and the insurance paid upon same was $7,507.00. For the contents of buildings where fires occurred there was insurance $7,025.00, damage sustained was $4,873, and insurance paid was $3,846.00.

The Sea Shore lot is assessed for a valuation of $12,000.00 or less than 25% of what it is offered for sale for. Several offers of from $35,000 to $40,000 have been made for it. It seems hardly fair to assess such a valuable piece of property so low and to assess most smaller pieces of property so high in comparison.

When there was stress and very great need after the disastrous fire of 1908 a body of our business men were organized into a Board of Trade and did excellent work in the advancement of Old Orchard. Since that time the organization has greatly disintegrated and we doubt if a meeting has been held in five years. A good live and aggressive Board of Trade in any community can work wonders for good if it be so inclined. What a pity ours has been allowed to give up the ghost? Why can't we have a mass meeting and bring to life that body and help us to secure that boulevard up and down our beach and some magnificent hotels?

Some of our summer residents are talking of getting together and organizing a club, and having a building and tennis courts. A good club house with tennis courts and modern conveniences would be a great asset for Old Orchard.

About a year ago a fire visited Ocean Park destroying three houses. Since that time the ruins of two of those houses have been allowed to remain standing, greatly detracting from their locality. A Town ordinance provides that the Municipal Officers can remove such ruins after a sufficient time has elapsed and the owner of the property does not and that the cost of such removal may be assessed to the owners. We trust that the municipal officers will no longer suffer the residents of our Ocean Park section to be troubled with such eyesores.

Section 3 of chapter 7 of the By-Laws of Old Orchard reads as follows:

Sec. 3. If any person shall in any street, lane or public place in the Town of Old Orchard wilfully or maliciously make any loud or unusual noises, by shouting, sounding horns, drums or any implement or thing; or shall sign or utter any indecent or obscene songs or words, or shall in any other unruly and boisterous manner disturb the quiet and good order of the town, he shall forfeit and pay for such offense not less than one nor more than ten dollars to be paid into the treasury of the Town.

The sounding of megaphones for any purpose is disagreeable and does not lend any inchantment to our Town. The above by-law is a most excellent one and our chief of police should enforce it more rigidly.

From time to time much complaint is heard about our numerous sidewalk stands. It had always been supposed that there was no legal way by which the nuisance could be abated. But a close perusal of the Old Orchard by-laws reveals the following and puts the matter up to the selectmen.

Section 1 of chapter 9 reads as follows:

No person shall expose any article of goods for private sale nor at auction in any street or lane or on any sidewalk within "Special Limits" as set out in Section IV of the act of incorporation of the town of Old Orchard without a written license or permit from the selectmen thereof on penalty of five dollars for each offense to be paid into the treasury of the town.

And section 4 of chapter 11 reads as follows:

To provide for the general public welfare and to maintain real estate values the Municipal Officers are instructed to refrain from granting licenses that might be objectionable to abutters or permanent business interests.

THE BLESSED GIVER

In Watching Course of Somebody Else's True Love, Keep Out of Rough Spots.

(Copyright.)

"Well, I'll be hanged!" said Colton, as he nervously fingered the envelope the postman had left. "A wedding invitation; I can tell them intuitively."

He was right. Bobby and Mabel, two of his warmest friends, had at last decided to discard the yoke of single blessedness for a new sort of yoke. Not the slightest doubt as to what was expected of him, either. Hadn't he promised Bobby once, as the pair stood with their feet on the rail of a certain thirst emporium, that he would do his share to make the great event a worthy one when the time rolled around? The "great event" had seemed far in the future, which only goes to prove the old adage that time flies.

Colton stood before the pier-glass, a sneer curling the corners of his lips.

"You're about the biggest fool I know," he said, addressing his image. "Here you are without a red cent in your pocket—or anywhere else—expected to attend a swell wedding, which, in plain every-day English, means, cab, flowers, and a present which can't cost less than a hundred dollars."

"Bobby's your good old pal—you know that, don't you? And you're not going to send him something you're ashamed of—you know that, don't you? Yes, you do; so get busy!"

"There's no use putting things off. Who was the duck that wrote 'procrastination is the thief of time,' and so forth?" he mused, as he left the house.

"Well, never mind; I've forgotten his name. The great and pertinent question is, 'What first?' I've got to have an even hundred. I suppose, on a pinch, that could cover cab and flowers as well as the present. Might soak my watch; case alone's worth a cool two hundred. But I won't; I think too much of it. I have it; I'll see Billy Martin! He said once that if ever I was in trouble to call on him. All right, Bill—here I come!"

The elevator soon landed him on the twelfth floor of the office building where Billy worked.

Billy received him cordially, and heard his tale of woe. Of course Colton said nothing about the wedding.

"Sorry, old man," he said; "but I had a note fall due unexpectedly yesterday. You know how these things are. I'd like to do this for you, but—" He shrugged his shoulders in a way that said plainer than words: "Nothing doing!"

"I need it bad," confided Colton.

"Well, I'll tell you what to do, Dick. You go over to see Tom Noddington. You know where Tom is—in the Commercial Bank building. He often accommodates the boys without a bit of security. I'm sure he'll fix you up."

"All right. Thanks, old man," Colton responded, and took his leave.

"Well, now, I'll tell you," said Mr. Noddington, when Colton had explained the object of his visit. "I've lost so much by loaning out small sums indiscriminately that I've quit."

No personal affront intended, Mr. Colton. I'd like to accommodate you, but—"

"No, you couldn't very well under the circumstances, could you, Mr. Noddington? Good day, sir."

"Doggone Billy Martin!" flared Colton, as he found himself again in the street. "Sending me to a man like that! He might have saved me the humiliation. But the hundred—I must have that!"

The incident slipped from his mind, as new thoughts crowded into his brain.

"Ah!" he exclaimed suddenly. "There's Newt Billings over there. I'll hail him. He's always been a good friend of mine."

"Hey, there, Newt! Wait a minute, can't you?"

"Sure," responded Newt. "Where in the world have you been keeping yourself? Haven't seen you in a dog's age."

"Been a little under the weather. Say, old man, I've got to raise a hundred dollars. Don't know where I can get it, do you?"

"No, I don't, Dick. I was about to strike you for a tenner myself. I'm broke; played the ponies yesterday and got swabbed out as clean as a gun-barrel. You might go see Dan Turner. He's an accommodating sort of a fellow—let me have two hundred on my note last spring."

"You think he'd do it, Newt?"

Colton recalled his experience of a few minutes previous. He had no inclination to have the dose repeated.

"Sure! You won't have a bit of trouble."

"All right. Thanks for the tip. Where will I find him?"

"He'll be at the club about this time. He always dines there."

Yes, Mr. Turner was there—a cool, debonaire individual of uncertain age—sipping his coffee, as he slowly munched a Welsh rabbit. He was very glad to see Mr. Colton again; remembered their little jaunt together in the mountains the previous summer with a great deal of pleasure—but, really, he could not lend money to anyone without gilt-edged security. Mr. Colton would understand—purely a business proposition, you know.

Yes, Mr. Colton understood, and withdrew after exchanging a few commonplace words, his face flushed with shame, not unmixed with indignation.

"Pretty blamed hard—this asking people for money," he told himself, when he had, in a measure, regained his composure, and felt duly humiliated for the sulphurous phrases he had allowed to escape him.

"Guess I'll have to fall back on the watch," he added ruefully.

He took it from his pocket, caressing it fondly. It was a beauty—solid gold case, studded with diamonds, 17-jeweled movement, and all that.

"Ought to be worth three hundred to any pawnbroker. Heaven only knows when I'll get it again, though. But a fellow's got to sacrifice something for his friends. Bobby'd do as much for me. Well, here goes!"

He crossed the street to where the sign of the three balls was prominently displayed, and entered.

"Well, uncle, I want three hundred on that for sixty days," he said, laying the watch on the counter.

"Tree hundred!" exclaimed uncle, holding up his hands in despair. "Vat do you tink I am—a gold mine? Gott in Himmel, no! I vill gif you a hundred und a quarter."

"Oh, come now, uncle!"

"Dot's all."

"Well, I'll take it—I need it!"

And pocketing the money, Colton hurried out.

"Ah, but it feels good to finger a bunch of the long green again!" He laughed gleefully. "But it won't last long. I might as well have this business over with."

So he sought a jewelry store, from where he soon emerged with a silver ice-pitcher under his arm. The one-twenty-five had dwindled to eighteen—eighty—which he discreetly held out for cab hire and flowers.

"Now I'll go home and write a nice little note of congratulation. It will please Bobby, and get this whole business off my mind. As for the pitcher—Mabel will go into ecstasies."

As he was waiting for a car, who should jump out of a near-by hack and dash for the curb but Bobby!

"Here!" cried Colton. "Where are you going in such a hurry?"

"Oh, is that you, Colton? I'm going to catch a train. Old man telegraphed me to come to Denver at once. I may not be back for a year. Sorry I didn't see you before."

"But the wedding—"

"Forget it!" interrupted Bobby. "Postponed indefinitely—invitations called in—write you about it next week—got to get this train—so long!"

He wrung Colton's hand, and hopped on the rear platform of a depot tram-car.

Colton looked first at the present, tightly clasped under his right arm, then at the receding form of his friend.

"Well, I'll be——" he said.

Planned by Ben Franklin.

Now that the Yale University Press has become an established fact it is interesting to learn of the number of men who suggested the idea without being able to follow it up as did President George Parmly Day. Among the earliest suggestions is that of Benjamin Franklin, in a manuscript letter owned by the Yale University library. Benjamin Franklin outlines his plan to William Strahan. Under date of October 27, 1753, from Philadelphia, he writes:

"I am now about to establish a small printing office in favor of another nephew at New Haven in the Colony of Connecticut in New England; a considerable town, in which there is a university and a prospect that a bookseller shop, with a printing house, may do pretty well."

The plan was afterward abandoned, but not until a lot for the Press had been purchased on the college campus and the printing press and materials ordered had arrived in New Haven.

Extravagant Conqueror.

"Ikey, vat is dot book you're readin'?" asked Ikey's father.

"Aboudt Chulius Caesar, fader."

"Und vot business vas he in?"

"He was a soldier and ven he won a battle he writed home, 'Vedi, vedi, vici.'"

"I bet he vent bankrupt—such extravagance! Vy he could send seven more vords for a kvarter."—Livingston Lanes.

David Smith, Able Seaman

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

Captain Williams of the United States navy having had quite a long term of sea service was ordered to the command of one of the finest naval stations on the New England coast.

Miss Nellie Williams was in the hey-day of youth, and visions of all sorts of pleasures danced in her head, the principal of which was flirting with the young officers with whom she would be thrown into contact. Her mother rejoiced that she would be able to introduce her daughter into society, which she could not have otherwise done because neither her husband nor herself had any fortune, and she was obliged to live a retired life.

But no sooner had the captain assumed command and his family been installed in the best quarters at the station than Miss Nellie must needs spoil it all by casting to the winds the most sacred traditions of the service. Of all the officers at the station, including several midshipmen of a suitable age to interest a girl of seventeen, not one succeeded in sufficiently engaging her attention to save her from bestowing not only it, but her whole heart, on an enlisted man.

No one can tell what a girl between fifteen and twenty is going to do, and when she does it no one can stop her. The difference in the navy between an enlisted man and an officer can best be illustrated by comparing a bramble bush with a pine tree. There are in these times many fine young men among the United States tars, but the grandson of a millionaire can no more overstep this sharply defined line between officer and enlisted man than can the cook in the galley.

A girl of seventeen is as easily caught as the stupidest fish that swims, and no one can tell who will catch her. Miss Williams one day went aboard a ship docked at the yard. And there she saw the young man who caught her. What it was in him that caught her no one could tell. True, he was a pretty boy, but there were other pretty boys who wore officers' uniforms, while the young man in question wore the sailor's cap, the blue flannel shirt with broad collar and the trousers tight about the hips and loose below the knee of a common sailor.

Now, Captain Williams, who found no difficulty in commanding his station, consisting of many strong men, found himself unable to discipline his daughter. He threatened, if ever she was caught speaking to the youngster again, to send her away. She made promises, but they were not kept. He would have ordered the sailor—David Smith was the name on his ship's roster—away from the station, but Miss Nellie's infatuation had become known and such action would be considered using official power to serve private interests, and the captain was very sensitive on such a point. Moreover, he feared that if he "put on the screws" his daughter might run away with the tar. This would not only tie her up to a common sailor, but a deserter.

How, when and where the tar and the captain's daughter contrived to hold their meetings no one knew. At least no one would tell. They had many adherents among the sailors, but none among the officers or their families. Finally it became apparent to Captain and Mrs. Williams that something must be done, and one morning Miss Nellie was informed that she was to be taken back to the quiet home.

There was nothing to do but submit, and what had promised to be such a fine thing for them ended in disappointment. And all this on account of Miss Nellie's having fallen in love with a common sailor instead of an officer.

One day Captain Williams received from Washington the discharge papers of a sailor named Howard Singleton. The discharge had been granted by the secretary of the navy at the request of the British minister. The case was brought to the commander's attention by the officer having the care of discharges because there was no such person as Howard Singleton at the station.

"Make inquiries for him," said the Captain; "he may have enlisted under an assumed name."

The officer retired and soon after returned with David Smith, able seaman. The captain, who knew him well, having had an interview with him concerning his daughter, looked at him in astonishment.

"Is your name Singleton?" asked Captain Williams.

"It is."

"Are you a British subject?"

"I am. My father is Sir Charles Singleton, a shipbuilder on the Clyde in Scotland. He builds ships for the British navy. I am to enter his service, but thought it better to learn something of warships by serving awhile on one of them. In the British navy I could not have preserved my incog. so I chose the United States service."

"Ahem! And you go from here to Scotland to enter your father's works?"

"I do. But after consultation with my father I shall return for a purpose."

"What purpose?"

"To ask the hand of your daughter."

"Um," mumbled the captain. "Perhaps you'd better see your father about that."

Singleton went home, returned and took Nellie Williams back to Scotland with him.

Theater Has Movable Roof.

By means of motor-operated roof leaves, the Princess theater, Meridian, Miss., can be quickly converted into an open-air auditorium, or at the approach of a sudden shower the covering can be almost instantly rolled back into place while the performance goes on uninterrupted. The opening in the roof is equipped with movable leaves which travel on small rails and are operated by cables passing over a double drum gear-driven by a three horse-power motor. The two closed cable loops are wrapped on the drum in opposite directions and each operates one leaf. The control rope, which moves simultaneously with the main leaves, has dogs mounted at the limits of its travel. These dogs operate a reversing switch which stops the motor and connects it ready for starting in the opposite direction. About one minute is required to open or close the roof, moving both leaves through their entire travel. The construction of the joints about the opening is such that the roof is thoroughly weatherproof. Motor, gears and switches are housed in roof boxes. The proprietor of the show house is well pleased with the innovation which affords him all the advantages of an outdoor open-air theater with full protection during inclement weather.—Electrical World.

SHIPMATES.

Many years ago the ship Hebrew, Capt. Carr, made voyages between American and European ports in the cotton carrying trade. On one of these voyages three Old Orchard men sailed on the ship: John Googins as chief mate, Samuel Patterson and William D. Guilford, seamen. Sailing from a northern port, probably Boston, they arrived safely in Mobile and were busily employed there for several days, stowing the cargo of cotton to the rude music of the chanty songs used by the stevedores in those days. At last all was in readiness and the ship sailed for Liverpool. One of the crew was an old sailor, named George Walker, who often amused his messmates with stories of his former voyages. He once sailed on a brig bound from Baltimore to a South American port. The captain had come on board in such a condition that he remained in his cabin while the vessel proceeded to sea with the mate in charge. When near the capes on the Virginia coast the vessel was struck by a violent squall and thrown on her beam ends. In the midst of the confusion while the mate and crew were using their utmost endeavors to right the craft the drunken captain put his head out of the companion way and bawled out: "Cook, fry eggs!" This voyage of the Hebrew was not to be monotonous. While crossing the Atlantic the ship was overtaken by a heavy westerly gale. The captain shortened sail, but, being anxious to make the passage in as short a time as possible, continued on his course, the ship scudding before the wind, although to do this required the utmost strength and skill of two men at the wheel. In a luckless moment disaster came, the helmsmen lost control at the wheel and the Hebrew rolled helplessly in the trough of the sea. The decks were awash with water, the sails slatting against the masts and everything in confusion. But shouts of command were soon heard above the roar of the tempest, several fathoms of chain cable were let down over the side, forming a drag which gradually brought the ship head to the wind, the sails were furled and everything made as snug as possible. When the gale abated and the ship was again put under sail it was found that the rudder head had been split open, but by an ingenious reeving of tackles a temporary steering gear was improvised and the voyage safely continued to Liverpool where repairs could be made. Port regulations did not permit kindling fires on ship board while vessels were in dock, so the crew took meals at a boarding house on shore. Some of the English dishes were new to them, the hare which one of the number declined somewhat abruptly when invited by the landlady to partake of it, and the cream jug they had known as the milk pitcher at home. I have many times heard of the miles of docks and the splendid buildings, and of the street venders, some of them old women, one in particular carrying a supply of fruit on her head and crying in a shrill voice: "Fine apples from Wales, a penny apiece and who buys?" In after years Captain Carr retired from the sea and passed his old age in comfortable circumstances in Bangor, being at one time a member of the company that owned the Norembega hall building. The three Old Orchard sailors afterward became farmers and remained true friends to the end of their days. And it is pleasant to add that this friendship has continued among their children and children's children—there is ever a cheerful greeting, a willingness to do a favor, a loyalty like that of the Scotsman to his clan—far-reaching has been the goodwill and friendliness which was so strengthened by these men sharing the dangers of the sea.

EVERYBODY GOES TO THE GREAT OCEAN PIER

There's plenty of comedy in store for the patrons of the Pier during the last part of the week. Everybody needs a little of that brand of amusement in these warm summer days, and after you have had a laugh at the vaudeville program, you can continue your enjoyment by tripping the light fantastic on the smoothest floor in the State, or by sitting out on the end of the pier viewing the open air movies, a novelty inaugurated this year by the Pier management.

Yorke and Herbert are comedians who will introduce a few eccentricities which should delight all, then Lane and Company will have something different in comedy singing and talking. Too much need not be said about talking, for everybody enjoys gossip. Tom Heffron comes alone to entertain us, and he brings along with him a good reputation as an entertainer.

The movies are changed every day, and every night there is something special on the program. Baseball fans will appreciate seeing the score of the Braves, in their onward march to the pennant of the National League. The fishing is still good on the end of the pier.—Advt.

TO ENTERTAIN

To-day and this evening, Mr. F. H. Hazelton will entertain at his beautiful summer estate, "Hazel-Den," the Council of Ten at their fourteenth annual meeting. The Council of Ten is the annual gathering of the Maine insurance people of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of which Mr. Hazelton is the head. In the afternoon they will meet the officials of the Equitable and in the evening an informal reception will be held for them.

THE MAN OF A THOUSAND

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

They called him "Judge" Dale because in the far west you never "mistake" a man when you can call him "colonel" or "judge." As James Dale looked more like a judge than a colonel, they called him as I have said. He was a mine owner, and when things went wrong he could make hot times for his engineers and foremen, but he didn't do it in a vulgar way. He was always a gentleman, even when he cursed the hardest. As a matter of fact, the judge's motto was "good form," and he carried it out in his clothes, his cigars, his dinners.

I have it on good authority that Judge Dale was not vulgarly startled when he received word from Denver that his handsome wife, to whom he had been married five years and who was visiting friends, had taken an old lover's arm and severed conjugal relations by eloping. He went through the daily routine just the same for two or three days, and he had the same placid look and the same even voice as he called his head clerk into the private office and said:

"Thomas, I am going away for a few days, and you will take charge."

"Yes, sir," replied Thomas, and the next morning the judge was on his way to Denver. He picked up his clew there without having elbowed anything or soiled the polish of his shoes. He met friends and talked politics and real estate and mines, and, lighting a fresh cigar, he took a train for the east. Arriving in New York city, he paid a detective to locate the couple.

A steamer was sailing for the Mediterranean at the end of the fourth day, and when she departed the judge was one of her passengers. There were more than a hundred others, and as the weather was also stormy for the first two or three days out no one commented on the fact that the passenger who was registered as Major Davis stuck close to his cabin and had his meals brought to him by a steward. Judge Dale had changed his name, but he had no idea of changing his identity. There were laughter and conversation and a clatter of dishes as all the passengers finally gathered for dinner for the first time since leaving Sandy Hook. To the right of the captain sat one of the handsomest ladies and one of the finest looking gentlemen on the list; but, taken altogether, it was a grand array of wealth and culture. Dinner was fairly under way and the lady on the captain's right was beaming when she happened to cast her eyes down the table, and her face went as white as death in a second. Half a dozen people caught her words as she whispered to her supposed husband:

"John, there is the judge!"

The man looked, and the color went out of his cheeks and his jaw fell. Near the foot of the table sat the man who had taken a new name. He was cool and placid, and only the ghost of a smile hovered around his mouth. He looked the woman and the man full in the eyes for a minute, but made no sign of recognition.

"What is it?" asked the captain as "Mrs. Bemis" shuddered and gasped and seemed on the point of fainting.

"A—a sudden illness—heart trouble!"

she stammered as she left the table for her stateroom.

At every meal Major Davis faced the guilty pair. Some of the passengers suspected nothing, but others insisted that there was a queer mystery afoot. The major gave nothing away. It wouldn't have been good form. The woman avoided him as far as possible, but two or three times a day he found excuse to speak to her.

The steamer was to call at the Azores. One morning about 10 o'clock she made harbor, and it was given out aboard that she would not get away before midnight. Everybody was anxious for a brief run ashore—everybody but Mrs. Bemis. She feared that she might overexert and bring on another attack of heart trouble. Mr. Bemis had decided to stay with her when Major Davis hunted him out and said:

"I trust you will make one of a little party going ashore, and that you will bring your revolver along as I shall mine?"

"The party is—is"—began Mr. Bemis as his face blanched.

"A very exclusive one—just the two of us, you see. You have a pistol, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Ah, of course! We may find game, you know. Do you wish to speak to your wife first?"

"No."

"She's gone to lie down, eh? Well, let's be off."

The two engaged a boat as soon as landing and pulled away to a wooded cape, and two hours later a dead man was brought back in the boat. It was Mr. Bemis. He had accidentally shot himself while shooting at a bird.

When the accident became known and it was found that Mrs. Bemis was to go on with the ship instead of ashore to see her husband to his last resting place, there was an outcry over her want of feeling, but it did not reach her ears. She was in the stateroom under the doctor's care, and none of the passengers saw her again. When the major had finished his work at the island he took a steamer for New York and home, and upon entering his office at the usual hour and in the usual way he said to his chief clerk:

"Thomas, I am back and feeling better. Bring me the balance sheets for the past four weeks."

The Anti Type.

"Show me an anti-suffragette and I'll show you a woman of the Mrs. Mallory type," said Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont at a luncheon in New York.

"A suffragist slum worker visited Mrs. Mallory in her wretched East side home. While Mrs. Mallory bent over her washtub—she was a washer-woman by trade—and while three small Mallories sprawled at her feet, she talked with contempt of the English militants. What women wanted to vote for Mrs. Mallory couldn't see 'It unsexes 'em,' she said.

"The talk turned then to Mrs. Mallory's home troubles, and the visitor asked:

"Does your husband drink regularly?"

"No'm," the anti meekly replied. "My wages ain't steady."

His Needs.

"Do you want a southern exposure in this new house?" asked the architect of the railroad magnate.

"I don't want any kind of an exposure," answered the nervous magnate, with a shudder. "What I need principally is not an exposure, but a getaway."

AIDING THE FARMER

Moving Pictures Used by Department of Agriculture.

Used to Show Progressive Methods, and Authorities Are Convinced They Are Destined to Do a Great Work.

Moving pictures are being used to instruct farmers throughout the United States in progressive methods of agriculture. They are being presented together with explanatory lectures, by officials of the department of agriculture. At the same time private lecturers in the employ of motion-picture companies, but working with the approval and co-operation of the department, are talking to farmers north, south, east and west, and with the aid of pictures are also showing them just how to obtain the best results. It is believed that this new method of demonstration will be vastly more effective than the old plan of distributing printed bulletins conveying the same information.

The importance to the country at large of this new work of the department of agriculture must appeal to the imagination of everyone. The scope of what the department may be able to accomplish in the way of providing subjects for the moving-picture plan of education is almost unlimited. Not only does the department itself demonstrate by direct appeal to the eye what improvements are possible to agriculturists and stockmen, but it broadens its field by aiding private moving-picture concerns to present its films for the benefit of the public in cities and towns, as well as in rural districts. Educational institutions such as agricultural colleges, universities and public schools are to be provided with films.

At present the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture is using six moving-picture films in connection with the lectures of its demonstrators and field workers, travel from place to place instructing producers in the best and most progressive methods of raising stock preventing cattle disease. Pro methods of dairying and the shipping of milk and other cattle products also included in this educational movement.

Re-enacting Gettysburg.

The film depicting the battle of Gettysburg was made on the battlefield. Parts of the great conflict re-enacted by 2,500 men, dressed in old Civil war uniforms and dragging old Civil war guns. Hundreds of horses were used. Thousands of dollars worth of powder was burned. A soldier went to see the battle. He sat rapt, as the pall of smoke concealed Pickett's famous charge and the men and horses went down in realistic heaps. His friends looked at him to see how he took it. "Do you know," said he, "I didn't know they had these machines as long ago as war days?" Profits of the moving picture are enormous. The total business last year was upward of $300,000, involving five billion paid admissions to 20,000 shows.

Last of Famous Company.

Cleo Madison, leading woman with the Gold Seal company, has been invited by Walter Brookins, veteran aviator, to accompany him on a passenger-carrying altitude flight. Brookins is the only survivor of the original corps of Wright flyers. With Ralph Johnstone, Arch Hoxsey, Phil Parmelee and Galbraith P. Rodgers, he first demonstrated the flying capabilities of the Wright machines. All the others have been killed.

Altogether Too Realistic.

In the "Romance of Copper Gulch," a three-reel feature recently completed, Miss West had the misfortune to receive some very bad burns on her arms and face which kept her out of pictures for a week or ten days.

HIT SOME ONE MIGHTY HARD

Originator of Most of Settlement's Gossip Is Not Dismayed by Minister's Scathing Remarks.

The minister of a large parish who had for some time been much troubled by the scandalous gossip that seemed to be occupying the minds of a portion of his flock, after exercising a great amount of tact and perseverance, at last succeeded in running to earth the originator of most of the settlement's society slander.

The guilty one was a regular attendant at the schoolhouse services, and the minister knew that should he take him to task personally and individually, he would inevitably lose a sheep, albeit a black one, so he decided to sermonize him.

Accordingly, a special discourse was prepared, and the following Sunday afternoon literally hurled at the offending member as he sat on a desk in the corner of the schoolroom.

Everybody present appeared fully to appreciate the situation, and at the close of the service departed quietly and thoughtfully for home.

All except the black sheep, who remarked to the minister:

"That wer' a fine sermon, ser; I'll bet that hit some of 'em pretty hard."

Woman's World

JUDGE NELDA JAEGER.

While women have presided in children's courts, a woman on the bench of a general police court is a novelty. Washington, one of the states where women vote, has one. She is Miss Nelda Jaeger, an able member of the Washington bar, who was recently appointed as police judge in Tacoma, Wash. When Miss Jaeger first took her position on the bench the court attendants were temporarily embarrassed, for they did not know exactly how to address her. The dignity and lack of self consciousness on the part of the new official carried off the situation gracefully, and in a short time they were addressing her as "Judge Jaeger" and "your honor" as though women magistrates were quite an ordinary and everyday matter. Miss Jaeger's knowledge of the law and her womanly tact combine to make her a successful and popular official.

Vote for PERCY N. H. LOMBARD FOR THE LEGISLATURE

Mr. Lombard's many good qualities and his wide experience make him the best fitted candidate to represent Old Orchard and Kennebunkport at the coming legislature.

He stands squarely upon Republican principles.

He is pledged to fight for a state boulevard for Old Orchard Beach to extend from Temple avenue at Ocean Park to the Dunstan Road at Pine Point. This would make the most picturesque highway on the Atlantic Coast.

He has also pledged himself to fight for an amended Sunday Observance Law, to compare favorably with the like laws of other states and one which will more suitably meet the demands of present day needs as well as one that can be enforced.

A vote for Percy N. H. Lombard and the straight Republican ticket means Protection for American Industries---Higher wages for the Working man---A national Highway Commission and legislative efficiency.

How Mr. Harding Conducted the Defense

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

"Mr. Harding," said Captain Wainwright, handing his glass to his first mate, "what do you think of that thing over there?"

"I think," said Harding, "that it is one of those devilish Chinese pirates that infest these waters."

This dialogue occurred on the American tramp steamer North Star in the Java sea, a region dreaded by mariners for the villainous characters who infest it.

"What do you think of our chances in case they attack us?" asked the captain.

"That depends on our ingenuity. We can't sink them before they reach us. We'll have to prevent their boarding us if we can, and if they board us we will have to fight them for our lives."

"How can we prevent their boarding us?"

"By so manning the points they attempt to climb that they can't get on deck. One American sailor armed should be able to keep off three Chinamen from climbing a perpendicular ship's side. But excuse me, captain. I see that the villains are pointing for us; I must go below and order up the arms."

Harding left the captain peering at the junk. It was a small vessel, smaller than the North Star, but its deck was literally swarming with copper colored fiends ready for loot and murder.

It had no ordnance of any caliber; it had been armed and equipped by men who had no especial means to equip it, and, as Harding said, relied on taking such ships as it could overpower by boarding.

Soon after the first officer had gone below the men began to bring up guns, pistols and cutlasses and distributed them, with ammunition to fit, along the bulwarks.

"Where's Mr. Harding?" the captain demanded of one of the men. "What's he doing below when we're in peril for our lives?"

"He's in the engine room," was the reply.

At that moment a diabolical shout went up which diverted the captain's attention from the delinquent Mr. Harding. It was a bloodthirsty cry of triumph. The pirates, having come near enough to the North Star to make sure that she had no means of sinking her adversary, were in a very moribund state. Their junk was a tolerably good sailer, and the wind was fair to enable them to bear down on their enemy. The North Star, though a steamer, was a tub and could barely do seven miles an hour.

On came the junk, her murderous crew dancing and shouting and chattering and brandishing their weapons. The captain of the North Star was so terrified that he took no action whatever, but the second officer, Mr. Meiggs, was quietly arranging the men in groups along the bulwarks and giving them their orders. There were a few hand grenades in the stock of explosives, and Meiggs ordered them on to the fore-castle, where it was expected the Chinamen would attempt to climb the bowsprit chains, for the North Star was part steamer and part sailer. The crew was divided into two sections, the one forward, the other aft.

"Why are you leaving the ship clear for the devils amidships, Mr. Meiggs?" wailed the captain. "Don't you suppose they've got sense enough to come aboard where they have the least height to climb?"

"It's Mr. Harding's orders, sir."

"Harding's orders? What's he doing giving orders from the engine room?"

Again the captain's attention was distracted by a yell from the pirates, who were right under the North Star's stern. There was a volley from the men posted there, and a grappling hook that was thrown and caught on the gunwale was cast off.

Then the Chinamen were seen taking to their boats with the evident intention of stringing the fight out so far that the little crew of the North Star would not be able to keep them off from all points at once. A boat load of men well armed and with hooks and rope ladders attacked the stern, another the bow, while a boat was sent on each side.

At this time Harding, dragging a hose, and the fireman, dragging another, came up the companionway.

"What are you going to do with that?" asked the captain.

Harding had no time to reply in words, but he did reply in action. Two or three of the Chinamen had climbed up the unprotected port side, and one of them had a leg over the gunwale. Harding let drive at him with a half inch jet of steam from the boiler, and he went back over the side, doubtless glad to get into the cold water below. At the same time the fireman opened up on another party about to jump down on to the deck on the starboard side. Both Harding and the fireman, having cleared the gunwale, carried the nozzle to the side and, pointing the stream downward, gave a death scald to every one in the boats below. The bow and stern being well protected by legitimate arms of warfare and the sides being impregnable against a jet of hot steam, the pirates withdrew.

Harding, who had saved the ship by his admirable foresight and resource, became the idol of the crew, while all respect for the captain was gone. When the North Star sailed again from an American port Harding was her master.

When the Witness Scored.

Judge—"What is your occupation, my man?" Prisoner—"I am a bus driver, my lord." Judge—"You mean you are the driver of horses attached thereto?" Prisoner—"Yes, sir." Judge—"You are charged with hitting this man on the face. Did you do it?" Prisoner—"Certainly not!" Judge—"What did you do, then?" Prisoner—"I hit him on the nasal organ attached thereto."—Tit-Bits.

NATIVE LIFE AS LIVED IN HAWAII

WHERE DEVIL FISH, CRABS AND SEA WEED ARE EATEN RAW

A PEOPLE OF THE TOMORROW

Wants are Few, Easily Supplied and Living is Playing

(M. J. Brown, Courier, Oregon City).

The Hawaiian Islands are some old as to settlement and some older as to formation. One authority says they have been inhabited since 500 A. D., and a scientist says the islands' formation are of "comparatively recent date."

And this "comparatively recent" reminds me of the statement of a professor who was viewing the grand canyon of Arizona when someone asked him how old the big ravine was.

"Comparatively recent," he replied, "it has not been there over ten or twenty million years."

And so with the Sandwich Islands. You may have several million years to play on as to when they were upheaved from the Pacific, and the matter of when they were first inhabited leaves plenty of room to guess, yet there is much to prove that human beings were living on these Pacific dots as soon if not sooner than in North or South America.

In an hour one can go from hustling Honolulu back into the interior, where the black people live in their primitive huts, and it seems like standing on the age of a thousand years and looking backward.

Captain James Cook found the islands in 1778, and previous to that there is no reliable history. Cook added much to history, for when the natives tired of him they killed him and ate him. History doesn't relate the cannibal part of the deal, but many a Hawaiian will tell you it is so, and until someone digs up his bones and shows there is yet meat on them, I am going to take legends and yarns for it, and believe that up to about 1800 the Hawaiians preferred roasted man to fish, and that they were cannibals; that like nearly all the south sea islanders, they ate human flesh.

Cook got in bad. I judge from his name he was a Yankee, and he had to start something. When he landed the natives accepted him as some sort of a deity and they did things right for him. It was a case of "Welcome to our City," and King Kamehameha spread himself with presenting the navigator with the best of the land.

Written history tells us very little of Cook's death and the reasons for it. It says he violated "tabu" and royalty had him killed.

To "tabu" was to reserve something for the big chiefs. Certain birds were "tabued" and their feathers could only be worn by royalty. This applied to almost anything the ruling families wanted, from certain kinds of food to certain fair Polynesian damsels, and the penalty of violation was death.

Whether Cook hadn't read up on the code or whether he tried to establish himself as law, history does not state, but legends have it that he copped out a pretty "tabu" maiden, took her to the ship and in several ways set aside the ancient statutes.

The natives supposed the whites bore charmed lives and that they had to let the captain run things, but the Hawaiian story goes that a sailor died with fever and the natives saw him buried. Later they dug him up and found him just as dead as any dead black man. Then they tried a few spears on Cook, one day when they caught him out in the open, and found he was easy killing. Then they ate him, but preserved his bones. A monument is erected where the assassination occurred, and it is said his bones are buried there. Hawaiians say they are buried in one of the old temples.

But to jog up about 135 years. One morning I started early for a hike over the mountains, stripping down to the lightest of clothing, for it was very hot. It did not look like very much of a climb, but it was over 2,000 feet, and every step over uneven lava formation, and before I had reached the top I thought I would drop with heat and thirst. Not a breath of air stirred and the torrid sun beat down on that stone mountain something awful. But I knew at the top were cooling breezes and I stuck it out.

And I found them. No sooner had I gotten over the crest than one of those mountain mist storms met me—almost hail. These storms gather every hour or two somewhere in the hills. They are just little handfuls of coldness and moisture, covering but a few acres. In no time I was wet and shivering. Such a sudden change would suggest danger, but I had been told that very seldom any ill effects followed so I hit the trail to get warm as I had climbed to get cool not twenty minutes before.

Tourists are warned to stick to the trails and not go on exploring expeditions, for there are many dangerous cracks concealed by foliage, and the vegetation in the jungles is so dense one can easily become hopelessly lost.

But I wanted to get out of that rain. Down a valley, only half a mile away the sun was shining, and there was something like a path. I made for it. Half way down I saw the white roof of a grass hut and when I reached it there, sitting on mats in front of it was a family of natives, father, mother, a girl of about twenty and a boy of six or eight.

They smiled a welcome and offered me a seat on the mats. I was very thirsty and made a sign, when the girl in fairly good English asked if I wanted drink or food, and when I told her water she brought me a drink of pineapple juice, and later on insisted that I have a dish of poi.

The home was a typical old Hawaiian hut, made of thatched grass, windowless, with an opening at each end like a tent, and running to a high peak. The natives can cover a limb framework with grass in such a way it will thoroughly prevent leakage during the rainy season, and they will last for many years. The interior is almost devoid of anything but some bunk frames and a few utensils and the families only occupy them when it rains.

The father and mother were typical Hawaiians and did not speak English. The mother was large and fat, with hardly any clothes on, and she lay there on the mat and half dozing. The girl was handsome as Hawaiians

OLD ORCHARD CHAMPS TRIMMED BY CAMP GROUNDS.

A large audience turned out last Monday afternoon to see the game between the Old Orchard aggregation and a team composed of other young men from the campground section. The Campground boys got the jump on the other team in the early part of the game and at no time after the third inning did the game seem in doubt. Briggs, pitching for the novices, did excellent work with 12 strike outs to his credit. Another feature of the game was the hitting of W. Clifford, a former Bowdoin College star. For the Old Orchard team Young and the Maguires did excellent work. From Briggs' delivery four hits were made and from opposing pitchers 16 hits were secured. The final score was 12 to 6 in favor of the Campgrounds.

BIG FEATURES FOR PIER PATRONS THIS WEEK

The pier management, after persistent efforts, has secured two of the highest priced acts ever produced on the Pier, for the last three days of this week. There will be but two acts but they are better than any three. The Napoli Trio are musical, and everyone fond of good music should not fail to attend at least one of the performances to hear them. Augusta & Diana will introduce something novel to the Pier patrons.

The movies, which are changed every day, continue to please all, especially the outdoor show, which goes on while those who prefer it, trip the light fantastic in the casino. The floor was never in better condition. The special features include the dancing exhibitions by well known artists on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, the Amateurs on Wednesday, the Grand Ball on Friday and the Prize Hesitation waltz contest on Saturday. This prize contest is developing keen rivalry among the contestants, which are growing in number from week to week.

Sunday afternoon and evening there are special feature films shown in addition to a concert by the celebrated Philharmonic Orchestra which has delighted the Old Orchard summer visitors for a number of years.—Adv.

go. Very dark, thick lipped, black eyes, long straight black hair. She wore no shoes or stockings, a dress only to the knees and sleeveless, yet she sat there cross-legged like a tailor and was as much at ease as a society belle at an afternoon tea.

And the young lad—he wanted to be noticed. And from somewhere he brought out his surprise—a kid's three-wheeled tricycle. Long ago it had been thrown onto some civilized junk heap by some young American who had worn it out. The wheels were all out of shape, the rims full of dents, and the frame so twisted the machine could hardly stand alone. But the boy proudly displayed it, pointed to the empty

Bull Durham tobacco sack he had tied on the handle bars, and then he gave me an exhibition heat. He had smoothed off a little incline about a rod long down which he would ride and tip over.

This young savage trotting out that tricycle in this unexpected out-of-the-way spot, decorated with a tobacco sack, struck me as about the most unusual sight I ever saw.

The girl told me she had sold flowers and hat bands in Honolulu, but it was too hot to sit on the streets all day, and she had rather stay at home.

I asked her if there was anyone who could guide me farther up the valley? She talked with her mother for a few minutes in Kanacka, and I had hoped that she would take the job, but evidently mamma said "Nay, nay, Pauline." She said her brother would be back soon, but I knew what soon might or might not mean, so I ate some poi, gave the boy some change and went back to the trail.

Poi, with fish, is the native food. It is made from a root much like an Irish potato. They dig it, dry it and then pound or grind it into a coarse flour. From this they make a gruel, and the Hawaiians eat it with their fingers.

The native Hawaiian doesn't work much—he doesn't have to. He can almost reach up and grab a living. He can catch fish anywhere there is water—and they say with the bare hands. The taro plant (from which poi is produced) will grow anywhere where the soil is scratched; the bread tree hands down its fruit; the alligator pears and the many other fruits and vegetables grow almost without cultivation; so the native can eat his fill, hunt a shade where the mountain breezes will cool him and lie there until it is time to eat again.

It is indeed a land to dream in, for he who seeks the simple life and wants to stay as long as he can. With a tropical sun most always on the job; with tropical vegetation, shrubbery, flowers and fruit growing in profusion; with no other season than spring; with a soil so fertile that it is only necessary to cover the seed—what more does a native want than to eat and lie down, wake up and eat again? There is no filling the woodshed with cord wood or the cellar with coal; no telephone, electric light or milk bills; no box rent dues, no rent notices. It is the perfectly real "simple life," where one simply marks time until old age, in the natural order of things, calls him in.

There is very little work for the inland natives to do if they wanted to—and they don't. The Japs, Chinese and Portuguese do the work in the sugar plantations (the biggest industries of the islands), banana, pineapple and other plantations. They will work cheaper and harder than Hawaiians, and the natives can simply eat fish and poi and watch their land go over to the capitalists.

The great sport and recreation of the natives is swimming, surf riding, and fishing. No country on earth can beat them in water sports and swimming. Women are as happy in the water as the men, and almost as expert swimmers. They furnish great entertainment at the beaches for the tourists. With their boards they will swim out to the first breakers, get in front of a roller and ride in on it, many of them standing erect on the coasting board.

The native Hawaiians are fast disappearing, and today they represent but about 30 per cent. of the population of the islands. Honolulu has about 14,000 Hawaiians, 14,000 Japs, 7,000 Chinese, 6,000 Portuguese, 1,000 Koreans, 1,000 Porto Ricans, and the rest are a scattering few of British, Germans and Americans—excluding the standing army.

The disappearance is the result of marriage with other races. Many marry Portuguese and it is surprising how many of the small percentage of Americans, Englishmen and Germans here have Hawaiian wives. The natives are not considered as inferior—they are not looked upon as the American negro is—and they tell me they make industrious wives and splendid mothers. To be sure it is the better class of Hawaiians the white men marry—not the black, thick-lipped damsels—and I have found this class one which a man readily raises his hat to.

The Hawaiians are natural base ball artists, and I think McGraw could well afford to take a trip over to the islands when looking for new material. I saw a game between Hilo (pronounce it Hee-lo) and the Oahu (O-ah-who) that was about as good as any game I ever saw. They not only are natural ball players, but they know the ball game, know it and play it as the league teams do.

But here is something different—it may make you squirm a bit—and I would not advise reading it just before a meal:

I ran onto a bunch of natives fishing off the end of a little peninsula and after watching them a few minutes one of them pulled up a devil fish, a little octopus with eight or ten legs.

No sooner had the cuttle been landed when the several natives pounced on it, each cutting off a leg, the raw end of which they put in their mouths and greedily chewed, while the live and writhing snake-like leg would wind around their faces and poke into their eyes.

This is no cuttle fish story, it is literally true, and it was the most nauseating sight I ever saw.

The natives will catch the big salt water crabs, pull off their pinchers, run their thumb into their backs, push out a portion of white meat and eat it while it is yet alive.

Certain kinds of sea weed they search for and eat, and raw fish liver is considered a fine delicacy, in fact raw fish liver is always on the menu at the poi suppers put on for the tourists, but I have yet to find the white man who claims he could ever get by with it.

One of the reasons given for the great scourge of leprosy years ago is because of the eating of raw fish and sea weeds, and yet this is vigorously denied by the natives, who say it is a Chinese malady and was brought over by the Chinks.

Poi suppers are very popular with the tourists. They will give a native woman a certain sum of money to prepare it, and when ready the tourist will form a party and attend.

A young pig will be baked on hot stones. A hole will be dug in the ground, lined with stones, and a hot fire built. After the oven becomes hot, the fire will be raked out, the pig covered with tea leaves (a plant having seasoning qualities) covered over with hot stones, and then dirt covered over the pit. In two hours that pig is some eating.

The tourists take readily to the poi, and it is a part of the game to eat it as the natives do, taking the two front fingers, scooping up the paste and carrying it to the mouth.

Next week I will tell you something about the so-called lake of fire.

Tuesday was a fair sample of our September weather. If you can, remain in September and do not, you miss the most beautiful vacation month in the year.

Remember to swat the fly.

The great W. J. Burns is a visitor here. Recuperation only.

Only four more days to August, the business people are adding up and balancing their books. From every outside source comes the information that summer resort business on the whole has been very bad. Old Orchard, in spite of the very bad weather, has had a most excellent season. The reason is that Old Orchard is the liveliest resort in New England. Be on hand and stay longer next year.

And the Sea Serpent has yet to appear.

The length of the summer resort season is steadily growing. People who own summer resort property are now anticipating the week end parties that can be enjoyed in their cottages in the winter. If you are to build, build so that should you wish to get away from the city noises in the winter, you can come to the seashore and enjoy the sea air and quietness for a week or ten days in comfort.

Go to the Polls.

It's up to every voter, no matter what his political affiliations may be to go to the polls and cast his vote for the principles in which he believes. The poll is the franchise of American citizenship, it is the expression of right or wrong as the individual sees right and wrong. It is the expression of popular government. The individual who fails to exercise his franchise not only does himself an injustice, but the rest of the community in which he lives as well.

There are people so constructed that it is impossible for them to take a stand and remain stood so to speak. These are the kind of people who tell you what an awful good fellow you are to your face and then turn around to the next person and tell him all about your bad qualities. If you believe a thing don't be afraid to speak right out in meeting, for we venture that those whom you might criticize would have a greater amount of respect for your judgment if you did so.

Where do you stand?

Miss Emeline A. Dunn, president of the American Art Club of New York, is the guest of her sister, Miss Mary S. Dunn, at the Sevano cottage, corner of Atlantic avenue and Third street. Miss Emeline is a noted artist and since her arrival at Old Orchard has painted several beautiful views of Old Orchard and vicinity. Other guests include Miss Elizabeth Wilson, National secretary of Y. W. C. A., and Miss Nellie Cornell, principal of the Elwanger and Barry Primary School, Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. W. D. Munson of Portland is the guest of Miss Laura Z. Dean at her cottage, the "Minerva" on Union avenue.

CONCERNING Surf Echoes

AND THE

Old Orchard Mirror

¶ This paper, published every Thursday, aims to chronicle interesting local news, and to interest the summer visitor as well as the year-round resident. It is not affiliated with any special business interest and endeavors to be fair to all. It will impartially work for a bigger, better and busier Old Orchard.

¶ Contributions are desired, whether they are of a newsy nature, or a literary effort, or in the form of a letter of complaint. Whatever it is, it will be welcome and published in the Surf Echoes-Mirror columns. It is hoped, however, that any such communications will be as brief and to the point as possible for our space is limited.

¶ We would especially invite non-resident property owners to use its columns in criticism of their interests as they may appear in town affairs, and propose that the non-resident owner in criticising would offer a suggestion as to how any especial condition may be improved upon.

¶ If you are an advertiser, we beg to call your attention to the fact that this paper is read by almost every resident of Old Orchard and vicinity, and that its circulation extends to almost every New England town and city. It is the constant endeavor of the management to increase its circulation in every possible way.

¶ Perhaps the above is why its columns are used liberally by nearly every live advertiser of Old Orchard as well as Biddeford, Saco and Portland. If you do not advertise in Surf Echoes and The Old Orchard Mirror you can do so at a very small cost, considering its many advantages.

It will pay you to advertise
in this paper.

SOCIAL COMMENT.

Thursday evening a delightful house party was given at the summer cottage of Mrs. S. P. Dean on Cedar avenue, by her son, Carl, in honor of the Misses Audrey Willis and Millicent Ames of Hallowell who are the guests of Mrs. Dean. Contests, graphophone selections, magic tricks, whist and various other games were greatly enjoyed throughout the evening. Refreshments consisting of fancy crackers, cake and ice cream were served. A feature of the evening was the unexpected arrival of Mr. K. B. Bailey of Natick, who was very enthusiastically received, some of the neighbors thinking by the noise that Teddy Roosevelt had been invited and had just arrived.

A merry party of young people were delightfully entertained Friday evening at the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. McKenney by their charming daughters, the Misses Blanche and Bernice McKenney. The house was attractively decorated with Japanese lanterns. The evening was pleasantly passed, at games, contests and victrola selections, and between games the guests danced on the broad veranda. Violin selections by Mr. E. L. Hayward of Boston, were greatly enjoyed by all present. Refreshments of harlequin ice cream, fancy cakes and crackers, and confections were served by the hostesses.

A most enjoyable affair Saturday evening was the lawn party given by Mr. Ernest L. Hayward at the summer home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Hayward. The grounds were brilliantly illuminated by Japanese lanterns. Potato races, stump speeches, contests of skill and many other forms of amusement made the evening hours pass all too quickly. One of the most enjoyable fetes of the evening was the fish pond. The fishing proved to be fine as everyone secured a good catch, some of the young ladies being fortunate enough to find on the end of their hooks, scarfs, hand bags, vanity cases and other feminine filigree, while cuff links, scarf pins, tie clasps and souvenirs of Old Orchard comprised the gentlemen's prizes. Refreshments of college ices, cake and assorted candies were served under the beautiful pine trees. Mr. John Hayward, who acted as fire patrolman during the evening, deserves much praise for his heroic work in saving from destruction as many as two of the Japanese lanterns that had caught fire and but for his level-headedness would have become total wrecks. Those present were the Misses Gertrude York, Mary Grant, Honor McCourt, Blanche, Bernice and Alice McKenney, Audrey Willis and Millicent Ames. Messrs. Earle Bucknam, Harold Johnston, Robert Smith, Carl Dean, Fred Scruton and Edward McKenney.

Hon. Ralph F. Sturges, a prominent New York attorney, with his mother, Mrs. A. W. Sturges, also of New York, are stopping at their cottage on Highland avenue for a few days. They will spend the month of September at their beautiful villa at Blue Point, Long Island.

Mrs. G. A. Burnham of Haverhill and Mrs. J. N. Dirwanger of Portland are the guests for the remainder of the summer of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Burnham at the Ocean Rest cottage on Union avenue.

Hint to Budding Authors.

"So you got your poem printed?" "Yes," replied the determined author. "I sent the first stanza to Uncle Know-It-All's column, with the inquiry: 'Can any one give the rest of this poem?' Then I sent in the complete poem over another name."

Cheerfulness.

To the Tourist or Visitor

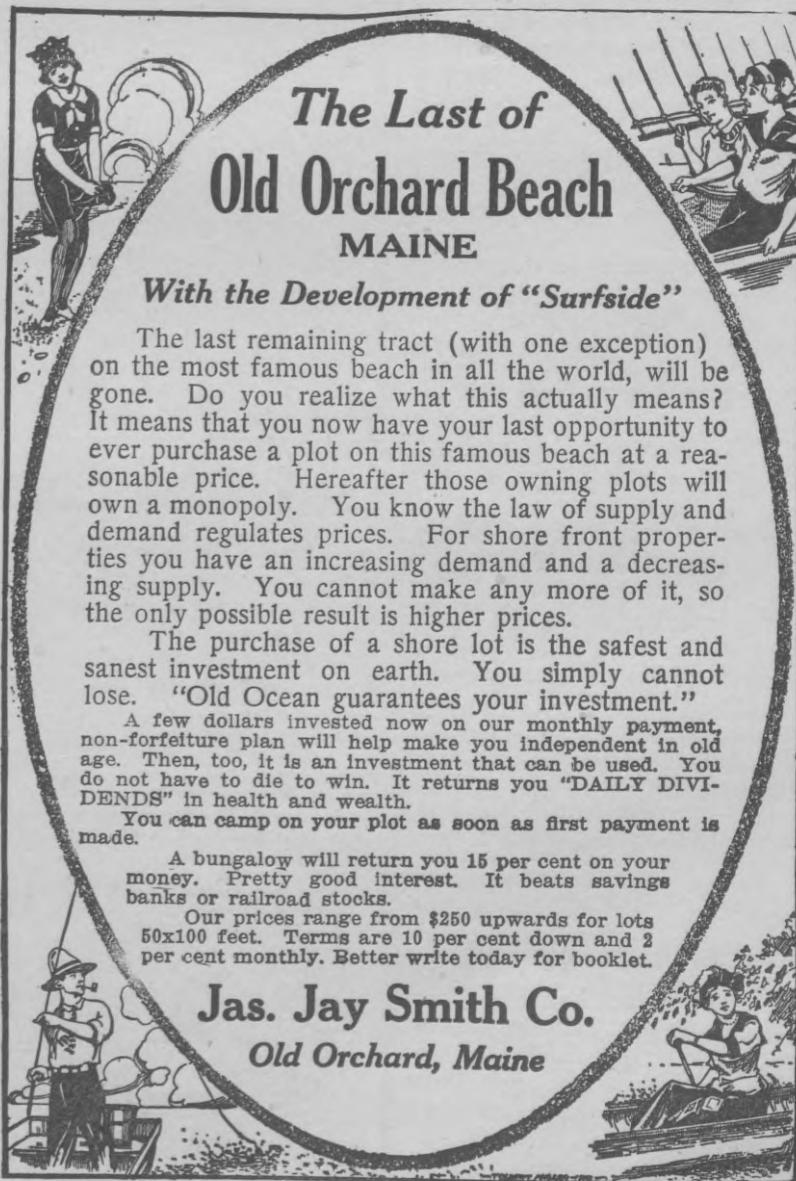

We invite you to come in and see our interior store decorations—carried out entirely with Birch Bark from the giants of the Maine Forests. Odorous shrubs and fir trees from the Maine woods. Hundreds of blossoming plants, elegantly mounted heads of our native Moose, Caribou and Deer, as well as countless birds of many species are all used most artistically, presenting a picture at once restful, interesting, instructive and most pleasing.

It is indeed pleasant, too, to shop in such an environment, more especially in a store which is modern in every sense, with merchandise of absolute dependability and a scale of low prices which have made this store Portland's popular shopping place.

The Last of Old Orchard Beach
MAINE

With the Development of "Surfside"

The last remaining tract (with one exception) on the most famous beach in all the world, will be gone. Do you realize what this actually means? It means that you now have your last opportunity to ever purchase a plot on this famous beach at a reasonable price. Hereafter those owning plots will own a monopoly. You know the law of supply and demand regulates prices. For shore front properties you have an increasing demand and a decreasing supply. You cannot make any more of it, so the only possible result is higher prices.

The purchase of a shore lot is the safest and sanest investment on earth. You simply cannot lose. "Old Ocean guarantees your investment."

A FINE TRIP FOR AUTO ENTHUSIASTS

Motoring Through Five States, and Seeing New York in Your Own Automobile.

In the beautiful summertime we made a trip through Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York by automobile. Many interesting places are seen when traveling by auto that are missed by other modes of travel. The beautiful scenery, the State roads of almost perfect smoothness, the clear air, the stretches of fields, mountains, and valleys, the towns and cities in the distance, then nearer, and finally, passed through and left behind,—the delightful freedom of it all— all combine to make an ideal outing.

We were a family party of five, and we made the trip in my brother's, Dr. Ralph W. Bucknam's large touring car.

There is a great similarity in New England cities,—a main street or streets, city hall, library, etc., differing only as the cities differ in size.

The New England part of our trip was as instructive as a course in American history, especially of the colonial period, as almost every town showed houses or statues, or slabs with inscriptions of historical interest. We were aided in finding and visiting these by the Automobile Blue Book and a United States Baedeker.

We started from our summer home at Old Orchard early one bright morning, going through Saco, Biddeford first, then on to Portsmouth, where we stopped for dinner. During the entire afternoon we had many miles of beautiful shore drives, smooth boulevards close to the ocean, splendid ocean views. We passed through Rye, Hampton and Salisbury Beaches into Newburyport. From here we had fine macadam state roads practically all the way to New York. We rode through Ipswich, with its quaint old houses, and Beverly, then on through Salem, Lynn, and along the Lynnway, through Revere Beach,—sometimes called the Coney Island of Boston,—Somerville, Cambridge, into Boston, where we spent the night. We visited again the library and other places of interest the next morning, and left Boston just after dinner, through Brookline and Weston, the home of many wealthy Bostonians.

At Sudbury we visited the old Wayside Inn, made famous by Longfellow's "Tales of A Wayside Inn." We passed next through Marlboro, which has the highest elevation of any Massachusetts city, and is the sixth largest shoe center in the world. Then through Shrewsbury, which is a quaint old town overlooking Lake Quinsigamond, and then we visited White City, an amusement resort, reaching Worcester just before dark. We stayed that night in Worcester, which, like Rome, is beautifully situated on "seven hills." Here is located Clark University. Leaving Worcester the next morning, we had a delightful ride through the beautiful Cherry Valley, on the old "Post Road," the original highway from Boston to New York, and we then descended into the valley of the Quaboag river, passing through East Brookfield, on the shore of beautiful Lake Lashaway, and West Brookfield with its quaint old tavern, built in 1760. This old Inn has entertained Washington, Adams, and many other distinguished people.

We next came into Springfield. Here are many interesting places to visit. The historic First Church, with its 162 years old weather-cock, the new public building with the beautiful clock tower, etc.

Leaving Springfield early one morning we rode through Longmeadow, whose wide streets and shady elms and broad green date back to 1644. Many fine old colonial houses, each with historic interest, are seen all through this region. We now came to the tobacco fields. They were just harvesting the crop. The fields were beautiful, the plants being from four to five feet tall and the leaves very large. The blossoms are pink clusters of bell-shaped flowers and are at the top of the plant. We watched the harvesters hang the plants on long poles, which then are fastened side by side, and hung in immense barns. Every other board in the sides of the barn is hinged and swung outward to allow the air to pass through, and this dries the tobacco.

For many miles the road took us through these fields, and we could see the harvesters cutting, hanging, and carrying the crop into the barns, which are as numerous, though not so large, as the ice houses on the banks of the Kennebec River in Maine.

We passed Warehouse Point, so named from its tobacco storage warehouses. Fine tobacco fields line the banks of the Connecticut River beyond. Through East Hartford, between rows of beautiful elms planted during the Revolution, over the nine span granite bridge over the Connecticut River, just at sunset, we came into the splendid city of Hartford.

There was so much to see, and so many places to visit that we remained here some time. Bushnell Park is entered through a handsome soldiers and sailors memorial arch. In this park the state capitol stands on an eminence. It is a magnificent building of white marble. The dome is 250 feet above the ground and is beautifully illuminated at night. The Colt firearm factory lies to the southeast, near which is the church of the Good Shepherd, a memorial to Col. Colt, and the Parish House, a memorial to his son. A million dollars has been left for the maintenance of these two memorials. The Parish House is well worth a visit. The hall on the second floor is finished in imitation, as much as possible, of a ship. In this hall are held all the parish entertainments. Hartford has seventeen parks, with a total area of over 700 acres.

Leaving Hartford we had a day of magnificent mountain scenery, along ravines, through valleys, around the sides of mountains, and close to lakes, with splendid roads all the way, making one of the most delightful and picturesque parts of our trip, with scenery rivalling that of a previous White Mountain automobile trip.

At Danbury we spent the night. Danbury is noted for its hat manufacturing. The next day we reached White Plains, N. Y., for dinner. Here we had first a clam chowder unlike any I had eaten before. It resembled very much our vegetable soup minus the meat. However, I did find a small section of one clam in my portion.

After dinner we proceeded to Yonkers, then past Van Cortlandt Park, into Broadway. It was a beautiful, clear afternoon, and we had a long, delightful drive beside the Hudson River, with the Palisades looming up on the opposite bank. We entered Central Park at 110th street, and followed the park drives to Columbus Circle.

As my brother, the doctor, has spent much time in post graduate work in New York, he knew just the best trips to take and the best routes. Broadway is dazzling at night with its millions of lights and moving electric signs. We rode up and down many times, both night and day, fascinated by its brilliance. It is rightly called the Great White Way. We spent a day at the Bronx, many hours in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, many more in the public library. We rode many times up and down the splendid Riverside Drive, visiting Grant's Tomb, Morningside Heights, etc. Trinity Church and Churchyard, St. Paul's, and the "Little Church Around the Corner," are interesting places.

Of course the skyscrapers interested us. The Woolworth building has 55 stories and is 750 feet high. The Flatiron building looks like a huge ship about to plow its way up Broadway. The Metropolitan Life Insurance building has the huge clock whose chimes sound every quarter hour. Ellis Island is an extremely interesting place to visit. The day we were there 2,100 immigrants landed. We wondered if they knew what was before them, especially if their lot was to be cast in the Ghetto. We were reminded of Mary Antin.

We visited the Aquarium at the Battery, and of course we visited Coney Island. We had supper there, and stayed to see the illumination. It was like a veritable fairy land. We had our first puncture in about the middle of Williamsburg bridge. It was not the easiest place to put on a tire, but my brother said it was better that it happened there than in the congested East side district.

One of our most interesting trips was the one which we took in the sight-seeing auto to Little Hungary, where there was a cabaret, and we had refreshments, then to Chinatown, visiting the Chinese Joss House, the Doyer street Mission, and the Chinese Delmonico, where we had dinner at about midnight. After this we rode through Little Italy. Later we saw one of the breadlines—a sad sight indeed.

The road laws are good in New York, and are enforced. The hand is held out at the side of the car, or truck or carriage, if the driver is intending to cross from right to left, or to turn out to pass car or auto. Many times autos are "held up" by the policeman or traffic officer. It is necessary to have a traffic officer at every busy corner, to "hold up" the traffic, first at one side, then at the other. A wave of the officer's hand is sufficient. One day as we approached a busy corner, the officer held up his white-gloved hand, and we stopped just at the edge of the cross street, and thus avoided a fire engine and several pieces of fire-fighting apparatus as they came swiftly around that corner. The center of the avenues is reserved for the fire department, ambulances and police patrol.

We left New York early one clear morning by way of the Bronx and passed on the old colonial Post Road, through New Rochelle on to Norwalk, Connecticut. The change from modern New York to these historic surroundings was very striking. We had two punctures between Stamford and Norwalk, so we spent a night at Norwalk. We followed still the old Post Road, visiting Bridgeport and next reaching New Haven, where we remained a while. From New Haven we went to Hartford, then to Springfield, had dinner there, and made Worcester that night. We left Worcester early in the morning by a beautiful drive along the Wachusett Reservoir for about six miles into Clinton, where there is a 70 foot dam. Then we followed the valley of the Nashua river into Harvard, then through Lowell, along the Merrimac river into Lawrence, and next day through Haverhill. Whittier's birthplace was visited and here we spent an interesting hour viewing the relics and curious old furniture and dishes which were used by his grandmother. We went from Haverhill to Newburyport, and from there followed the route back through Portsmouth to Old Orchard again.

If you are planning an auto trip after the season closes at Old Orchard, a part or the whole of this trip which I have outlined would be a delightful one for the September days.

Would Tax Women Who Marry Titles.

Should the bill introduced into congress by Representative Stanley E. Bowdle of Ohio become a law the incomes of American women who marry titled foreigners will receive a hard jolt. Mr. Bowdle proposes that whenever any citizen of the United States marries an alien bearing any title of nobility or aristocratic caste from any foreign government an internal revenue tax of 25 per cent shall be levied annually against the income of such a citizen.

Commenting on his bill, Representative Bowdle said:

"The rush for the ducal counter these days is immense, but my bill will serve to put some of the ambitious American women of fashion on the bargain counter. They will not command so high a figure as European spas. Parasitical titled idlers hanging around Newport and foreign resorts will view my bill with grievous alarm."

The bill created much favorable comment in the house and was treated seriously. Belief was expressed by some members that should it come before the house it would pass.

Mr. Bowdle is serving his first term in congress and is noted as the man who beat Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of Colonel Roosevelt, at the last congressional election. He is one of the leading lawyers of Cincinnati. Before studying law he served an apprenticeship in the machine shops of a big shipbuilding company at Philadelphia. He is a noted wit and brilliant orator. He is forty-six years of age and a Democrat.

The Price Paid For a Wife

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Father," said Paul Alexandrovitch, "will you not buy Tatiana for me? We love each other. Tatiana is a serf, while I am free. I cannot marry her unless her master will sell her."

"I fear, my son," replied the father, "that the count will not sell Tatiana. I have never been on friendly terms with him, he being a rich landowner and I a small farmer. Besides, there was that trouble about the woodcutting. No, I do not believe he will grant any request of mine. But I will go to him and offer him a good price for the girl."

That was a time when a large proportion of the Russian people were serfs. Paul and Tatiana had played together as children when the little ones of other nations were at school, for education of the lower classes has never been permitted in Russia, and after they were old enough to work they continued the intimacy. And now that they had reached a marriageable age the fact of Tatiana's slavery loomed up a great barrier between them.

Alexander, Paul's father, counted up the money that he might spare to buy Tatiana and found by straining a point he could gather 1,000 rubles. He went to Count Korloff and very humbly told him of the affection between the boy and the girl and asking him if he would not make them happy by selling the latter so that they could be married. "I will give them a slice off my farm," he added, "and, as for the price, I will pay you 1,000 rubles."

"I cannot spare Tatiana," replied the count. "The countess needs her to dress her hair."

The refusal came so curtly that the farmer dared not pursue the matter. He went away and told his son the result of his mission. Paul was crushed by the news, for in Russia the autocratic system has prevailed for so many centuries that the weak—until the recent revolution—did not think of resisting the strong. Paul told Tatiana of the reason given for refusing to sell her, and she said that she had never dressed the countess' hair.

Paul had a great many friends, and Tatiana was also much beloved. All the world loves a lover, and their case excited a good deal of sympathy. A few of those who heard of the case clubbed together to add to the price that Alexander could raise to buy Tatiana, and one of them went to the count and asked him if he would not fix a price on the girl. He was a very avaricious man, and, thinking this might be an opportunity to get a good deal of money for what was not worth very much to him, he replied that if 5,000 rubles were offered he would accept them.

An effort was made to raise 4,000 rubles, which was the amount required in addition to what Alexander could give. But there is no great wealth in Russia except among those connected with the government, and the subscriptions came in such small sums that the amount finally subscribed was far below what was required.

The matter looked hopeless when Paul went one day to do some work for one Mouriensieff, a well to do man of the middle class. In talking with Paul he learned about his love affair and how he and Tatiana were made miserable by Count Korloff's meanness. Mouriensieff asked Paul how much was lacking altogether of the fund to buy Tatiana, and Paul said that it was 1,600 rubles ($800). Then Mouriensieff told Paul that he would lend him the money at the legal interest and he could pay off the loan in eight years, or 200 rubles a year.

Paul accepted the proposition gratefully and sent word to the count that he was ready to buy Tatiana, paying 5,000 rubles for her. Count Korloff was astonished that so much money could have been raised for such a purpose, and it occurred to him that, after so much had been got together, a little more might be added. He replied that he had found a new use for Tatiana that made her much more valuable, but, since he did not wish to stand between her and Paul Alexandrovitch, he would complete the bargain for 5,500 rubles.

Paul's disappointment was all he could bear. He went to Mouriensieff with tears in his eyes to tell him of the failure.

"It would be of no avail," said the latter, "to continue to follow such a man up the scale of his prices. Let the matter rest for awhile."

Paul took this to mean that he would never possess the girl he loved and went away sorrowful.

A few weeks after this when Paul was working in a field a messenger from Count Korloff came to him and said that the count had decided to accept 5,000 rubles for Tatiana. Paul replied that he did not know if the money would now be forthcoming, but he would make inquiries. He did so and succeeded in collecting the necessary amount. But just as he was about to start with it to the count a man rode up to the house where he was and scattered printed copies of a ukase of the czar. Paul read one of them and threw his cap in the air with a shout:

"The Little Father has freed the serfs!"

And so it was that Count Korloff received nothing for Tatiana. She was free to marry Paul, and no wedding among those people was celebrated with greater rejoicings than hers.

THE WILLOWS.

Standing at the edge of the swamp, on the old farm is a clump of willows. How long since they first grew there I know not, but they are tenacious of life and if cut down soon spring up again, and, having been allowed to grow for some years, have now attained a good height. The willow is divided into many varieties, even an expert botanist would make a careful examination and, perhaps, would watch for a time its process of growth before classifying it, so far the purposes of this sketch the trees of which I write shall be the willows. Mournful thoughts are apt to be suggested at the mention of the willow,—the Hebrews in their captivity hung their harps on its branches and could not sing the songs of Zion in a strange land. The weeping willow is indeed an emblem of mourning, but the Master wept at the grave of Lazarus and our griefs are sacred whether they be manifested by outward signs or silently borne in the depths of the heart. Poets, in many instances, blend the gracefulness of the willow with the music of their verse,—I recall the lines of Wordsworth:

"The floating clouds their state shall lend
To her; for her the willow bend;"

and Lowell has written "Under the Willows." Geographically, these trees are natives of the temperate regions of the Northern hemisphere, and are much more numerous in the Old World than in the New. They grow mostly by the sides of watercourses, but a few high up in the mountains, and one is found nearer to the North Pole than any other shrubby plant. They vary in height from a few inches to sixty feet. They grow rapidly, and for the most part shoot readily from cuttings. But I will not wander far today, my thoughts shall now be of the willows by the swamp with their pointed leaves so graceful in the summer sun or dripping with moisture in a day of rain. And when the leaves have fallen and the cold of winter has come, after a sleety storm has cleared, the branches encased in ice glitter in the morning sun like jewels. On a rising ground near here the first settlers on the farm had their dwelling, and nearby is the well which supplied them with water—it is the best of water, too—pure, clear and cool. Between their house and the swamp was their garden wherein they grew vegetables and herbs. For many years among the willows grew bushes of black currants, last relics of the old garden, but at last they ceased to bear and apparently were gone forever; but last year there appeared again shoots of the currant which are still growing, some root underground had retained vitality enough to sprout up and once more they may grow where the first did more than one hundred years ago. But time is passing, the end of summer is nigh at hand, dear reader, may you in coming days have pleasant and sunny memories of summer at Old Orchard Beach.

A MISTAKEN

and listen to what I have to say.

Mr. Hamilton was young; the girl was very pretty. She had evidently mistaken him for some one else, probably her lover. Surely the likeness must be something remarkable. He was about to set her right when it occurred to him that he could do so a few moments later just as well. He stood looking at her without speaking.

"Do come, Bob," she pleaded. "I can explain the matter to your satisfaction if you will only listen to me."

Here is a girl, thought Hamilton, who has been maligned to her lover. He has got up on his ear and gone off in a huff. Quite likely I may be of service to her. He mounted the wall and entered the grounds. Still undecided as to just when he had better make himself known, he said nothing, acting a part that might mean that he was or was not the person the girl evidently mistook him for. She stood before him, her eyes moistened with tears, and told him a story of woman's malignity that astonished him.

He resisted a temptation to take her to his breast and assured her that her explanation was perfectly satisfactory. But while he was straining a point of honor in listening to a story intended for another he would be expected to bestow a caress intended for that other. He racked his brain for a subterfuge in order to avoid doing so, his intention being to take advantage of the girl's mistake to benefit her. Moreover, he believed he could serve her better in his present position than under his own identity. Turning to her, he looked her in the eyes with a reassuring, a kindly expression, and said: "I believe every word you have said, but there are reasons which I cannot explain to you why any outward reconciliation should not take place between us at present."

"There can be no other reason than that you have put her in my place and don't feel that you can be untrue to her until you have heard her reply to the charges I have made against her."

What luck! How kind of her to give him a far better reason than he could have invented himself.

"Nevertheless," he said, "it is only the form that needs to be observed."

"When shall I see you again?"

"Not till I hold every ace, bower and trump in the pack, including the jolly joker."

"Oh, what a relief!" she exclaimed, giving his hand a fervent pressure and looking up at him through tearful eyes.

He remounted the wall and dropped to the sidewalk. Turning, he saw her throwing a kiss, which his conscience permitted him to return in kind. Then, passing out of sight, he said to himself:

"By Jove! If I fail to bring the fellow round I'll lose my identity in his and do all the lovemaking myself."

Mr. Hamilton made the acquaintance of friends mutual to himself and the parties concerned, keeping himself in the background. Those who saw him were astonished at his likeness to Bob Mesereau, the recent fiance of Miss Lella Bartholow. Through them Hamilton transmitted his explanation. Unfortunately it came too late. Mesereau, unknown to Miss Bartholow, had been dividing his attentions between her and the girl who had traduced her and had gone too far with the latter to withdraw. He proved to be a weak man, and it is questionable if he dared withdraw. Her influence was strong enough to hold him.

Hamilton now considered how he could become Mesereau's substitute. He had found a Miss Everett, a bosom friend of Miss Bartholow, through whom he had sent his explanation, and with this lady he consulted. She fully exonerated him for the part he had played, and after the failure of her efforts to move Mesereau assisted him in extricating himself with the lady whom he had sought to benefit. Miss Everett volunteered to explain his action to Miss Bartholow.

All that passed between the two friends was never made known to Hamilton, but after a time he received a note from Miss Bartholow thanking him for his kind intentions toward her. Later Miss Everett went with him to call on the jilted lady, and when the latter saw him she studied his face, then admitted that she saw a difference, but was not surprised that she had not seen it under excitement.

Hamilton's first visit was not his last. He had surmised that his likeness to Mesereau would be an advantage with the lady. It proved the reverse, for she had turned bitterly against her former lover. Hamilton had not only to win her anew, but under this handicap. However, he succeeded in the end, the handicap being offset by Miss Bartholow's approval of what she was pleased to consider his honorable conduct when she mistook him for another.

BIRDS DESTROYING THE ARMY WORM

The army worm pest has come and gone. Fields of grass, corn and other grain have been blighted and destroyed, and human ingenuity has been tested in the effort to cope with the infliction. Doubtless the number of the worms and the injury caused by them have been exaggerated, nevertheless, great damage has been done in some localities in spite of all that could be done to check their ravages. A great quantity of poisoned bran was scattered about promiscuously, or sown in the trenches surrounding the fields. As a result, numerous army worms, many birds and some poultry were destroyed.

Entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture have recommended wholesale poisoning from time to time for cutworms and army worms. Others have followed them in this recommendation and the newspapers have published this means of defense far and wide. Nevertheless, this wholesale poisoning is unnecessary in the case of either army worms or cutworms as other methods may be used quite as effectively. Most State laws penalize the broadcasting of poisoned baits. Mr. T. Gilbert Pearson, Secretary of the National Association of Audubon Societies has already issued a warning against the wholesale use of poisoned bran and some of the newspapers have opposed it editorially, but without avail.

Nothing is more fully established than the fact that many birds from the domestic fowl down to the chipping sparrow feed on the army worm. While examining the recent invasion of these insects, I found the following birds feeding quite constantly on them,—the robin, bluebird, catbird, English sparrow, chipping sparrow, field sparrow, song sparrow, kingbird, red-winged blackbird, bronze grackle and cowbird. The brown thrasher, red-eyed towhee, flicker and several others were reported as feeding on the worms. These birds and the humble toad must have eaten great quantities, and in cases where birds were encouraged and where no poison was used, the results were plainly to be seen in the reduction of the army worm pest.

On my own farm at Wareham and on some neighboring places where about 75 nesting boxes for birds were put up last Spring, bluebirds were seen feeding on the army worms early in May. Other birds followed suit. No injury from the army worm was noticed during the season on my farm, and very little on the others, but 20 rods away the grass was eaten, and a quarter of a mile away the injury became serious, continuing over a considerable part of the town.

On a farm on the Island of Martha's Vineyard where poison was used freely, hardly a bird was to be seen and the owner admitted that the birds had been poisoned, while on the State game reservation, only a few miles away, where no poison had been used and where many nesting boxes and birdhouses had been erected, birds were plentiful, and the worms, although very numerous, had done little serious injury. The corn showed no noticeable damage. This may have been due in part to the hundreds of heath hens on the reservation and in part to the number of small birds as well as to the intelligent use of non-poisonous methods to check the pest. There was an abundant evidence to be seen on all sides that the birds were flocking to the defense of the fields. The warden thought that he had lost part of his oat crop, but he made no other complaint.

Vote for RCY N. H. LOMBARD FOR THE LEGISLATURE

Lombard's many good qualities and his wide experience make him the best fitted candidate to represent Old Orchard and Kennebunkport at the coming legislature.

He stands squarely upon Republican principles.

He is pledged to fight for a state boulevard for Old Orchard Beach to extend from Temple avenue at Ocean Park to the Dunstan Road at Pine Point. This would make the most picturesque highway on the Atlantic Coast.

He has also pledged himself to fight for an amended Sunday Observance Law, to compare favorably with the like laws of other states and one which will more suitably meet the demands of present day needs as well as one that can be enforced.

VOTE FOR PERCY N. H. LOMBARD
The Republican Town Committee.

On the great State Farm at Middleboro, where the pest had appeared in tremendous numbers, the Superintendent fought it without the use of poisons because of the danger to birds which were regarded as among the best friends of the farm.

It cannot be expected that our birds in their present numbers can entirely check such an outbreak as that of the army worm, but if we can avoid killing them by poisons and if we can increase their numbers they may be able to prevent the first increase which finally results in the overwhelming hosts that have attacked our fields this year.

THRU SEVEN STATES BY AUTOMOBILE

A FINE TRIP TO TAKE FROM OLD ORCHARD

Among the White Mountains, the Green Mountains, the Beautiful Berkshires, and Down the Valley of the Hudson to New York, Stopping at Many Quaint and Historic Towns.

Believing with Henry Van Dyke that "the object of a journey is not only to arrive at the goal, but to find enjoyment on the way," our last family automobile trip to New York was made by rather a round-about route.

To begin with, we went up through Bethel, Me., to Gorham, N. H. Indeed it was a long way, but a motorist does not mind going many miles out of his way if he can get better roads. The most direct road from Maine is by way of Portsmouth, N. H., but through York Beach, Wells, and Ogunquit, the road was reported to be in not very good condition.

The road by Bridgton and Fryeburg, Conway, Chocorua, to Rochester and Portsmouth, N. H., offers another way of getting out of Maine. The holes and bad places in the road to Bridgton and Fryeburg are apt to bring one to grief, but from Conway on, the road is excellent.

From Gorham we went by way of Randolph, Jefferson Highlands, to Lancaster, where we always enjoy life. This time, however, we passed only one night, and the next morning we went through Littleton, Lisbon and Whitefield. The roads are splendid through all this section, but it began to rain and about two o'clock we got tired of riding in the rain, so we stopped at the Maplewood, a small summer hotel at Orford.

The next morning proved fair and bright so we started on in good spirits through Lyme to Hanover. At Hanover is Dartmouth College, and we rode around viewing the campus and buildings. From Hanover we went to White River Junction, Hartland, Ascuneyville to Claremont, N. H. After dinner we went through Charlestown, crossing the Connecticut River to Bellows Falls, Vt., to Westminster into Brattleboro, Vt., for the night.

Brattleboro is a very pretty place, with Mt. Wantastiquet rising 1200 feet just opposite. Rudyard Kipling, who married a resident of the city, has a beautiful summer home here. Of historic interest is the location of Fort Bridgman, built in 1737, now marked by a granite monument. It was attacked many times by the Indians, the last time being in 1755, when after killing Caleb Howe, they burned it.

We left Brattleboro on a beautiful clear, warm day, and rode to Guilford, then across the Massachusetts state line to Bernardston, and then to Greenfield. Greenfield is at the junction of the Green and Deerfield River, not far from the Connecticut River. It was founded in 1714, and is a fine summer resort. The fields all around are a beautiful, vivid green. As we rode along we sang and enjoyed the sunshine and clear air for the entire day. We went through Deerfield to Northampton. Northampton is said to be "The book of beauty which Nature opens wide in the valley of the Connecticut." It is a lovely elm-shaded city. We visited Smith College here, the art gallery, library, music hall and gymnasium. From Holyoke a mountain railway ascends to the top of Mt. Tom, 1215 feet. It is a trip well worth taking. As we rode along down the valley it seemed that Mt. Tom followed us for many miles, the building on top with its gilded dome shining in the sunlight, was clearly seen very far away.

We went through Westfield, Lee, Lenox, to Pittsfield. Here and in the vicinity we stayed for several days, as there was much to see and enjoy. We were now in the very heart of the beautiful Berkshire country, with its sloping hills and broad green fields. The gentle, undulating hills present a marked contrast to the mountain sections, and are unsurpassed in loveliness. The Hoosic river flows to the north to join the Hudson, and the Housatonic river flows south, toward Long Island sound, while almost innumerable lakes and brooks add to the attractions of the valleys. Longfellow, Whittier, Bryant, Hawthorne, Beecher, and others have written praises of the Berkshire Hills, but they must be seen to be appreciated fully.

Pittsfield is in the heart of the Berkshire country, and has much of historical interest. The Appleton or Plunkett house on East street is the house where Longfellow wrote his famous poem, "The Old Clock on the Stairs." The clock is still in the house. Not far away Hawthorne lived and wrote, and also quite near is Holmesdale, once the residence of Oliver Wendell Holmes, the elder. The Rev. John Todd, who died in 1874, and who was the author of the well-known "Lectures to Children," was for a long time pastor of the Congregational Church.

Good roads and good weather made very enjoyable the trips from Pittsfield to Coltsville, where all the paper used by the United States Government for its currency is produced; to Lanesboro Village, where Josh Billings, the noted American humorist, lived and died, and where he is buried; to Constitution Hill, the home of Jonathan Smith; and to Cheshire, where in 1801 was made the Cheshire cheese which was sent to President Jefferson as a token of esteem from his admirers in the village and which weighed 1,235 lbs.

We left Pittsfield one beautiful morning, going first to Lenox, which is a fashionable resort. The suburbs of Lenox have many homes of wealth and luxury, and the surrounding hills have many large country homes. Leaving Lenox we went to Stockbridge by way of the Stockbridge Bowl, or Lake Hahkenac, a beautiful lake in a small valley surrounded by mountains. Lenox may be the most OLD ORCHARD.

A place of dreams, a place of rest, a place for health, and altogether one of the most desirable spots I have ever struck for both health of body and mental relaxation. Do you wish for utter quiet and peace? The little cottages and bungalows scattered some distance from the Beach will afford you that opportunity for complete repose for which you seek. If with that quietude you wish at times for a dash of gay life, take a walk along Main street in the evening light, the soft roseate hues of the setting sun mingling with the star-like rows of electric lights festooned across the street. Along this thoroughfare dash the autos. There, too, are tempting wares exposed, from every far off clime, imperial devices for the delectation of both young and old, games of all kinds for the sportingly inclined, from games of chance to exercises for both limb and muscle. Here is an El Dorado for the children, who with spades and shovels, throng the beach. A plunge into those green waves the best tonic for both mind and body. Amid the lonely walks through the odorous pines, many of us dream strange, sweet dreams, and build once more castles in Spain, as in the days of youth. Between the sea breezes and the cooling waves the dust and grime and worries of city life are swept quite away, and one returns to the battle with renewed powers for the struggle against wrong and with a revived faith that "God is in His Heaven. All will yet be right with the world." So farewell, Old Orchard. Much have I gained from thee and thy shores. My hope is that I may again revisit this charming place and hear again the thunder of the waves upon the beach; but if I come not, all pleasant memories of this summer go with me and will abide forever.

BLUE LAWS.

(Rev. A. Hamilton.)

It may not be inappropriate to consider, in the discussion of the Sabbath question, the so-called blue laws: a term, at times, applied to certain laws supposed to have been enacted in several of the New England states, but more generally limited to the laws of the New Haven colony. No one knows exactly the origin of the term. Many conjectures have been made. Perhaps that given by Professor Kingsley is as reliable as any. He thought the epithet "blue" was applied to any one who (in the times of Charles II) looked with disapprobation on the licentiousness of the times. It was natural that this title should be used by the colonists and applied not only to persons, but also to customs, institutions and laws of the Puritans. It does not require any wit or much wisdom to use this appellation. Those who desire to make a law ridiculous often show their own folly; for calling names and real argument are not near neighbors.

That a belief exists, even in these days, that there is a distinct "system of laws, known as the blue laws" having somewhere a local habitation, is evidenced by the occasional use of the term, but that such a code exists is denied. We are told that the only authority in its favor was Samuel Peters, who first described these laws and framed the traditions on this subject into his stories. Peters was considered notoriously untrustworthy. Without doubt these traditions sprang from the fact that the early settlers of New Haven were very strict.

Judge Smith, in his "New York Historical Collections," Vol. IV, published many years ago, bears testimony against the existence of the blue laws. I believe these "Collections" were put on record some fifteen years before Peters' history was published. He says: "Few there are who speak of the blue laws (a title of the origin of which the author is ignorant), who do not imagine they form a code of rules drawn up for future conduct, by an enthusiastic precise set of religionists; and if the inventions of wits, humorists, and buffoons were to be credited, they must consist of many large volumes." The author was one of the Commissioners who met in New Haven for adjusting a partition line between New York and Massachusetts in 1767. He had the curiosity while there to look up this matter. On inquiry he was given for examination "a parchment covered book of demiroyal paper as the only volume in the office passing under this odd title." There are some who suppose that the Sabbath law of Maine was taken from "the ancient Blue Laws" of Connecticut and incorporated into the Maine law.

The reason why the Sabbath laws are left on the statute books is not due to inactivity on the part of those who are opposed to them. Persistent efforts have been made, and are still being made to repeal them. The Lord's Day League of New England stands for "the observance of the Lord's Day as a civil rest day and a day for religious uses, defending it against the encroachments of business and pleasure."

To designate the civil rest day as a "Blue Law," or as a "bad law" reveals a peculiar state of mind, and suggests the old saying: "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!"

WOULD MAKE TUBERCULOSIS SANATORIA MORE EFFICIENT

Experts Show How Institutions Waste Effort and Offer Suggestions for Conservation

Methods by which tuberculosis sanatoria may be made more efficient through the employment of their "graduates" are discussed in a series of papers issued today by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in its official organ, The Journal of the Outdoor Life.

The papers by Dr. Charles F. Bolduan, of the New York City Health Department, Dr. Sidney F. Goldstein, of the Free Synagogue, New York, and Dr. David R. Lyman, of the Gaylord Farm Sanatorium of Wallingford, Connecticut, show that many tuberculosis sanatoria waste their efforts because they do not care for their patients properly after discharge. Dr. Goldstein found that in one sanatorium in New York, 52 per cent. of the work done was literally wasted. Dr. Bolduan's and Dr. Lyman's results showed some waste, but not nearly so large a percentage. The reason for these relapses is found both in the unsanitary home conditions to which the patient returns, and also in the industrial conditions under which he is forced to work.

Dr. Lyman says that the greatest present need in sanatorium treatment is early diagnosis, and that such early cases can usually return with safety and success to their former occupations after discharge from the sanatorium. For certain groups of city patients Dr. Bolduan and Dr. Goldstein favor working places where they can work at their trades under medical supervision and sanitary conditions.

Experiments of this character are now being considered in several cities. In Philadelphia, the Henry Phipps Institute has opened a small shop for some of its tuberculosis patients. In New York, the Joint Tuberculosis Committee will soon establish an open air clothing factory, and a similar experiment is also projected by the Joint Board of Sanitary Control of the Cloak and Suit Industry. The Delaware Tuberculosis Sanatorium is considering a hosiery mill for its patients. At Otisville, N. Y., in connection with New York City's Tuberculosis Sanatorium, an industrial colony is also being considered. A successful experiment in pottery making has been carried on for two years at the Arequipa Sanatorium in California.

In this the last issue of this paper for the season of 1914, the editor wishes to thank those who have helped to make the publication a greater success than ever before and especially Miss Annabelle R. Bucknam, Mrs. Lida Holmes, Mr. John Allen Guilford, and Reverend Alexander Hamilton, whose articles have helped so much in making the paper interesting to a wide circle of readers. It has been the constant endeavor to make the paper worth while, to interest the vacationist, and to use its columns for the advancement of Old Orchard without favoritism.

It is the hope that it has with some success served its purpose and that it has been the means of advertising Old Orchard as the liveliest popular shore resort on the New England coast.

For 1915 we beg to announce to advertisers and readers that the first issue will be in the last week in June and that plans are now ready to make that paper an improvement even on this season's issue and that we will try to make it a summer resort publication without a peer and a credit to the town.

Now smile, darn you, and show your pearly teeth. Yatta boy.

TO THE departing guest, a pleasant journey home. May good fortune dwell at your door, and here's to your return another year. We'll be waiting to greet you.

Some people hold the penny so close to the eye that they cannot see the dollar. Do you?

My, when did you get back? You're all tanned up.

PUBLICITY.

If there is one thing more than another which marks the difference between the Democratic and Republican parties—it is their respective attitude towards facts—information. The Republican party believes in publicity at every stage of legislative procedure. We have opened our party conferences to the public and the press. We believe the public always acts intelligently when it is well informed. Publicity is valueless unless it is based on facts. Legislation is not only valueless but frequently absolutely destructive unless based on accurate information.

The Republican Party believes in scientific government. It is in favor of a tariff based upon information, not theory.—From speech of Hon. Sidney Anderson, in the House of Representatives, April 26, 1913.

The Hon. Sydney is a man after our own heart. Publicity is the best "cure-all" for municipal, political or any public ill. It is the sunshine for better government.

VIOLATIONS.

There are yet several violators of the Town ordinances, especially those who persist in bill posting on the telegraph poles and those who continue to occupy the sidewalk with advertising matter and boards. Our Chief of Police should give some attention to these trivial things, which, however, do so much good.

CONCERNING Surf Echoes AND THE Old Orchard Mirror

¶ This paper, published every Thursday, aims to chronicle interesting local news, and to interest the summer visitor as well as the year-round resident. It is not affiliated with any special business interest and endeavors to be fair to all. It will impartially work for a bigger, better and busier Old Orchard.

¶ Contributions are desired, whether they are of a newsy nature, or a literary effort, or in the form of a letter of complaint. Whatever it is, it will be welcome and published in the Surf Echoes-Mirror columns. It is hoped, however, that any such communications will be as brief and to the point as possible for our space is limited.

¶ We would especially invite non-resident property owners to use its columns in criticism of their interests as they may appear in town affairs, and propose that the non-resident owner in criticising would offer a suggestion as to how any especial condition may be improved upon.

¶ If you are an advertiser, we beg to call your attention to the fact that this paper is read by almost every resident of Old Orchard and vicinity, and that its circulation extends to almost every New England town and city. It is the constant endeavor of the management to increase its circulation in every possible way.

¶ Perhaps the above is why its columns are used liberally by nearly every live advertiser of Old Orchard as well as Biddeford, Saco and Portland. If you do not advertise in Surf Echoes and The Old Orchard Mirror you can do so at a very small cost, considering its many advantages.

It will pay you to advertise
in this paper.

Why Rice Is Thrown.

The meaning of throwing rice after weddings as an auspicious sendoff to the happy couple is not far to seek. Inasmuch as rice is the most prolific of grains it has always and everywhere been regarded as emblematical of God's command to Adam and Eve, and after the deluge to Noah to increase and multiply, and replenish the earth.

A Daily Bath for the Eye.

A daily "eye bath" is an excellent means of preserving the sight and beauty of the eyes, and is particularly valuable for persons who motor a good deal, for nothing is more injurious to eyes than frequent contact with dust. Dissolve one teaspoonful of boric acid powder in one pint of rose-water. Every night pour some of the lotion into a glass eyebath, add enough hot water to render it tepid, and bathe each eye in turn by opening and shutting it in the lotion.

?? A PROGRESSIVE? ?

Gardner's Record.

Honest Progressives in Maine, and there are still a few of them scattered here and there, have not yet got over the shock which they received on learning that their candidate for Governor, Halbert P. Gardner, while a member of the State legislature in 1889, voted against woman suffrage, against the initiative and referendum, against the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people and was silent when an order for the investigation of giving railroad passes to State officers was killed in the senate. On the stump Mr. Gardner has tried to explain these lapses on the ground that he was fresh from the country and under the influence of Republican leadership, or he has dodged them by declaring he couldn't remember how he voted. Of course, nobody will deny any man the right to change his political views, but the thoughtful voter may well doubt if a man who forgets how he voted on certain important questions twenty-five years ago, or who admits that he voted the way somebody told him to on questions he did not understand, is just the sort of man to make a satisfactory Governor.—Biddeford Journal.

Glance around you and see who number themselves among the Progressives and see if their every act is consistent with their platform. In York county those so-called whose heads stick above the margin so to speak in our opinion are sadly deficient and may be termed disappointed politicians.

THE ROAD COMMISSIONER.

The road work in the town of Old Orchard has been for the past two years under the supervision of Mr. Harry W. McGrath and many good pieces of road have been installed. In the early part of this month work will be commenced on the new State Highway stretch between Old Orchard and Pine Point which will also be under the supervision of Mr. McGrath. He has already installed in the gravel pit a stone crusher which will make the gravel of uniform size and screen and it is his hope that the new stretch will make one of the best stretches in the State.

We are informed that pessimism is a chronic malady and that it is due sometimes to mental anguish and labelled disappointment or in other cases the direct result of a bad liver and general debility. A diagnosis under the first instance reveals the phenomenon of the village knocker—or the person so infected refuses to play the game because you wont play in his yard. In the second instance the result is generally the same only more so. Both, however, result fatally inasmuch as the person so infected becomes frayed around the edges, and the wreck in its final stage is called a "down and outer."

Force of Habit.

The telephone operator was spending the summer holiday by the bounding sea. On the first morning, however, she had occasion to berate the maid of the lodgings for real or imagined negligence. "Why didn't you call me as I told you this morning?" she demanded. "I did, miss," replied the maid with an injured air. "I called out 'Seven-thirty,' and all you ses was 'Number engaged.'"

Nautical.

It was in New York. The sea-faring man was steering a zig-zag course, yawing now to starboard and now to port. A young woman bound in the opposite direction sought to minimize the danger of a collision by making a wide detour. But the sea-faring man stopped dead. "Keep a straight course ahead, miss," he said gallantly; "let me do the tacking."

At an adjourned Town Meeting in June it was decided to hold an adjourned meeting in the early part of September, to consider the sewage problem on lower East Grand avenue. This meeting, it is stated, will probably be posted for the 12th or 14th of this month. Another item which will be brought before the meeting will be an article to see what action the town will take in providing arrangements for a suitable map of Old Orchard, and another article authorizing the Selectmen to take up with Mr. Henry Staples the proposition of a park on his sea frontage.

IRON WILL MAY FAIL

GREAT LEADER GETS HIS WAY BY OTHER METHODS.

Followers Must Be Shown That They All Gain Most by Yielding Implicit Obedience to the Conductor's Orders.

They tell us an iron will is a very fine thing. A great general rules his forces by his will. A parliamentary leader drives recalcitrant members into the right lobby by his will, if he has it. Napoleon, they say, controlled all France by his will. I have long had doubts.

Napoleon never had to get an obstinate donkey out of the way of an express train, for there were no express trains, but had the task confronted him I doubt whether the iron will that conquered France would have moved the donkey. Nay, I do not doubt: I am certain it would not. And since men are a great deal more stupid and more obstinate than donkeys I am sure it was not by an iron will alone that Napoleon ruled the French.

The iron will only served to rule himself to keep him hard and incessantly at the working out of his great idea, the idea of convincing men that he was the ablest among them, that by following him they did best for themselves. A political boss does the same; there is no iron will involved; merely he shows his followers that they all gain by going with him.

And the same rule holds true in the case of band conductors. A military conductor can get his way because the men under him are punished unless they obey him; an opera or concert conductor may get his way because he can throw out of employment the men who do not obey him.

But the true born conductor, either military or civil, gets his way and fine results when his bandmen know that by paying close attention to him and putting their backs into their work they help to secure performances of which they may all justly feel proud.

When Nikisch first came here many years ago we were told how on the continent he was wont to magnetize his men and make them insensibly yield to his will. It is likely enough they did yield; they would have been dismissed if they had not; but the magnetism did not in the least work in England. The men simply paid no attention to it; there might as well have been no magnetism at all; 'twas in vain Nikisch essayed to fix them with the glittering eye of which we had read so much; too much; the inhuman rascals refused to be fixed; the performances were poor and some one must have lost a fair sum of money over the concerts.

See what happened when Nikisch returned not as master but as servant of the orchestra. The Symphony orchestra engaged him; the glittering eye nonsense and the iron will nonsense were dropped, and at once artistic results were got. One might disapprove of many things he did, and especially of his affected readings, but he gained the effects he wanted, and gained them in a legitimate manner, through the faith the men had in him. —John F. Runciman, in the London Saturday Review.

OLD GRAVES SACRED

CHINESE ARE EXTRAORDINARILY CAREFUL OF THEIR DEAD.

Reverence Carried to an Extreme in the Yellow Country—Case in Point Shows How Obstinate They Can Be.

Better strike a Chinaman than step upon his ancestor's grave. They are finding that out to the great detriment of industry and agriculture all over Cathay—for the Chinaman will simply not allow a railroad or a plow to pass through what he suspects is the dust of one of his honorable forbears and there is no condemnation law in China to force him to sell the graves.

The instance of the Russian railroad from Harbin to Port Arthur, which made a 26-mile detour to avoid the ancient Manchu tombs at Mukden, has been often cited to show the expense and trouble that may arise from this cause. This was many years ago and there seems to be a popular idea, even among old foreign residents of China, that the going for the "right of way" men and the builders of railways is much easier now than then. As a matter of fact, since people are dying right along and the number of graves increasing as a consequence, it is very doubtful if conditions are not becoming worse rather than better. The Chinese have accepted the railway as a convenience in transportation, not as a destroyer of their beloved graves. They have shown the greatest readiness to patronize it once it is built, but they never have ceased, and never will cease, putting obstacles in the way of a line that disturbs so much as a single isolated ancestral resting place.

Many of the foreign educational institutions of China have been years acquiring the land for their grounds—principally on account of graves—and the blue print maps of some of their holdings reminds one of the drawing of the original "gerrymander" congressional district in Massachusetts. The Canton Christian college, in South China, has a striking monument to the obduracy of a solitary grave-holder in the form of an upright cylinder of yellow clay in the middle of its basketball field. Not the desecrating touch of the feet of the hated "foreign devils," not the turmoil of the mad games that surge around it, not even the fact that its elevated crest is occasionally utilized by an irreverent student as a coign of vantage from which to toss a goal, has led the old woman that owns it to accept the generous offer made her by the college authorities for her little "six feet of soil." Her husband used to sleep with all the babies crying, she says philosophically, and it is hardly likely that a little noise will trouble him now. He will let her know through the priests when he is disturbed and until then she knows that he will rest better where he is. Of course, the obvious thing for the college authorities to do would be to pay a visit to the geomancers and arrange that the old lady should be instructed that the "fengshui" decreed that her late husband would rest quieter in some other place; but as "subtlety" of this class is hardly in the line of a Christian institution, it is not unlikely that the strange looking cylinder of yellow clay may star the campus basketball field until the game old lady is herself numbered with her ancestors.

WILDWOOD FARM.

If you were a summer visitor at Old Orchard and were so inclined some pleasant afternoon to stroll toward the Cascades you would walk out on the Portland Road not quite half a mile before turning into the Cascade Road. The road here begins to ascend and if you were not above the average pedestrian by the time that you reached the top of the hill you would think it time to rest for a while and you make your plans accordingly. Coming to the crest of the hill you are very pleasantly surprised by the beautiful outlook over Old Orchard and the ocean while nearer at hand the advent of Mr. George A. Murch the Porter Farm. Mr. Murch came to Old Orchard a few years back and bought the farm which he has greatly improved and extensively cultivated. A glimpse of the long rows of plants will cause you to ask the nature of the field and what the crop will be, and you will be informed that the field contains potatoes, over eighteen acres of them, and that some of the rows are nearly a half mile long. And the expectation is that when the field is gathered the yield will be nearly five thousand bushels. That amount is "some potatoes" and by using your imagination you can make many interesting com-are given and then realize how incomprehensive your mind has been about a farm. But you again become aware of considerable gaiety from the buildings and Mr. Murch informs you that they are some of his guests who are about to go to the beach and then you learn that Mr. Murch is catering to a few guests and boarders each year and he tells you that this season he has entertained people from New York, Washington, D. C., New Jersey, Ohio, Massachusetts and Canada, and that during September he anticipates several automobile and week end parties.

The time has passed very quickly and you decide that you have seen you note a large old farm house with lots of shade trees about it and between you and the house acres of planted ground springing up with varieties of farm truck which you may or may not be able to name at a glance, depending upon your knowledge of country life.

The house in the distance is Wildwood Farm, which was until parisons. But the field of potatoes is not all; there are two acres of sweet corn, an acre of cabbages, another acre of general garden truck, a field which has already yielded over forty tons of hay, and still another patch which will eventually become five hundred bushels of oats in the bin.

You marvel at the figures as they a sight quite as good as the Cascades may have been, and so without further ado you decide to return to Old Orchard proper feeling that you have had a very delightful afternoon and knowing at least that you have learned much which you did not anticipate and have had an excellent glimpse on one of Maine's famous potato patches.

IN THRIFTY BELGIUM

LAND WHERE THERE ARE PRACTICALLY NO PAUPERS.

How the Government Has Aided Prosperity—Always a Little Something Put Away for Days of Old Age.

Across a narrow sea from England is a little country which, though densely populated, has practically no paupers, nor do the people emigrate. This is thrifty Belgium, where there is thrift of the individual, thrift of the family, co-operative thrift, national thrift, and prosperity in the face of the keenest competition of its powerful neighbors, England, France and Germany.

The government, instead of paying old age pensions and dispensing charity, has machinery for the encouragement of thrift and thereby for the prevention of dependence. It pays the individual interest on his savings, it insures his life and it will give him an annuity if he saves to pay for it.

In the government savings bank deposits may be made in every post office of the kingdom and in all the branches of the National bank. The minimum deposit is one franc. There is no maximum. The government provides in a special way for those who cannot put aside so large a sum as a franc at a time. It authorizes smaller deposits by postage stamps in order to encourage school children, farm laborers and the like; and rural postmen carry with them the necessary forms for this purpose, and urge the public to make use of the savings bank in this way.

Life annuities may be contracted for at all branches of the savings bank, at all branches of the national bank, at all post offices, and at the offices of all tax receivers. The minimum payment that may be made is one franc, and the smallest annuity paid by the fund is one franc, while the largest is 1,200 francs. The annuities become payable at the end of each completed year from the age of fifty to sixty-five.

In addition to the annuity fund there is a government insurance fund, the management of which is under government guarantee. Life or endowment policies may be contracted for, the latter payable at the end of 10, 15, 20 or 25 years, or for a period ending at the ages of fifty-five, sixty or sixty-five.

This policy has instilled ideas of thrift in the minds of the school children, it has driven thrift into the household where the income of the husband, or of wife and husband combined, is rarely spent, and in most cases a liberal margin is left for the future. The people live within their incomes. "Our income," they say, "is so much a year; we must live within it and put away something for our old days."

Among English speaking people, this is the habit: "We must have this and that and go here and there, and so we must bring our income up to that mark at all hazards."

But the Belgian household enjoys contentment and awaits with patience a larger income before buying this and that and before going here and there; and they do not try to keep the pace set by those whose means are greater. The observer sees on every hand men and women still with the freshness of youth, who have retired from active, bread winning work and are enjoying life on the capital saved by reasonable economy. They have lived wisely—neither slaves nor prodigals—and their declining years are provided for.

Use of Olives and Olive Oil.

The use of olives and olive oil is becoming so country wide that any new uses of these articles are received in all quarters with an inconceivable degree of acclaim. The housewife has learned to know its healthful qualities far better than many of the people that are natives in the countries where the olives are grown. In cases where the olive oil is used for frying of meats or vegetables if the piquant tang is desired to be modified it is best to let the oil come to a boiling point before putting in the materials which you wish to fry.

This will keep the oil from penetrating the meats, etc., and thus there will be less of the taste which it takes time to acquire, but which when acquired will be a hard matter to "discarnate" or discarnare as the Latins are wont to say.

Tabooed Thirteen.

One of the department stores has something like thirty elevators. If you have any doubt that New York is superstitious, go take a look at the north side of this great shop, where the first group of elevators is ranged. The numbers go from 1 to 12 without a break. Then comes the jolt, for that next number is something which must be got over with tact and delicacy. The manager has solved the difficulty by making it 130, which is decorously followed by 14, just as if nothing had happened.

"Nobody'd ride in it if it bore its own true number," said he, with a grin. "We tried it. The women would give a look up at the sign over the door and then sidestep to the next car. But you never can find a person who will admit he has a superstition."

A Fan's Opinion.

"Do you expect universal peace?"
"Yes, but not until the base ball season is over."

The New Hydrocycle.

First came the bicycle, with which all are familiar. Next came the motorcycle, clipping it through the streets at terrific pace—the power being supplied by a mysterious box under the rider's seat, which gives the machine its name. Now comes an inventor at Oakland, Cal. E. Frey, with a new machine called the hydrocycle, which is a motorcycle designed to run on water. Mr. Frey has long since won recognition in mechanical contrivances—his new gas engine, now in general use, demonstrating the fact that he is something more than a mere dreamer of dreams. His hydrocycle has three wheels, which are floated by two air tanks located in the center of the machine. Rudders for steering are attached to the tanks on either side, and are controlled by a small wheel placed between the handle bars. The third or extra wheel is in the rear—the three wheels being in line or tandem. The rider's seat is located between the first two wheels while the third wheel in the rear is supplied with ten paddles on either side, which extend six inches beyond its rim and so reach down into the water. The hydrocycle is thus a motorcycle, propelled by a third wheel carrying paddles at the stern.

fashionable resort, but Stockbridge certainly is one of the loveliest villages. It is said to be a village which "sleeps along a level plain just under the rim of the hills." Here we saw the old Sedgewick Mansion, the site of the Jonathan Edwards house, and, in front of the Congregational Church, the Bell Chime Tower, erected by David Dudley Field, to the memory of the old Indian Mission and his deceased grandchildren. There is also a pretty park given to the town by Cyrus W. Field.

We rode from Stockbridge over Monument Mountain, up "Jacob's Ladder," having a splendid view of the surrounding country. As we rode down into the valley which has the picturesque town of Great Barrington in its hollow, we admired the beautiful hills and vales on every side. The main street is shaded by splendid old elms. Here is the Searles Mansion, with its beautiful grounds. We stopped here at the famous Berkshire Inn, and after dinner we visited the old Henderson House or Bryant Cottage. It is just back of the Inn, and is interesting to visit. Burgoyne was held a prisoner here in 1777, and William Cullen Bryant was married here in 1821. He was the town clerk for several years. The Berkshire Inn is shaded by fine old elms. The following is on a printed sign tacked to one of these trees:

THE VOICE OF THE ELMS.

"Caesar saw fifty, we an hundred years;
Still green a hundred more, we'll stand like sears,
And watch the generations as they go
Beneath our branches in their hurried flow."

The office and reception hall of the Inn contain interesting historical curios. One day we visited the beautiful Italian Gardens at Brookside. The place is well worth a visit.

The day we started on our way from Great Barrington was exceptionally clear, and we enjoyed riding over the splendid roads through Egremont, across the Massachusetts state line into Connecticut, through Salisbury, around Lake

Wonosco into Lakeville. Just beyond Lakeville we passed the New York state line, then on through Millerton, Amenia, to Millbrook. We now passed through Washington Hollow and Pleasant Valley, past many fine estates, over splendid macadam roads to Poughkeepsie. This city is 200 feet above the river, and from here we had a splendid view of the Hudson, and the hills on the other side of the river. We visited Vassar College the next day, and were very courteously shown through the different buildings. The college is a town by itself, having its own post office, store, laundry, etc. We went from Poughkeepsie to Wappinger Falls, to Fishkill Landing. From there we went over to Fishkill Village, passing Matteawan. We thought we would ride around the spacious grounds of the prison, but a sign outside a huge closed gate read, "Automobiles not allowed," so we went on.

We came next to Peekskill, a pretty little town, then to Ossining, which was formerly Sing Sing, and which has the large state prison. The prison is a low, white structure, close to the water's edge. Tarrytown was next visited, and here is the center of a district rich in reminiscences of the Revolutionary War. The old Dutch church was built in 1699 with bricks brought from Holland. It is in "Sleepy Hollow," which has the Pocantico, or Mill Brook across which Ichabod Crane rushed from the pursuit of the "Headless Horseman." The "Sleepy Hollow" cemetery is an interesting place to visit. Near Tarrytown is the beautiful estate of William Rockefeller, called Rockwood Hall. We passed the monument commemorating the capture of Major Andre here in 1780. At Tarrytown we enter on Broadway, 23 miles from Columbus Circle, New York City.

We next visited "Sunnyside," the home of Washington Irving, at Irvington on the Tappan Zee.

Along here on both sides of the road are fine estates, among them Lyndhurst, one of the Gould estates. As we ride down the shore on the eastern side of the Hudson, we reach next Dobb's Ferry, a picturesque little town with fine views of the northern end of the Palisades on the opposite shore. At Yonkers we saw the old Phillipse Manor House, said to have been erected in 1682. Next is Spayten Duyvil creek, and as we follow the east bank of the Hudson, we have splendid views of the river and palisades all the way.

We ride now through Washington Heights down into the Riverside drive, and so on to Columbus Circle. We had taken much more time on the way than we had planned, but we had seen so much that was interesting and enjoyable that we found it worth while.

After twelve delightful days in New York City, we returned through Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and so back to Maine again.

Shadows.

"Could you sing that song about the twilight when the flickering shadows softly come and go?" said the sentimental youth. "Sir!" exclaimed the lady at the piano. "I don't approve either of the current fashions in gowns or of the promiscuous references to them."

Thought on Patriotism.

It is to be feared that the patriotism of this day has but little regard for such common things as individual economy and providence, although it is by the practise of such virtues only that the genuine independence of the industrial classes is to be secured.—Samuel Smiles.

THE SABBATH A DAY OF PECULIAR PRIVILEGES

(By Rev. Alexander Hamilton.)

The day was especially set apart to be honored. "God blessed the Sabbath day and sanctified it." The physical design is connected with a spiritual purpose. Sabbath rest does not consist merely in ceasing from work. If so God and His Son are Sabbath breakers; for they are ever at work. Mere cessation of toil is not the essence of Sabbath-keeping. The day was designed for holy uses. It is lawful on the Sabbath day to labor for the glory of God and the good of man. If we do not spend the day in higher and holier activities we are Sabbath-breakers. A gentleman was in a store on a Monday morning when he heard one of the clerks say to the other: "I slept all day yesterday." "I worked all day," replied the clerk addressed. "Then which of you went to church," put in the gentleman. "Neither of us, I guess," replied the first clerk. "You ought to go to church," exclaimed the man pleasantly, uncertain whether the remark would do any good. To a great many people sleeping all day would seem nearer the idea of Sunday as a rest day than working all day. A good nap on Sunday may be a wholly justifiable course to some people. Tired nature must have its refreshment. It has, however, truly been said: "The man who sleeps all day on the Sabbath, with never a thought of God, Bible, or church, is simply a slumberous pagan, essentially Philistine in tone and aim." The supreme object of the day is to hold communion with the Creator. It was instituted for the purpose of worship. Rest from labor was commanded that man might cease from every other occupation to hold communion with God. The body needs rest: the soul needs worship. The day affords the opportunity for both. Full public worship is practically impossible on any other day. It is not a day to lounge about, to yawn, to spend listlessly and stupidly. If it was a day simply for pleasuring it would not have been made for man, but for some men. God is just as much interested in the toiler on the Sabbath day as for those who find pleasure as the result of his labor. Such an observance of the Sabbath as will conserve the interests of humanity, promote the health, happiness and moral nature of man, and develop his religious instincts is the only way to please God. Any other use of it is a violation of the law of the Sabbath. The late Bishop Andrews uttered these strong and true words: "To keep the Sabbath in an idle manner, is the Sabbath of oxen and asses; to keep it in a jovial manner, to see plays and sights, to be at cards and entertainments, is the Sabbath of the golden calf; but to keep it in surfiting and drunkenness, in chambering and wantonness, this is the Sabbath of Satan, the devil's holiday."

When we are pleading for a better observance of the Sabbath we are pleading for man—for every interest of his nature. It promotes the health, happiness, holiness and safety of the people. Are we ready to surrender these benefits? It hardly seems necessary to say, for it must be clear to every man who thinks, that he who violates the law of the Sabbath, and teaches, either by example or word, that its observance is not binding is the enemy of mankind. He may pose as a philanthropist, and hypocritically talk of the weary laborer, and his need of recreation, &c. &c, but all the same he is the greatest foe of the workingman, and of all the race.

Our Lord has shown us how to observe the day. From a child He spent it in the synagogue, in communion with God, and in doing good. He would have us joyful which is infinitely superior to being jolly. "This is the day which the Lord has made; we will be glad and rejoice in it." The original Sabbath was set apart for the benefit of man. It was presented to him as an institution peculiarly adapted to his needs. By it rest is secured and opportunity for holy activity which serves to check his inordinate worldly desires, subdue and restrain his passions, and help him to be more like God.

VALUE OF BEACH RESORTS.

Development Deserves Mention, Doctors Think

For many years the north continental Europe have given consideration to the development of seaside resorts. Americans rarely stop to realize the extent to which the possibilities of these numerous localities along an extended and varied coast line have been recognized and developed abroad with a combination of business tact and hygienic insight. In this country the exploitation of the seashore has been left largely to chance.

The number of seaside resorts in Prussia has grown from 31 in 1880 to 156 at the present time; in Germany as a whole, with its comparatively small coast line, there are today 184 localities in which the possibilities of the seaside are publicly developed in some degree.

The good that is accomplished in the way of promoting health, enjoyment and recovery from disease by the modern development of the seaside as a climatic and institutional agency is undoubted.

"One wonders," says the Journal of the American Medical Association, "whether there is not a far greater opportunity for the development of some of our own natural coast resources for the public welfare than has been assumed heretofore. The aim should always be to reach every group of our population, so that the less favorably situated as well as the more opulent might reap at low cost the advantages which a favorable climatic location has vouchsafed. Even if the seashore hobby were worshipped like a fetich, it could do little else than good; for whatever encourages the outdoor life of our people amid a hygienic environment is likely to be wholesome."

OUR GREATEST BANKERS SAY—The war and the settlement of our financial situation will give this country its greatest boom in history.

Merely a Surmise.

"Your honor," said the counsel, "this man's insanity takes the form of a belief that every one wants to rob him. He won't allow me, his counsel, to approach him." "Maybe he's not so crazy, after all," murmured the court in a judicial whisper.

Remember that the pictures are changed every day, and there is an indoor and outdoor show. The dancing floor is the finest in the State. If you are fond of fishing it will be possible for you to continue to fish from the end of the Pier, even though the entertainment season may close.—Adv.

BAGGAGE REPORT.

The local baggage-master, Mr. George W. Goss, who has held that position for a number of seasons, has compiled the following figures as regards the receipt of baggage at the local station. During July there passed through the baggage room 6,103 pieces and for the first twenty-two days of August there had been received 8,868 pieces. In comparison with figures in an OLD ORCHARD MIRROR for 1904, the increase in receipts for baggage exceeds those of that date by fifty per cent.

A USEFUL BOOK.

The new Maine Register for the coming year has just been received at our office. This book, starting as a small manual of 370 pages in 1870, has grown in size and merit with each succeeding year, until the present edition gives a book of 1070 pages, every page filled with information concerning the State of Maine. Mr. Grenville M. Donham of Portland has compiled the book annually for over forty years and the edition of today shows the result of his careful work in every page. It is a book which no man doing business in Maine can afford to be without.

WENT IN SOME HASTE

IN HIS PAJAMAS DOCTOR RESPONDED TO CALL.

"Joke" That the Physician Must Have Greatly Enjoyed—And All Wife Wanted Was for Him to Take Her Home.

How a prominent Indianapolis physician—recently a visitor in Chicago—answered a hurry call from a patient clad only in a heavy overthrown over his pajamas and his slippers, and instead of finding supposed patient was confronted with a hilarious party of his own friends, told here at the Auditorium hotel the physician himself.

"Yes," the Indianapolis doctor began, "I believe I hold the record for being the brunt of the practical jokes. Listen to this tale and if you don't agree with me:

"To begin with, my wife is a bridge whist enthusiast, while I myself would rather go to jail than to a card party. On the night in question we had both been invited to a friend's home to play bridge. She—my wife—went and I staid at home. Clad in my pajamas, with a sweet old meerschaum in my mouth and my feet poked close to a blazing log in my bedroom fireplace, I settled down to read a new detective story which I had bought a day or two before.

"Along about ten o'clock I grew sleepy. I closed my eyes almost unconsciously and my chin fell on my breast. How long I would have dozed that way before the fire I don't know, had I not been awakened by a frantic ringing of the telephone bell in my office room.

"I blinked once or twice and hurried to answer the call.

"Hello!" came the voice through the receiver, 'Is this Dr. P—?'

"Yes," said I.

"O, doctor, won't you hurry up to my house? This is Mrs. Thomas. My baby is terribly sick and I don't know what is the matter, or what to do. Please hurry, doctor."

"It was rather cold out of doors, but I was in a hurry. Mrs. Thomas was a friend of mine and of my wife. It was at her home that the bridge whist party was being held, but I did not remember that in my haste; I threw my overcoat over my pajamas and went to the shed when I kept my runabout. There was a heater in it and as I had not more than half a mile to ride I thought I would be able to withstand the cold. So I started, my coat collar turned up, no hat and the automobile running on high speed.

"As I came near the house I noticed many lights and I thought that truly the baby's illness must be serious. When I pulled up at the block at the curbing I jumped out and ran into the house, never pausing in my hurry to ring the bell. It was perhaps a case of life and death, I thought, and in such cases we physicians never pause for formality.

"Just step in here a moment, doctor," spoke Mrs. Thomas, who met me in the hall.

"I thought it rather strange that I was not taken right to the patient, but I went into the room she indicated and sat down. I was indeed a unique sight for the eye. My hair was sticking up all over my head and at my throat my pink pajamas showed an inch or two and below my overcoat they showed a foot. I had on brown leather house slippers, and between them and my pajama bottoms showed a couple of inches of bare skin. I was a sorry looking sight, I admit.

"Suddenly four electric lights in a chandelier in the middle of the room shone brilliantly, and I heard what sounded like laughter coming from a hundred maniacal persons. In reality, there were only eight of them, but they were maniacal, all right. The first person I saw was my wife, and she was laughing so that tears coursed down her cheeks. The others in the party were literally doubled up. My wife, when she could control her laughter, said:

"John, I wanted to get you over here in the machine so that you could take me home. But I didn't think you would come without your clothes."—Chicago News.

Vote for PERCY N. H. LOMBARD FOR THE LEGISLATURE

Lombard's many good qualities and his wide experience make him a safe bet to represent Old Orchard Beach and Kennebunkport at the coming legislature.

He stands squarely upon Republican principles.

He is pledged to fight for a state boulevard for Old Orchard Beach to extend from Temple avenue at Ocean Park to the Dunstan Road at Pine Point. This would make the most picturesque highway on the Atlantic Coast.

He has also pledged himself to fight for an amended Sunday Observance Law, to compare favorably with the like laws of other states and one which will more suitably meet the demands of present day needs as well as one that can be enforced.

A vote for Percy N. H. Lombard and the straight Republican ticket means Protection for American Industries---Higher wages for the Working man---A national Highway Commission and legislative efficiency.

Puzzles for Patients.

Although the patient had waited half an hour for her interview with the doctor the time had not dragged. "I worked on one of these puzzles," she said. "By the way, doctor, you are not a children's specialist; then, why do you keep so many puzzles in your reception room?"

"You answered your own question before you asked it," the doctor said. "I keep them to amuse the grown-ups. Most people who feel bad enough to visit a doctor can entertain themselves better with a puzzle than a book or magazine. Every puzzle that has achieved popularity in the last 25 years has a place in that cabinet. Dentists also rely on puzzles to keep waiting patients in good humor, for even toothache will share attention with a good puzzle."

Importance Recognized.

"Do you think that man fully appreciates the importance of the office to which we have elected him?" said one constituent.

"I guess he does," replied the other. "The first thing he did was to say it ought to command a larger salary."

No Second Violins for Her.

A social leader at Narragansett was arranging for a musicale, and called a local "professor" into consultation.

"I think," he said, "we'd better have two first violins, two second—"

"No," said the prospective hostess, "I wish to spare no expense. Let us have only first violins, if you please."—Philadelphia Ledger.
